Father

Father, It's hard to admit my sins you know
I can't tell you I've hurt you. I can't stand your woe.
Why do you cry raindrops? Is the moon your thumb?
When looking at your life, my sins seem rather dumb.
For every time I hurt you, a tear escapes your eye.
And though you say nothing, your eyes keep asking "Why?"
"Why do my children hurt me? Why do they pain me so?"
Father please, I love you. I just didn't know!
"My child, I'm not crying pain now. I'm happy, you can see."
But still the rain falls: his tears were shed for me.
Like the blood in the garden, the anguish on the cross.
Father, I'm sorry: my words are at a loss.
For when your day has come, and your spirits traveled high.
Will you be able to look into His face: Or will you now… Cry

In Loving Memory
