Theological Questions

Last week's question: What is an altar stone?

In the early Church, it was customary to celebrate the sacred Liturgy at the tombs of the apostles and martyrs. For example, in Rome Christians would gather in the underground catacombs where many of the saints were buried, and there they would celebrate the Holy Eucharist, usually in secret and unobserved by the Romans. Likewise, St. Peter's basilica in the Vatican is built over the tomb of St. Peter the Apostle. This ancient practice of celebrating Mass at the tombs of the martyrs was seen as an expression of the "Communion of Saints", the unity of the Church on earth with the Church Triumphant in Heaven. It was also a constant reminder of the hope of the resurrection of the dead, and a reminder of the heroic witness of those who have gone before us marked with the sign of faith. When permanent churches and altars were built, the custom developed of putting the relics of martyrs (such as a piece of bone) in or under the altars. In most Catholic churches with a permanent altar, a small square stone is set into the surface of the altar. That stone, called the altar stone, has a hollowed-out cavity containing the relics of one or more martyrs. It is a custom which helps us to realize our connection with the ancient and eternal Church of the Apostles and martyrs.

New Question: Was Mohammed, the founder of Islam, a true prophet of God?

See next week's bulletin for the answer.
