I have been going to this place for years. It's the only beach I can drive onto with my family set up my tent and enjoy a weekend relaxing the worries away. My kids love the beach. They actually go play in the sand while we hang around my other friends company who drive from the other half of California.

We only see them once a year there because it's a hallway point that just fits perfectly for everyone. Waking up to the sounds of the waves crashing and watching sunsets there is amazing.

What are these actual results that cause a park to close. What are the actual numbers that are caused by the crowds drawn into the camp areas or dunes? Is it really the reason it needs to be shut down? Who do I need to vote out of office if it does close? You fail your job you are out. This is what makes people travel into areas like this.

We always clean up our camp. We come with trash bags and drive up to the dumpsters every trip. We clean up thrash each time we visit. The last thing I need is to lose a place that I visit because it a threatened by trash or our carbon footprint.

If this place closes then we start looking for other places to explore, which could be more impactful to the environment. For my kids future please do not close the park. Thank you for your time.
