

Meditation on Genesis 37-50

By Bev Kilts

God continues weaving His Design through the ancestral line of our promised Messiah and in these chapters makes an abrupt shift in pattern as the narrative moves from Mesopotamia into Egypt. These chapters can hold their own as a dramatic narrative in literature filled with hatred, deception, injustice; faithfulness, forgiveness – the pages read like a novel, but they're not. It's simply the story of God working in the life of a faithful servant – Joseph. Joseph, favored by his father and deeply resented by his brothers, is sold by his brothers into slavery in Egypt. The story-line shifts many times and Joseph moves from his being a slave, a prisoner, to being second in command in Egypt. Certainly at different points, Joseph must have wondered why this was happening to him; what had he done to deserve this treatment. Even when falsely accused and thrown into prison, he didn't become bitter and give up. Instead he remained faithful to the Lord and continued to live by God's commandments. Every bit of Joseph's situation was in God's hands. Ultimately God blessed Joseph and used him to save his own family from starvation and, by so doing, once again preserved that ancestral line. If you haven't read it yet, please do.

In reading these chapters I often found the Christian song which was popular quite a few years back, “Through it All”, by Andre Crouch, going through my mind. Some of the song goes, “I've been a lot of places, And I've seen so many faces, But there've been times I've felt so all alone. But in that lonely hour, In that precious, lonely hour, Jesus let me know I was His own.”

“So I thank God for the mountains, And I thank Him for the valleys, I thank Him for the storms He's brought me through. Cause if I never had a problem, I wouldn't know that He could solve them, I wouldn't know what faith in His Word could do.”

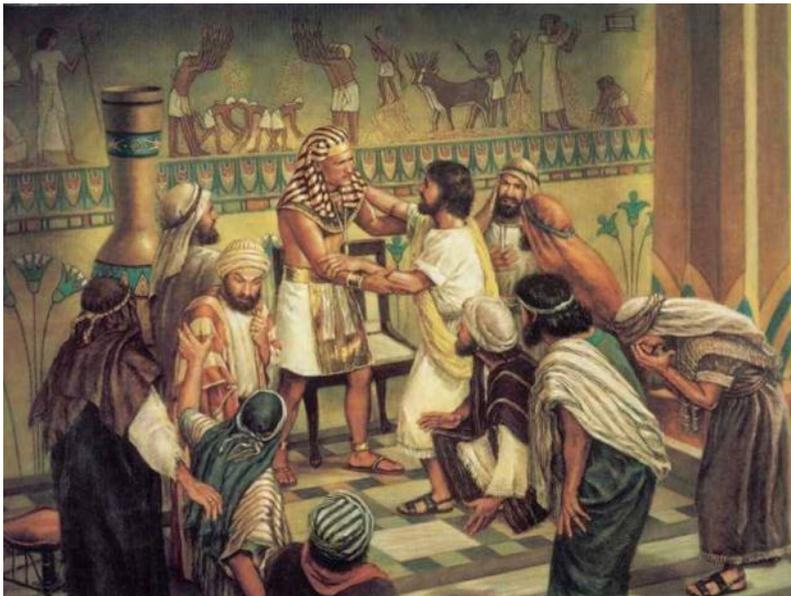

God was with Joseph because he faithfully held onto God's Words and Principles. Joseph put God into the center of his life and always gave God the praise for his success. What a wonderful example of a life lived with God at its center.

We pray for the wisdom to trust the Lord for the moment-by-moment victories – the victory that comes when He enables us to endure pain and loss and to praise Him for the good times. The victory that enables us not to dwell on our failures and the ability to attribute our successes to Him.. I want to say with Job that no matter what comes my way, “...yet will I trust Him.” (Job

Meditation on Genesis 37-50

By Bev Kilts

God continues weaving His Design through the ancestral line of our promised Messiah and in these chapters makes an abrupt shift in pattern as the narrative moves from Mesopotamia into Egypt. These chapters can hold their own as a dramatic narrative in literature filled with hatred, deception, injustice; faithfulness, forgiveness – the pages read like a novel, but they're not. It's simply the story of God working in the life of a faithful servant – Joseph. Joseph, favored by his father and deeply resented by his brothers, is sold by his brothers into slavery in Egypt. The story-line shifts many times and Joseph moves from his being a slave, a prisoner, to being second in command in Egypt. Certainly at different points, Joseph must have wondered why this was happening to him; what had he done to deserve this treatment. Even when falsely accused and thrown into prison, he didn't become bitter and give up. Instead he remained faithful to the Lord and continued to live by God's commandments. Every bit of Joseph's situation was in God's hands. Ultimately God blessed Joseph and used him to save his own family from starvation and, by so doing, once again preserved that ancestral line. If you haven't read it yet, please do.

In reading these chapters I often found the Christian song which was popular quite a few years back, “Through it All”, by Andre Crouch, going through my mind. Some of the song goes, “I've been a lot of places, And I've seen so many faces, But there've been times I've felt so all alone. But in that lonely hour, In that precious, lonely hour, Jesus let me know I was His own.”

“So I thank God for the mountains, And I thank Him for the valleys, I thank Him for the storms He's brought me through. Cause if I never had a problem, I wouldn't know that He could solve them, I wouldn't know what faith in His Word could do.”

God was with Joseph because he faithfully held onto God's Words and Principles. Joseph put God into the center of his life and always gave God the praise for his success. What a wonderful example of a life lived with God at its center.

We pray for the wisdom to trust the Lord for the moment-by-moment victories – the victory that comes when He enables us to endure pain and loss and to praise Him for the good times. The victory that enables us not to dwell on our failures and the ability to attribute our successes to Him.. I want to say with Job that no matter what comes my way, “...yet will I trust Him.” (Job