Issues Affecting the Paralegal Profession

Throughout the US, bar associations and all national paralegal organizations are debating the following topics, which will affect all current and future paralegals:

1. Job Satisfaction

Most paralegals are satisfied with their choice of profession and would choose it again, by an 82% to 18% ratio, according to Legal Assistant Today, January/February 2006.

The top five reasons for working as a paralegal are: 1) enjoy the intellectual stimulation; 2) enjoy law but do not wish to be a lawyer; 3) enjoy helping others; 4) enjoy job security, a variety in duties, etc.; 5) enjoy the pay.

Those unsatisfied with the profession give the following reasons: 1) lack of upward mobility [31%]; lack of respect as a professional [19%]; salary ceiling [19%]; work not challenging; attorneys too hard to work with; pressure for billable hours.

In that same issue, a survey of paralegals by a legal newspaper, The Fulton County Daily Report, found salary to be a key issue with paralegals and may be why paralegals look for a new position. However, 31% of respondents said a challenging job is more important. Flexible hours and medical insurance was the most important issue for 24% of the respondents, and salary for 13% of the respondents.

Professionalism was a top concern for respondents, but most felt they were treated as professionals and part of a legal team. Most respondents had careers for more than 11 years with 57% reporting salaries of more than $50,000.

2. Paralegal Education Standards

When the paralegal profession began, anyone working in the legal field with the interest and aptitude for paralegal work was welcomed and trained by attorneys who were more than happy to share some of the necessary, but tedious “going over records,” drafting, research, etc., with a paralegal. Hence, the beginning of the profession.

As the use of paralegals has grown, employers and clients, have begun to require more education and/or certification before hiring a paralegal. This has been fueled by the use of paralegals in more complex fields.

Paralegal educators are recommending that those wishing to pursue a career in the paralegal field obtain a bachelor’s degree and a paralegal certificate or certification. Some universities offer a master’s degree in paralegals studies, however, a paralegal’s salary requirements with a master’s degree may be limiting. At present, the minimum hiring standard remains a bachelor’s degree and a paralegal certificate.

3. Paralegal Regulation

Always a hot topic in the paralegal field, various forms of paralegal regulation are being considered throughout the United States.

Richard A. Plumer, Esq., weighs in on the issue in the Raising the Bar, Legal Assistant Today, May/June 2006:

I don’t believe it’s coincidental that the professions recognized and respected throughout the country are those professions that are significantly self-regulated from an educational, practice and disciplinary standpoint. If paralegal organizations remain voluntary and all-inclusive, I think the profession will miss its opportunity to be recognized both in terms of respect and financial rewards. If the professional paralegal community is willing to set and enforce high standards in which employers and clients have a high level of assurance of competency and credibility backed by a strongly regulated professional association, only then do I see paralegals receiving credit for being the true professionals they are.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Jackie L. Landry, CP

First, I would like to welcome all our new members, thank renewing members for their continuing membership, and thank our sustaining members for their continued support. I would also like to thank all the Committee Chairs for their hard work and assistance. Everyone has come into the new year with a willingness to work and to work together for the benefit of LPA.

LPA is a wonderful organization for many reasons. It is a great networking system for paralegals to meet other paralegals in their field and to meet paralegals in other areas of law. Our monthly seminars assist our CLAs, CPs, RPs, notaries public, and LCPs with continuing education. A topic not in your area of law may spark and interest and become something to pursue later in your career.

LPA helps with community interests such as Downtown Alive and Pro Bono clinics with the Lafayette Volunteer Lawyers. We donate presents for children at our Christmas Social and bring happiness to special children in our area.

LPA is here to help you if you decide to sit for a national certification. We have members that are NALA certified CLAs or CPs, CLAS or CPS (specialized), and members with Louisiana State certifications. These members are here to help you prepare to sit for the examinations.

I know that we are all in a fast paced profession, but please remember to take time once in a while to think about how far our profession has come and where LPA is going. I look forward to seeing you at the luncheon seminars and social functions.

Paralegal Week Social

Each year, the Governor of Louisiana and the Lafayette City-Parish President designate one week in September as Paralegal Week, and LPA celebrates Paralegal Week with a social.

Last year's celebration was a great success and we are looking forward to this year's celebration which will be held at A La Carte on September 12.

All paralegals, attorneys, paralegal students, secretaries, and those working in law are invited to attend.

Savannah Stephan, CLA; Jill Romero of DNA Services of America; and Renatti Dupont toast the paralegal profession.

Welcoming committee: Barbara Barton, Traci Hebert, and Jackie Landry, CP.

Brent Norris, Cathy Bacon, Deputy Clerk of Federal Court; Jean Ouellet, Esq.; and Douglas Truxillo, Esq., join in the festivities.
