To whom it may concern

I have been a long time beach goer, not only to the dunes but also the shops, gas station, and of course the great eateries. I have watched the park shrink to a mere shadow of itself. I have also seen the property values skyrocket where a blue collar worker can no longer afford the price of land let alone a small modest home. Hotel rates are very high also. So my family first started coming to the beach and sleeping in a tent. Next was a three wheeler. Nice affordable fun for the family. In time we could afford a trailer, now that's the way to get out of the blowing sand. Speaking of blowing sand, it has always blown at Pismo. That is how the sand dunes got there in the first place. Air born particulates come from the sea and the blowing sand. Please read the studies which have been published and provided by people wanting to stop the choking down and yes eliminating access to the dunes.

Parks were established for the people of this nation to go and enjoy. I've been going to this park for forty years and have seen first hand the growth of the five cities. Now people are complaining about dust being kicked up by atv's and other OHV. This is like the people that move next to an airport and complain about the noise. If you don't like blowing dust and sand, don't move to the beach.

But let's get real here this all comes down to money and influence. Follow the money. Money from large cities, move to the five cities to retire. Now they complain about dust. Idea, let's get together and rid ourselves of the cause of it, in their minds, the OHV. But remember the dunes and the dust and the OHV we're there before them.

What surprises me is that the stores, shops, convenience stores, gas station, atv rentals, trailer sales, and the like has not been heard from. These guys have a big stake in the continued success of this region. I would like to hear their voices.

But alas it comes down to who has the large right. The right of the citizens of the State of California, remember tax payers, or the rights of a few, in comparison to the state as a whole.

Thank you for reading through this rambling to the end. You have the facts provided by the people who want to keep it open for the citizens of our state and other states and the few who want to close it.

Regards

Steve.
