Notes

The songs given on page 9 are those best known at this date June 30th 1892. Other songs and exercises have been taken up during the year, but were found to be too hard, or else the children grew tired of them and so they were dropped. Among songs learned were Christmas and Easter Carols which have also been dropped. Of the Soprano singers Eliza Brackett, Kate Brundage and Nellie Downs have done the best work, and are the only girls capable of singing Solos or taking part in a duet. The other three, Lillie Byrne, Lizzie Rausch, and Mary Pierce have light voices and not pleasant voices when heard alone but they can carry a part with the rest and so are quite a little help. Bertha Kenrick is the only alto that can be depended upon, and she is often contrary, so the person leading class has to be ready to lead the altos at any moment lest that part be left altogether. Hollis Doggy is the only one of the tenors capable of singing a solo or taking a part in a duet. The others sing quite indifferently together i.e. they do not clash on one another but their voices are hardly settled and it is hard to tell just what to do with them. Of the bass singers Oscar Holmgren, Joseph Pinkerton and Wadsworth Raymond have the best voices and Oscar Singer Solos quite creditably. Wadsworth fairly well while Joseph has just made a beginning. Ethelred Dean has a heavy voice but cannot be depended upon to sing alone, and the other boys do not try as their voices have only just changed and are rough and unpleasant.

Notes

Several songs not given on pages 17 and 18 were learned during the year but laid aside as the children grew tired of them, while old songs of a year or so ago were called for and relearned. Considerable attention has been paid to solo work, and three children who have never dared let anyone hear their voices alone have gained confidence in themselves, namely Sidney Peterson, Edyth Rose and Charlie Lockwood. Edna and Charlie however have outgrown the little class and will have to be placed with Junior singers another year.
Charlie Lockwood's voice has been changing rapidly the last few months and he has been doing no work of late. Andrew Hostetler and Grant Dennis will probably have to be dropped out of singing classes for a year or two for unlike Charlie Lockwood they seem to have lost control of their voices altogether. Charlie's voice is not pleasant, but is becoming more settled. Florie Lloyd and Albert Mason have been making attempts at solo work but will not sing before strangers. As a class they have all been pleasant to work with, and have enjoyed their little songs.

Chapel Music

The chapel music for the last year has been worked up Sunday afternoons and Thursday evenings. All the children in school that could sing whether members of singing classes or not, have learned these songs. The songs used for chapel number 53. The nos. will be found on flyleaf of Gospel Hymns and Songs for Little Folks Quarked - Piano.

Notes

The class this year has been much larger than last, and much time has had to be spent with new pupils, in teaching them to sing the different parts. Comparatively few new songs have been learned outside of the two operettas "The Court of King Christmas" and "The Gypsy Festival". Much time was spent in learning new choruses which both classes sing. During the latter part of the year the classes were together at least one evening every week to sing the choruses worked up separately. The class sustained quite a loss in Oscar Holmgren, Wadsworth Raymond and Joseph Gibson as bass singers. That part has been weak. Ten songs for male voices & have had Charlie Dickson sing bass as his voice has been changing steadily deeper. Many of the boys singing tenor have fairly good voices, so the high notes are hard for them to reach. Some additions were made to our soprano ranks, so & changed some of the soprano girls of last year to the alto - girls who had shrill similar voices on the higher notes.

Notes

The songs given on page 28 are those best known at this date June 1893. More time has been spent this year with this class as with the larger class on Reading than choruses and on working both spiritual than on teaching songs specially adapted for little children. Several new songs have been worked up, some of which they sing now, but those taught at the beginning of the year have been dropped. All chapel songs and choruses given are as well known by this class nearly as by the larger. The color and shape of both Spiritas are pretty well known by every boy and girl in class, excepting Albert Affrich and George McGraw. These two boys have been known to give musical tones, and were placed in class with the hopes that more could be developed. Myrtle Smith has quite outgrown the little singers this year as physically as a singer she is not the equal of some others in class. Henry Ebbing has improved more than any child in class I think. He is capable of singing a solo or of carrying a part well, though continual practice is necessary to keep him up on the latter. Ida Ebner's voice remains sweet but does not grow any stronger. Several of the Kindergarten children were glad in class at trial but were found too restless to do any work worth while and were detrimental to the order of the whole class; so these were taken out until a year or so more had passed by. Some of them will probably have grown old enough to become members of class another fall.

Notes.

Sunrise & Why does he tarry so long were used in the Christmas Concert as were The Birthday of a King and Bye Baby bye.

Quite a few of the old songs have been dropped & the music of several of last years songs has been lost.

Of the Soprano's Ida has the best voice & learns the easiest.

Kates voice is inclined to be a little sharp but when she learns a thing she is a good leader.

The other voices are not good solo voices & depend on these two Bertha Renick and Carrie Beardsley are the most independant of the altos. Berthas voice is harsh when she attempts to sing high but her alto is very good when she will sing. She has stubborn spells & then will not sing at all.

Ellen A. has learned one song by her self but she does not sing it well.

Nellie Sloggy and George Gilderman lead the tenors. Nellie has the sweeter voice but he cannot always be depended on.

Ray Downey and Etienne Dicau lead the Bass.

Etienne's voice is strong and his musical ear good.
