Answers to common questions about dog bite incidents in Northglenn.

Based on Northglenn Dog Bite Lawyer by McCormick and Murphy

Q: What should I do immediately after a dog bite?

A: Seek medical attention right away, even if the bite seems minor. Infections can develop quickly. It's also important to identify the dog and its owner, get their contact information, and ask about rabies vaccination status.

Q: Why is seeing a doctor important after a dog bite?

A: Dog bites can cause infections that develop quickly. A medical record created immediately after the incident is also critical evidence for your case.

Q: What information should I try to get from the dog owner?

A: If possible, identify the dog and its owner, get their contact information, and ask about the dog's rabies vaccination status.

Q: When should I report a dog bite to Northglenn Animal Control?

A: You should report the bite to Northglenn Animal Control if the dog is a stray or if the owner cannot be located.

Q: What kind of photos should I take after a dog bite?

A: Take photographs of your injuries and the location where the bite occurred. This documentation is important evidence.

Q: Should I talk to witnesses?

A: Yes, if there are any witnesses to the dog bite, get their contact information. Their testimony can be valuable.

Q: Who should I contact after a dog bite incident?

A: You should contact a dog bite lawyer before speaking to any insurance company. A lawyer can protect your rights.

Q: Can a minor dog bite lead to serious problems?

A: Yes, even minor-looking dog bites can cause infections that develop quickly and require medical attention.

Q: Is it important to document the scene of the bite?

A: Yes, taking photographs of the location where the bite occurred can serve as important evidence for your case.

Q: What if I don't know the dog owner?

A: If the owner cannot be located, you should report the bite to Northglenn Animal Control. It's also crucial to seek medical attention and gather any other available evidence.

Q: Why shouldn't I talk to the insurance company right away?

A: You should contact a dog bite lawyer before speaking to any insurance company. An insurance company's goal is to minimize payouts, and they may try to get you to make statements that harm your claim.
