Respiration Is More Important Than Recreation!

Riding vehicles across the sand may be fun, but breathing is essential. Inhaling dangerous particulates shortens life. That is a fact. Serious scientific research has definitively shown that vehicle traffic over the dunes significantly increases the level of dangerous particulates in the air. Particulates permanently lodge in lungs and cause many serious illnesses and death. This is an avoidable situation.

Although I would prefer that all vehicle traffic be restricted from our precious coastline, I understand compromise may be in order. Please consider the reasonable restrictions that have been proposed that will have an immediate positive impact. There are many other areas in California that afford this type of recreation without the very serious health concerns, as well.

Do the dune riders realize that their actions are directly responsible for causing people to suffer serious illness and premature death?

We can't hold our breath waiting for healthful air.

Thank you for your thoughtful consideration,
