Betsy Anderson.

Betsy has learned to say a number of words by hearing the other girls read.
She can say a part of "At the Cross"

Alma Barnes.

Alma commenced at the first of "Harpers First Reader" and read to the bottom of page seventy four.
She reads well and pronounces almost all the words very distinctly.

Cassie Bear.

Cassie read to page one sixty three in the third reader. She reads very slow but quite well.

Mary Barrett

I can say that Mary is failing all the time.
She used to read and write very nicely but now she reads very slow and cannot pronounce the words as readily

In writing a letter she cannot think what she wants to write and it will take her one hour to write three or four lines.

Christie Hinnie.

Hinnie reads and writes just about the same as before. She has finished No 3. "Seaside and Wayside Reader"

Mary Emmett.

Mary commenced at the first of No 3. "Seaside and Wayside Reader" and finished it.

She improves in her reading and writing all the time.

Bertha Flatten

Bertha read to page one sixty three in the third reader from the first.

She pronounces her words more readily than she used to.

Hattie Jancka.

Hatty commenced to read in the "Harpers First Reader" October and read to the bottom of page one twenty three.

Her voice trembles when she reads but I think she controls it much better than at first, so she has improved in her reading.

Mary Botha.

Mary commenced at the first of the third reader and read to page one sixty three.

She has improved both in her reading and writing.

Marguerite Donohan.

Marguerite has been in school two weeks.

She reads in No 3. "Seaside and Wayside Reader."

Susie Morgan.

Susie commenced at the first of the second reader and read to page one eighteen.

She has improved quite a little.

Tina Nishimura

No improvement.

Mary Barr.

Mary reads in the "Seaside and Wayside Reader" No 3. She reads very nicely.

Selma Raymond.

Selma commenced at the first of the second reader and read to page one eighteen.

She pronounces her words more distinctly and reads more rapidly.

Agnes Ryan.

Agnes commenced at the first of No 3 Seaside and Wayside and finished it.

She improves in her reading and working all the time.

Hannah Russell.

Hannah has finished No 3 Seaside and Wayside. She reads and works very nicely but just the same as last year.

Mary Smith.

Mary commenced at the first of the first reader and read to page seventy five. She pronounces most of her words very distinctly.

Mary Ann Slaven.

Mary Ann read from page three to page one eighteen in "Appletons Second Reader"

She can read very well and writes a little. Mary writes a part of her lesson every day.

Lulu Treadewell.

Lulu has learned to spell pat. cat. dog and boy. She would forget these from day to day, but the last two weeks I think she has learned them so she will remember them.

Eva Towns

Eva sews the perforated cards work with the peg tile and strings the beads correctly. Or here the pegs are in the board then she can place the beads over them. Orange beads on an orange pegs etc
