Forgiveness

To forgive is literally to 'let go' and not hold any malice. This means no resentment and no guilt. It is freedom. But is it the one who is forgiven who experiences freedom or the one who forgives? Medical studies conclude that those who forgive live longer. Why? The person who cannot forgive lives in the past and cannot move forward. Anger, bitterness, and anxiety dwell in the bitter heart of those who cannot forgive.

Certain African tribesmen capture monkeys by drilling holes in logs that have a small pocket at the bottom. They then place a shiny object or worthless piece of aluminum foil at the bottom. The monkeys will see the shiny object and grab it, thus wedging their hand in the pocket unable to remove it unless they let go of the shiny object. Unbelievably, they will hold on to this worthless shiny thing even as the hunter approaches it to take its life.

Not forgiving is a lot like this. We hold on to something that is worthless, causes us pain, and adds to our stress and ill health. It consumes our time and energy, and worse of all it keeps us living in the past and leads to death on many levels.

In the scriptures we see Jesus giving the disciples the power to forgive (Holy Spirit) or hold bound. It is the basis for our Catholic belief in reconciliation. However, we also need to look at forgiving others (after all we are commanded by Christ to be imitators of him and his words on the cross 'forgive them' was his final testament to forgiveness).

When I was in high school I struggled with loving my brother, and for good reason. He tortured me growing up. Mostly psychologically, but without a dad to watch over us he often was rough with me if I bothered him in any way. One particularly painful day he bloodied my nose in a fight he started while scrimmaging in a high school water polo game. I found a deep hurt and hatred forming in my heart for him. It ate away at me, consumed me. Often it ruined my day as I allowed it to reign over my moods and actions.

Later, we wound up attending a retreat together and at the end he sought me out to ask for forgiveness. Not only for recent hurts but our whole life. I didn't want to, but I found myself weeping as God's Spirit moved me to forgiveness. So much pain being released. I finally let go of that shiny object of revenge and experienced such grace. Later he would be the best man at my wedding and my good friend.

Forgiveness helps us deal with our pride. It is humbling, but that is a good thing. It is another step closer to being Christ-like, living healthier mind body and soul. So, who do you need to forgive?

PANCAKES!

Our Knights of Columbus will be holding their pancake breakfast today, June 9th after the 8Am and 10Am Masses. Did you know the KOC have used proceeds from these breakfasts to repair the academy roof, doors, and leaks? They also pitched in to help pave the parking lot and carpet the hall. They are invaluable to our community so please support them and maybe even consider joining the Knights and become more involved with our parish life.
