Subject: Closing the dunes

To Whom It May Concern:

I have been reading about the pending closing off of Oceano Dunes. I cannot believe that action would be taken without further studies are conducted.

Many areas in California have air quality issues due to vehicle omissions. I live in the Central Valley where the air quality is horrible. There are various pollutants that add to the issue, the worst being car emissions. The more the population increases, the higher number of bad air days we experience. We also have "valley fever". This is caused by blowing dust. It happens when the wind blows. You can't stop that! Do a lot of folks here die from it? It affects mostly the compromised.

We look forward to visiting the dunes numerous times a year. We have brought family and friends there for years. In that time we have seen the access restricted down to just a few hundred acres. It breaks my heart to think that one day we will no longer enjoy an area we have grown to cherish just because people don't want dust particles in the air, which will be there long after we are removed from the beach.

Think about the impact of what you are proposing. Give it more time before you ruin something that we will never get back. It would be like closing Disneyland...

Thank you,
