

Middle School Civics and Economics delivers instruction, practice, and review designed to build middle school students' understanding of the political and governmental systems of the United States and the roles played by citizens. By honing their ability to analyze civic life, political practices, and government structures, students build the depth of knowledge and higher-order thinking skills required to demonstrate their mastery when put to the test.

The two-semester course is arranged in themed units, each with three to five lessons. In each unit, activities make complex ideas about civics accessible through focused content, guided analysis, multi-modal representations, and personalized feedback. Each lesson includes a variety of activities such as direct instruction, application of skills, performance tasks, and formative and summative assessments. As they progress through standards-aligned content and demonstrate their learning through computer- and teacher-scored assignments.

Middle School Civics and Economics is built to state standards and informed by the College, Career, and Civic Life (C3) Framework for Social Studies State Standards.
