

Aggies on TV/Webcast Tips for Tuning In

CBS

Each week an SEC football game is scheduled to be televised by CBS.

A selected number of men's basketball games are also carried by CBS.

Check your local listings for the CBS affiliate in your area.

ESPN/ESPN2/ESPNU

Various SEC competitions in numerous sports are distributed on ESPN, ESPN2, and ESPNU.

Check the guide for the channel in your area.

SEC competitions on ESPN, ESPN2, and ESPNU are available on the WatchESPN app with no blackout restrictions; however, viewers must authenticate via a login process which is tied to their cable/satellite provider.

SEC Network

The Channel

SEC Network is a standalone channel available on most cable and satellite providers. A wide variety of SEC live competitions is available on the channel.

SEC Network will also utilize a secondary channel to air events with simultaneous game times (e.g., two football games that kick off at 6 p.m.).

SEC Network programs are available on the WatchESPN app with no blackout restrictions; however, viewers must authenticate via a login process which is tied to their cable/satellite provider. In other words, your cable/satellite provider must carry the SEC Network before you can view programming on the WatchESPN app.

SEC Network + (The Web Channel/App)

SEC Network + also has a web channel available via www.SECnetwork.com and the WatchESPN app to subscribers of various cable and satellite providers. An extensive schedule of SEC live competitions will be available on the web channel.

Many of the live competitions on SEC Network's website and the WatchESPN app are produced by member institutions and will be offered in one of two areas on the app.

Multi-camera, high production quality member institution productions will reside on the SEC Network portion of the WatchESPN app as well as on www.SECnetwork.com.

Single camera, lower quality video streams provided by member institutions will reside on www.SECnetwork.com. Member institutions will no longer provide these video streams on their official websites.

SEC Network + competitions are available at www.SECnetwork.com or on the WatchESPN app with no blackout restrictions; however, viewers must authenticate via a login process which is tied to their cable/satellite provider.

FSN (Fox Sports)

Several SEC competitions will continue to be distributed on Fox Sports' regional sports networks like FOX Southwest, FOX South, and SportSouth for the 2014-15 season only.

Cable viewers will need to check their channel guide for game availability, because some regional sports networks use secondary channels or PLUS channels to air the games.

Satellite viewers will need to check their channel guides for game availability. Some satellite viewers will find the games on "alternate" channels, especially when professional sports are airing on the primary regional sports network in their area. Also, some satellite viewers will find HD versions of the games on the "alternate" channels.

Occasionally, satellite viewers will need to subscribe to the "sports package" in order to receive the various regional sports networks.

SEC competitions on FSN are available on the WatchESPN app; however, viewers must authenticate via a login process which is tied to their cable/satellite provider. FSN events are subject to blackout restrictions in the SEC footprint.

12thMan.com (formerly AggieAthletics.com and 12thMan.TV)

Texas A&M's subscription-based 12thMan.TV at AggieAthletics.com no longer offers live competitions as of June 2014.

All home athletic competitions of SEC member institutions which are offered for video streaming will now reside on the SEC Network portion of the WatchESPN app or www.SECnetwork.com.

The Beat

The Beat, a weekly look inside Texas A&M Athletics, is produced by 12th Man Productions. Shows air weekly on FOX Sports Southwest (Wednesdays, 4 p.m.), KBTX-TV (Wednesdays, 6:30 p.m.) and the CW Aggeland (Thursdays, 6:30 p.m.) through early May.

MORE SEC TV INFORMATION

An FAQ page is available at SECSports.com.