Bird-Netting

Maximum protection against pigeons, sparrows or starlings, your Andros Netting Expert can assess the situation quickly and customize a program that addresses your requirement.

Several bird species can be severe pests of fruit grown commercially in the foothills. Most damage is caused by birds feeding on ripening fruit, making it unmarketable, but species such as house finches and crowned sparrows, blue jays may also invade orchards to feed on fruit buds during the dormant season or just prior to bloom, also decreasing yield. Bird damage can be particularly severe in the foothill-growing environment.

Besides spreading disease and infection, birds can decimate your Fruit production. Andros has created safe and effective solutions to control this pest. With over 25 years of experience, and research Andros has been the leader for Net protection throughout the United States.
