

New Anatomy:
Branching of the Cognitive Meridian and Regulator
Harmonizing Network, Layers

With thanks to Cheryl for great note taking.

My dream is to someday see these theoretical ideas, these inspired musings and considerations brought forth from the mists of memory and ancient wisdom more fully understood through scientific and spiritual study that further develops our human knowledge of the Sacred Anatomy and what we truly are.

The Cognitive Meridians throws branches off of itself much like fascia does. They are part of the Harmonizing Network and this branching from only Cognitive Meridians originating in the cognitive layer represents a form of neural-like connectivity in the Sacred Anatomy.

These are not like Core Meridians, which are big arterial trunks that reach out into the universal from the core. But the purpose is similar. Core Meridians serve to connect the core into the universal consciousness all around us creating points on geometric planes that act as links into the larger realms we live within. We are suspended in space but anchored into the cosmic consciousness with points of light. Meridians of chi moving through us and out into space in relationship with the Totality of life.

Cognitive Meridians are completely interior and more like living and constantly growing veinous systems that split off of arteries moving out into the physical body. They start in the cognitive layer like seeds that grow and reach down into the bio layer to create and form different aspects of the physical body. Cognitive Meridians carry the original extragenesis, the impetus, the idea, the focus, or what might even be thought of as the design. In fact, they transport the energy of the spirit and heart of possibility, the concept of what the body can become.

Little twigs called plexus conjunctions split off the main meridian and as they get further out they cross and tangle as they work together in different parts of both the cognitive layer point of transmutation and the inspired forming physical system. This is a Sacred Anatomy neurological-like organism related to the Template, the Layers System and the Harmonizing Network.

There is a Cognitive Meridian Branch Regulator located in the Point of Transmutation that controls the rate and the inspired direction of branching. I believe this is at least part of how the neural network of Sacred Anatomy actually functions as it energetically stimulates the formation of a physical body with Karmically influenced traits and talents.

Cognitive Meridians implant information that is carried from the soul's personal history stored in both the etheric and spiritual layers as they emanate or ooze into the cognitive layer. This multifactorial energy is further influenced by and mixed with the stimulus of the exterior world. All of this pours into the fertile Cognitive Layer where the nascent Cognitive Meridian begins to arrange itself into a kind of root in the most wonderful of strata within the Layers System. Growing from this point of origin the composite data influenced by many sources starts to take shape as a conduit finally becoming a meridian dedicated to transporting an amalgam of chi.

We, living things are made of many influences and we originate in the extragenic potential of Life, itself stimulated by the gathering together of concepts, ideas, beliefs, environmental dynamism, and pure data that shape the development of atoms and molecules into cells and structures of bone, blood and tissue. We are directed from the very beginning to carry our world within us in the very fabric of our construction.

The newly rooted Cognitive Meridian moves out through the anatomy of the cognitive layer from where the root is anchored in the point of transmutation into the cognitive stratum of organs, systems and skeletal. From each of these informational portals the branching Meridian carries conceptual human development into the forming spinal column and brain. Ultimately, the final step of the implantation journey is docking into the body of the developing fetus within the bio layer of the mother. This crossing of connection from subtle to physical will remain constantly downloading and exchanging information as long as the bio layer exists. What begins in this moment of implantation to create and direct the evolution of the bio mass into the shape and form of a body will serve to carry the individuated soul's purpose and knowledge through the expression of a single lifetime.

Individuated conscious entanglement, woven from a composite of influences, exists to fulfill the creative potential of cosmic wisdom and the urgency of Life as it must express itself.