All year, the Razorbacks have honored the late great Razorback football coach and athletic director Frank Broyles with a special "JFB" decal on the back of their helmets all season.

Arkansas' Friday night starter and All-SEC second teamer Blaine Knight enters the College World Series as the only starting pitcher in the SEC to have not registered a loss this year and have an ERA under 3.00. He's also the only pitcher in the nation with a 12-0 record.

RAZORBACK PRIME NINE

>> Arkansas has played in the NCAA Tournament in 15 of the last 16 years, reaching the College World Series five times during that span (2004, 2009, 2012, 2015, 2018).

>> This year marks the ninth time Arkansas has advanced to the College World Series in program history and fifth time under head coach Dave Van Horn. Arkansas has made CWS appearances in 1979, 1985, 1987, 1989, 2004, 2009, 2012, 2015, and now 2018.

>> The Razorbacks look to top the program-best National Runner-up finish in 1979. Since the title game appearance, Arkansas has never won more than two games during a trip to Omaha.

>> Arkansas is slated to face Texas (42-21) in its opening contest. The Razorbacks also join Florida (47-19) and Texas Tech (44-18) in their half of the College World Series bracket.

>> Arkansas is 79-64 (.552) all-time in the NCAA Tournament, including 15 tournament wins in the last five years.

>> The Hogs are 7-2 in postseason play this year, going 2-1 in the SEC Tournament, 3-0 in the Fayetteville Regional and 2-1 in the Fayetteville Super Regional.

>> Arkansas is 11-16 all-time in the College World Series and 4-4 in CWS openers.

>> Arkansas last faced Texas in the College World Series in 2004, falling 13-2 in its opener. It has faced the Longhorns four times in the world series (1979, 1985, 1987, 2004), tying for the most it has faced a any other team.

>> The Razorbacks won a share of the SEC Western Division title this year by finishing with an 18-12 conference record. It's Arkansas' first division title since 2011 and fourth under Dave Van Horn.

MORE RAZORBACK NOTES

DVH BY THE NUMBERS
For the seventh time in his coaching career and fifth time in his Arkansas tenure, head coach Dave Van Horn is headed to Omaha. The Razorbacks are 4-8 in the College World Series under DVH. Arkansas' 14-4 win over South Carolina clinched the Fayetteville Super Regional, the seventh Super Regional in school history. The skipper picked up his 600th win at Arkansas in a 5-2 win over San Diego State on Feb. 25 and currently has 1,224 career wins in his 30-year career. Over his 16 seasons at Arkansas, DVH has led the Razorbacks to five College World Series appearances, six Super Regionals, 15 NCAA Tournament berths, one SEC overall title, four SEC Western Division championships and a total of 639 wins.

NOT OUR FIRST RODEO
Arkansas is 79-64 (.552) all-time in the NCAA Tournament, including a 9-6 (.600) record in NCAA Super Regionals. The Razorbacks have advanced to the College World Series eight times, previously, in its history, most recently in 2015, and appeared in seven Super Regionals.

HOGS BEAT SEC-FOE SOUTH CAROLINA FOR COLLEGE WORLD SERIES SPOT
Arkansas and South Carolina faced off for the seventh time this year when the two teams played game three of the Fayetteville Super Regional on Monday. It was the most times Arkansas has faced a team in one season in program history. The Razorbacks slugged their way to Omaha, beating the Gamecocks, 14-4, for its second-largest victory ever in a Super Regional game. Senior Carson Shaddy hit his third home run of the NCAA Tournament as part of a five-run first inning and was one of 11 hits in the game.

RAZORBACKS SWEEP THROUGH FAYETTEVILLE REGIONAL
Arkansas made easy work in its regional defeating four-seed Oral Roberts and two-seed Southern Miss each by a score of 10-2. It was able to finish the perfect week with a 4-3 win over Dallas Baptist after Jake Reindl threw seven stellar innings out of the bullpen, followed by Matt Cronin, who saved his third game in as many appearances.

ARKANSAS TIES SCHOOL RECORD WITH 11 MLB DRAFT PICKS
The Razorback baseball program tied its record for number of draft picks in a single year when 11 of its current players heard their name called tying the record set in 2013 and was the second-most from any school in the nation.

BLAINE KNIGHT NAMED ALL-AMERICAN
Junior Blaine Knight earned All-America status earlier this month as Collegiate Baseball (3rd Team), D1 Baseball (1st Team), the NCBWA (1st Team), and (Baseball America (2nd Team) gave him the distinctive honor. He is the first All-American pitcher since Keaton McKinney in 2015 and 42nd All-American overall in Arkansas history. Knight has been the Arkansas ace all season racking up a perfect 12-0 record as the Hogs' Friday night starter with six wins coming in conference play. That 12-0 record is good for the most wins in the Southeastern Conference and he's the only pitcher in Division I with a 12-0 record this year. His 12 wins are also third most in a season in school history.

KJERSTAD BLASTING WAY THROUGH FRESHMAN RECORD BOOK
Freshman outfielder Heston Kjerstad went off at the NCAA Regional, including a two-homer day against Oral Roberts in the opener. Kjerstad added three more hits in the Super Regional, including a home run, and now has 81 hits and 14 home runs, while hitting .340, the third-highest average on the team entering the CWS. His 81 hits are a new Arkansas freshman record recently set by Dominic Ficociello (2011) and Jeff King (1984). He's also broken the single-season Arkansas freshman record for home runs set by Zack Cox (13) in 2009.

HELLO, OLD FRIEND
Going into the College World Series, Arkansas has faced the eight-team field 10 times in the regular season, seven coming in its own bracket alone. The Razorbacks swept a midweek series against Texas in March by a combined score of 20-9 and hitting a combined .359. Against Florida, split its four regular-season games with one game occurring in the SEC Tournament. Finally, against Texas Tech, Arkansas had its two-game midweek series cut down to one game due to weather, but the Hogs struck out the Red Raiders 17 times in the 5-1 victory on April 24.

Baum Stadium hosted nine games during the NCAA Regionals and Super Regionals over the past two weeks, welcoming more fans than any other ballpark in the nation with 89,852 packing the stadium during the two rounds that saw Arkansas advance to the program's ninth College World Series. This year, the Hogs are 35-4 at home, good for the best home record in the SEC.

MORE RAZORBACK NOTES

MARTIN, KJERSTAD NAMED FRESHMAN ALL-AMERICANS
Continuing to rack up award after award, the freshman duo of infielder Casey Martin and outfielder Heston Kjerstad added another high distinction to their growing collection as Collegiate Baseball and the NCBWA both named them Freshman All-Americans. It's the second-straight year Arkansas has had a Freshman All-American (Dominic Fletcher) and the 43rd and 44th All-American in school history. Kjerstad has broken the Arkansas record for hits (81), home runs (14) and total bases (137) in a season by a freshman and was named the SEC Freshman of the Year. Martin currently leads all Razorbacks with a .344 average and is right behind Kjerstad with 12 doubles, 13 homers, and 46 RBIs.

MR. JUNE - JARED GATES
For the second-consecutive year, infielder Jared Gates has come up clutch in the postseason. Gates, a junior college transfer from Iowa Western Community College, is hitting a combined .327 over the last two years in the SEC Tournament and NCAA Tournament. He has six extra-base hits and nine RBIs over 19 postseason games in his career. In the NCAA Tournament, Gates is hitting .313 with three home runs.

KJERSTAD NAMED SEC FRESHMAN OF YEAR; SEVEN NAMED ALL-SEC
Arkansas outfielder Heston Kjerstad was named the SEC's Freshman of the Year, leading six other Razorbacks that were named to the All-SEC, All-Freshman and All-Defense Teams. Kjerstad is the first player to be named the SEC Freshman of the Year in school history. The seven All-SEC players for the 2018 season is the most in one year in the Dave Van Horn era.

HOW THE WEST WAS WON
Arkansas claimed its fifth division title in school history earning a share of SEC Western Division title for the first time since 2011. Four of Arkansas' five SEC Western Division crowns have come under current head coach Dave Van Horn (2004, 2007, 2011). The first SEC division title came in 1999 under longtime head coach Norm DeBriyn, a year the Hogs also won the overall title.

LEADING OFF...

A GOOD MONTH GONE BY
April was a good month for the Razorbacks. The Hogs went 13-4 and hit a combined .306, while scoring 100 runs (5.9/game). Dominic Fletcher capped off his hot month with a go-ahead home run against Alabama in game three, his second of the month and sixth of the year, to help the Hogs finish another conference series sweep. Fletcher enters Omaha hitting .325 in conference games, good for fourth on the team and hit an astounding .448 in April.

LOSEKE GARNERS NATIONAL PITCHER OF THE WEEK
After an 8.1 scoreless inning showing across three separate appearances out of the bullpen, junior Barrett Loseke was named the SEC and NCBWA National Pitcher of the Week following Arkansas' win over Texas Tech and series win over Alabama in April, the first for an Arkansas player since 2015.

Over that week, Loseke gave up only two hits and walked four, while striking out 17 batters, corralling two saves and a win. Ten of his 17 strikeouts came against No. 4 Texas Tech, a feat he accomplished in just 4.2 perfect innings. It was the fifth time this year an Arkansas player won a weekly award. Loseke has only given up three earned runs in his last 12 appearances (26.0 innings) and struck out 32 batters.

KNIGHT SURPASSES 200 STRIKEOUTS IN CAREER
With a strikeout of the first batter he faced against Alabama, junior pitcher Blaine Knight reached the 200 career strikeout plateau, becoming just the 13th Razorback to ever record 200 strikeouts or more in a career. With now 234 strikeouts over 51 appearances, Knight sits alone at fifth all-time in school history.

Freshman Heston Kjerstad was named the SEC Freshman of the Year prior to this year's SEC Tournament. He's the first Razorback to be given the honor and the third to win a major conference award. Recently, Kjerstad broke the Arkansas freshman single-season home run record, hitting his 14th of the year last Monday.

MORE RAZORBACK NOTES

LOSEKE, PITCHING STAFF SHUT DOWN RED RAIDERS

With a 5-0 lead to work with, Arkansas' pitching staff shut down the hot Texas Tech offense in Baum Stadium. Junior Barrett Loseke was lights out in earning his first victory of the year after throwing 4.2 perfect innings and striking out a career-high 10 batters. It's the second time this year that Loseke has struck out eight or more and the 17 strikeouts as a staff is the most since fanning a school-record tying 18 against Grand Canyon last year.

SLAMMING THE DOOR

Sophomore Matt Cronin is closing in on the Arkansas single-season record for saves in 2018. After closing out the final two innings in Arkansas' 4-3 win over Dallas Baptist, Cronin now has 12 saves on the year, good for third most in the SEC. With one more save, he'll tie current volunteer coach Colby Suggs, who is the current Razorback single-season saves record holder at 13. Cronin has earned saves in four of his last five appearances. He also earned two saves in the same day as part of the doubleheader against South Carolina earlier this year.

PITCHING STAFF NEARLY PERFECT

For the first time since 1984, Arkansas shutout a conference opponent twice in the same day when it earned a series win over South Carolina in its doubleheader on April 14, winning 2-0 and 3-0 with each going seven innings. Kacey Murphy and Isaiah Campbell combined for 11 shutout innings, while Matt Cronin closed out both games to up his season saves total to nine for the year. Murphy almost became the first Razorback to ever record a perfect game after he retired 18 batters in a row before giving up a lead-off single in the seventh. It was the first time in THE history between the two teams that Arkansas shutout South Carolina twice in the same series.

HOW SWEEP IT IS

With its 6-3 win over Texas A&M, Arkansas secured its fourth conference series sweep of the year. This season marked the first time since 1999 that the Razorbacks swept four or more conference series in the same year. All four sweeps occurred inside Baum Stadium and Arkansas did not lose a single series, including non-conference, at home. In those four regular-season sweeps, Arkansas averaged over eight runs per game and hit 22 homers.

ARKANSAS CONSISTENTLY PLAYS CLOSE GAMES

Arkansas has played in 19 one-run games this year and come away winners in nine of those games. In two-run games, the Razorbacks are 7-5 this year and 10 of their last 14 games have been decided by two runs or less. In their five conference series losses, the Hogs have played in seven one-run games and six two-run games. All but one of those games was decided by more than three runs (17-2 loss at Florida - March 24).

IT'S BLAINE KNIGHT AND EVERYONE ELSE

Junior Blaine Knight has clearly shown why he is the ace of the Arkansas pitching staff this year. Knight is currently best among Razorback hurlers with a 2.84 ERA over 17 starts, good for fifth-lowest in the SEC. He had a sub-1.00 ERA through his first four starts and has struck out four or more batters in 15 of his 17 appearances. Against Florida, Knight out-dueled Brady Singer, going 6.2 innings and holding the Gator offense to just three runs with 10 strikeouts. It was Knight's first 10-strikeout performance of the season and he was just the second pitcher to notch 10 K's against the defending national champions this year. In his 10 conference starts, Knight earned wins against preseason All-Americans Sean Hjelle, Brady Singer, Ryan Rolison, and Casey Mize and is the only pitcher in the nation with a 12-0 record.

With the win over San Diego State in the second week of the season, head coach Dave Van Horn became the third coach in the SEC to win his 600th game at his current school. Earlier this year, Van Horn also won his 1,200th game as a head coach combined over his years in junior college, Division II, and Division I.

REINDL FINDS HIS GROOVE

Junior Jake Reindl earned the win after handcuffing Auburn for seven innings out of the bullpen and striking out a career-high nine batters. Reindl gave up an RBI single to the second batter he faced in the third inning and went on to retire the final 18 batters he faced in what was the longest outing by an Arkansas reliever this year. Reindl had a 5.62 ERA in nine appearances before that game, but lowered his ERA a full run to 4.30 after helping Arkansas to its second SEC series sweep of 2018. Since that Auburn game, Reindl has only allowed six runs and struck out 26. His 2.96 ERA is the lowest among Arkansas relievers with 10 or more appearances.

TAPE MEASURE SHOT

In game two of the midweek series with ULM, Heston Kjerstad hit Arkansas' longest home run of the year when he deposited a second inning moonshot over the Baum Stadium scoreboard in right field. The homer was measured at 430 feet and had an exit speed of 113 mph. Kjerstad is currently tied for first on the team with 14 home runs and is ninth in the league, best among freshmen.

NO PLACE LIKE HOME

The Razorbacks were stellar at home this season, building up a 35-4 record in series wins over Bucknell, Dayton, USC, Kent State, Texas, No. 4 Kentucky, No. 13 Auburn, South Carolina, Texas Tech, Alabama, and Texas A&M. As a team, Arkansas is hitting .329, while the pitching staff has garnered a 2.84 ERA in games played at Baum Stadium. The starting pitchers have picked up 24 of the victories, while the staff as a whole is holding batters to a .216 average. At the plate, the Hogs have smashed 61 of the season's 94 homers at Baum Stadium and are slugging a combined .533.

MORE RAZORBACK NOTES

CALL IN THE BAUM SQUAD
In 2017, Arkansas crushed an SEC-best 83 home runs. It was the most home runs by a Razorback team since 2010. The Hogs have picked up where they left off with 94 home runs after 63 games, 11 more than they had all last year. Eric Cole and Heston Kjerstad lead all Razorbacks with 14 home runs on the year. Arkansas has had 13 different players hit at least one home run this year, which ties for the fourth-most in the nation.

167 of Arkansas' 452 runs in 2018 have come from the home run ball, making 37 percent of the team's total run production.

Most Home Runs Hit (NCAA)

Rank	Team	Home Runs
1.	Tennessee Tech	135
2.	Clemson	98
3.	Florida	96
4.	Arkansas	94
5.	NC State	87

DANGEROUS WITH TWO OUTS
The Razorbacks have made a habit of the two-out rally this year. Over 63 games, the Hogs have hit .278 as a team with two outs and have driven in 159 of their runs with two away. Carson Shaddy leads all Razorbacks with a .386 average (22-for-57) with two outs. Right behind him is Casey Martin (.366) and Heston Kjerstad (.360).

CASEY MARTIN EARNS SEC ALL-TOURNAMENT TEAM HONORS
For the second-straight year, Arkansas placed at least one player on the SEC All-Tournament Team when Casey Martin earned the third base spot, becoming the second third baseman in school history (Zack Cox, 2009) to earn the distinction. Martin finished the week 4-for-12 (.333) with three of his hits being homers. He led all players with three home runs on the week, including two coming in the second round game against South Carolina. It was Martin's second multi-home run game this year.

RACK 'EM UP
The Razorback defense has turned 58 twin killings this year, tying for the most in the SEC and tied for seventh in the nation. The four double plays turned against Ole Miss back in March was one less than the school record for double plays turned in a single game.

HARD TO STOP AFTER SIX
Arkansas is 37-2 this year when leading after six innings. Of the 452 runs scored combined by the Razorbacks, 330 have been scored in the first six innings. Arkansas' largest run output comes in the second (72) and seventh innings (62).

RAZORBACKS BLAST LONGHORNS AND WILDCATS
The Razorbacks blew past the competition during opening week of conference play in mid March, sweeping a midweek series against old Southwest Conference rival Texas and then sweeping No. 4 Kentucky to open SEC play. The sweep over the Wildcats was Arkansas' first over a Kentucky team since 2004. Arkansas brought the offensive firepower all week to hit .398 as a team, while scoring 59 runs over the five-game stretch, 39 in the series against Kentucky. The 39 runs scored against the Wildcats ended up being the most runs scored by an Arkansas team in an SEC series since 1997. The Hogs also clubbed 15 homers over the five games, 13 against Kentucky.

BIGGERS AND MARTIN TAKE HOME WEEKLY AWARDS
Following the offensive explosion against Texas and Kentucky, junior Jax Biggers was named the SEC's Player of the Week, while freshman Casey Martin took the league's Freshman of the Week honors. Biggers had a breakout week, hitting .588 with two doubles, two home runs, and seven RBIs out of the lead-off spot in five games against Texas and No. 4 Kentucky. In the Kentucky series alone, Biggers totaled three multi-hit games, including one three-hit game and one four-hit performance. Martin continued his stellar start to his freshman campaign, hitting .350 with three home runs and seven RBIs combined against Texas and Kentucky.

BONFIELD AND SHADDY REACH 150 STARTS IN CAREERS
Luke Bonfield and Carson Shaddy both reached the 150-start plateau this season. For Bonfield, he made his milestone start at DH in game two against Florida (March 24), while Shaddy earned his at Memphis (March 27). They both are the first Razorbacks to reach that mark since Michael Bernal finished his career with 167 starts after the 2016 season. Danny Hamblin still holds the record for 245 starts in his career. Entering the College World Series, Bonfield sits at 183 starts, while Shaddy is at 179 for his career.

DVH WINS 600TH GAME AS RAZORBACK HEAD COACH
By defeating San Diego State, 5-2, on Feb. 24, head coach Dave Van Horn claimed his 600th win as the Razorback skipper. Van Horn is now one of only three head coaches in the SEC with 600 or more wins at their current school. Earlier this year against ULM, Van Horn won his 1,200th game as a head coach combined over his years in junior college, Division II, and Division I.

KNIGHT MAKES THIRD-STRAIGHT OPENING WEEKEND START
For the third-straight season, Bryant, Arkansas native Blaine Knight was part of Arkansas' starting rotation for the first series of the year. Knight held Bucknell hitless over five innings in a 14-2 victory. Combined in his three opening weekend starts, Knight has struck out 12 batters in 14 innings, while allowing just two runs and walking two batters.

HOGS PLATE 49 RUNS ON BUCKNELL
Arkansas cruised to a sweep over Bucknell on opening weekend. While the the three wins were impressive enough, it was the amount of runs that was astounding. Forty-nine Razorback runs crossed the plate combined over the three games including 32 in Saturday's game two. The 49 runs is the most in the first three games of of a season since 1997. The sweep was the team's fifth-straight to open a season dating back to 2014, while the 32 runs in game two was just one less than the school record for runs scored in a single-game (1984).

EARLY RECOGNITION FOR BLAINE KNIGHT
Razorback junior right-hander Blaine Knight was named a Louisville Slugger Preseason Third-Team All-American by Collegiate Baseball Magazine back in December. Knight was one of Arkansas' top arms in 2017, making 16 starts and compiling a 3.28 ERA in 90.2 innings pitched, the second-lowest ERA among Arkansas starting pitchers. His eight wins were good for tops on the team and were the most by an Arkansas pitcher since Chris Oliver had eight in 2014.

KOCH NAMED PRESEASON ALL-AMERICAN
Razorback junior catcher Grant Koch was named a Preseason Third-Team All-American by D1Baseball.com in January. The Hog backstop was a constant in the lineup last year as he started in nearly every game (63 games), and hit .264 with a career-best 13 home runs and 42 RBIs. His home run total was the seventh most in the conference, most among catcher, and most by a Razorback catcher in the Dave Van Horn era.

HIGH MARKS IN PRESEASON SEC POLL
The Razorbacks were picked by the league's head coaches to win the Western Division and finish second overall. In the 27th annual preseason SEC poll, the Hogs picked up 12 of the 14 votes to win the division and one vote to take the league overall.

FOUR HOGS EARN PRESEASON ALL-SEC MARKS
Arkansas was one of two schools (Florida) to have four or more players earn a spot on either Preseason All-SEC team. Catcher Grant Koch led all Razorbacks as the lone first-team player, followed by Blaine Knight, Jax Biggers, and Dominic Fletcher, who make up the second team.

COMPARING TO THE 2010 TEAM
This year's Razorback offense is one of the best, statistically, in program history. All of the major offensive categories are the highest since the 2010 Super Regional team and continuing to rise. Five different players are hitting .300 or higher with Casey Martin leading the way with a .344 average going into the CWS. In 2010, only four players (Zack Cox, Collin Kuhn, Brett Eibner, Bo Bigham) were hitting .300 or higher.

Over the last 16 years as head coach of the Razorback Baseball program, Dave Van Horn has continued to elevate Arkansas into one of the nation's premier teams year in and year out. In 16 seasons as head Hog, Van Horn has led Arkansas to four College World Series appearances, 15 NCAA Tournament berths, one Southeastern Conference overall title, four SEC Western Division championships and a total of 639 wins, averaging nearly 40 wins a season.

Ever since returning to his alma mater in 2003 to take over for retiring SEC legend Norm DeBriyn, Van Horn has continued to successfully field nationally competitive teams, while also grooming numerous All-Americans, all-conference and future Major League players.

Under his guidance, 23 Razorbacks have been named All-Americans, 33 as All-SEC players, and 101 have been picked in the MLB Draft. Those draft picks are the third-most among all active head coaches in the SEC.

Van Horn is the second winningest coach in Arkansas history with 639 wins going into the 2018 College World Series. He is the second active SEC head coach with 600 or more victories at their current school.

Including his years at Nebraska, Northwestern State and Central Missouri State, Van Horn has racked up 1,010 wins at four-year institutions, which is 18th-most among all active coaches. Entering the CWS, he is one of 12 active coaches with 1,000 or more wins at four-year schools.

- Currently sporting the fifth-lowest ERA in the SEC at 2.84.
- Threw a scoreless five innings on Opening Day against Bucknell and a scoreless six innings against USC. Currently has four outings of five or more innings with no runs allowed.
- After giving up a home run in the first inning against Kent State (March 9), he retired 12 of the next 13 batters and had his third-straight quality start.
- Out-dueled Brady Singer and the Florida Gators, going 6.2 innings with just three earned runs allowed on March 23.
- Struck out 10 Gator batters, just one shy of his career-high, but was the first Razorback pitcher with 10 or more strikeouts in an outing this year.
- Pitched six or more innings for the fifth time in his previous six starts after going 6.0 against Ole Miss, picking up his second-consecutive victory.
- Outlasted Casey Mize and the Auburn Tigers on April 6, allowing just one run over 6.1 innings, his third-straight quality start.
- Pitched his second-longest outing of the year against No. 20 Texas A&M (May 11), going seven innings and tying a career high with 11 strikeouts on 105 pitches.
- Is the only pitcher in the SEC with an undefeated record and an ERA under 3.00.
- Arkansas is 14-3 in games that Knight has started.
- His 12 wins are tied for most among SEC pitchers and ties for third-most in the nation.
- Currently sits alone in third on the Arkansas all-time records with 12 wins in a single season.
- Currently has 234 career strikeouts ranking fifth in school history.
- Remained undefeated on the year, picking up his 12th win in the NCAA Fayetteville Super Regional against South Carolina.
- At 12-0, he is the only Division I pitcher with that record this year.
- Allowed just one run to Florida in the SEC Tournament, a home run to Jonathan India, over six innings and allowed four hits coupled with four strikeouts on 99 pitches.
- In the Fayetteville Regional against Oral Roberts, he worked a career-high eight innings with just two runs allowed and walked only one.
- In the Fayetteville Super Regional, he went six innings against South Carolina with only three runs allowed and four strikeouts.
- Has allowed three or more walks in only three games this year (at Florida - March 23; Alabama - April 27; vs. Florida - May 25).

2018 HIGHLIGHTS

- Picked up the win in game three against Bucknell after pitching a scoreless inning with one strikeout.
- Earned the save against Arizona, pitching the final 2.1 innings and retiring seven of the final eight batters.
- Won his second game in three appearances after throwing a career-high four innings at San Diego State and striking out five.
- Earned his second save against Texas, throwing the final 1.2 innings, while also getting out of bases loaded jam with the tying run on third.
- The 12 saves tops his total of one from 2017. Is one of five Razorbacks with at least one save in 2018.
- Came back from a mild case of mono, missing the previous two weeks, throwing two innings in game three against Texas A&M.
- Earned saves in three-consecutive appearances after coming back from mono, including in the SEC Tournament (Florida) and NCAA Regional (Dallas Baptist).
- Threw the final two innings against Dallas Baptist to win the NCAA Fayetteville Regional, striking out four.
- Pitched the final inning of Arkansas' Super Regional Game 3 win over South Carolina.
- Needs one more save to match the school record for saves in a single-season (Colby Suggs, 2013).

2018 HIGHLIGHTS

17th Round MLB Draft Pick (Chicago Cubs)

- Picked up the save in his first appearance of the year, going the final inning against Bucknell (Feb. 18) to help Arkansas to the season-opening sweep.
- Earned the win in his first SEC appearance of the year, going a scoreless 1.2 innings against Kentucky (March 16) with just two hits allowed.
- Pitched the final seven innings against Auburn (April 8), giving up only one run on one hit and striking out a career-high nine, retiring the final 15 batters.
- Came into the series opener against LSU (May 4) with runners on the corners and no outs in the ninth inning, but was able to strike out two and induce a pop up to earn the save in the one-run game.
- Made two appearances against No. 20 Texas A&M, giving up just one hit over three innings with five strikeouts.
- Threw four scoreless innings in the SEC Tournament semifinal against LSU, after coming in to pitch in the 6th inning in relief of Isaiah Campbell.
- His four innings out of the bullpen against LSU tied for his second-longest outing of the year.
- Matched his career-long with seven innings of relief against Dallas Baptist to clinch the NCAA Fayetteville Regional.
- Now has two appearances of seven innings this year (Auburn & Dallas Baptist) and has won both decisions.

GAME CREDENTIALS

Members of the media should contact John Thomas to request individual game credentials for Razorback home games. Credential requests should be made no later than noon (CT) the day before the scheduled contest and should be directed by e-mail to John Thomas. Credential requests for away games should be made to the communications contact of the home team. Only fully accredited personnel directly involved in the coverage of the game will be admitted. Credentials are non-transferable.

INTERVIEW POLICIES

Please direct all requests for interviews with coaches and players to John Thomas. For home SEC weekends, Coach Dave Van Horn will hold his weekly press conference on Thursday with players and assistant coaches available following Thursday's practice. On road SEC weekends, Coach Van Horn will hold his weekly press conference on Wednesday with players and assistant coaches available following Wednesday's practice. Players are not available for interviews on gamedays, except for post-game interviews. Post-game press conferences are held in the indoor Pitching Development Center located down the third base line. Coach Van Horn and two or three most requested Razorback players will address the media. In the event of a doubleheader, the only Arkansas player available between games for interviews is the starting pitcher of game one. The Arkansas clubhouse is off limits to the media at all times.

E-MAIL UPDATES

Members of the media may request to be added to the Arkansas communications baseball e-mail group. Subscribers will receive game notes, game stories and other information. To subscribe, send a request to John Thomas. Please identify yourself and your organization in your request as this service is only available to members of the media.

GAMEDAY MEDIA SERVICES

The Arkansas communications staff provides scorecards, rosters, updated statistics and results for each team in the Baum Stadium press box prior to home games. Box scores, play-by-play and any postgame notes are disseminated approximately 10 minutes after the conclusion of the game. An Associated Press-style game story is also produced by the communications office. Members of the media may request these stories be sent to their organization via e-mail by contacting a member of the communications office.

WIRELESS INTERNET

The Baum Stadium press box is equipped with wireless internet for use by the media. Media members should log on to the "UARK Media" network by using a password that will be provided at the stadium.

GAMEDAY LIVE STATS

Live in-game stats will be provided at http://arkansas.statbroadcast.com.

FACILITIES/PARKING

The Arkansas baseball team conducts all games at Baum Stadium at George Cole Field. Baum Stadium is located just off Razorback Road south of Martin Luther King, Jr., Boulevard. There is space for media parking on game day. Only cars with a parking credential will be allowed access to the parking lot.

PHOTOGRAPHERS

ARKANSAS ATHLETIC COMMUNICATIONS

The University of Arkansas athletic communications office is located on the main floor of Bud Walton Arena behind the Hog Heaven Store with office hours from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. You can often reach us at Bud Walton after hours, but if not, please leave a message on our voice mail system.

'Psycho' baseball strength coach got his start in NASCAR

By Matt Jones
WholeHogSports.com

October 2, 2017

FAYETTEVILLE — Before he got his start training baseball players, Blaine Kinsley cut his teeth in sports training by working out NASCAR pit crews.

As an assistant strength coach for Hendrick Motorsports in Charlotte, N.C., Kinsley was responsible for keeping in shape the jackman, the gas man and all the other men on the teams of Jimmie Johnson, Jeff Gordon, Dale Earnhardt Jr. and Mark Martin. If you think that doesn't sound like training real athletes, think again.

"They've gotten to the point to where they'll go to the NFL and take people that get cut from practice teams," Kinsley said. "The jackman for Mark Martin's team at the time was a guy named Aaron Walker, who was a football player at Florida. He was a big tight end, which is what they want for a jackman - strong and quick and can move.

"They like going after ex-athletes, especially baseball and football. The caliber of the athlete has changed a lot."

Kinsley said he enjoyed his NASCAR experience, but his true love was baseball. He was a setup man out of the bullpen at Lenoir-Rhyne, an NCAA Division II program in his home state of North Carolina, where he also played offensive line on the football team for two seasons.

Several pitstops later he finds himself in a spacious, mostly empty room that could only be described as the prototypical office for a strength coach, complete with a full-length mirror, a refrigerator and two-and-a-half empty shaker bottles on an old oak desk that, minus a computer monitor, is otherwise empty.

It's there, adjacent to the loading dock at Randal Tyson Track Center, that Kinsley can look out over his domain, about a dozen or so machines and benches where his newest bunch of athletes from the Arkansas baseball team work out. He was hired this summer to replace Mike Strouhal, who left after 14 seasons to work for a private training company.

Kinsley had spent the previous 10 months with the St. Louis Cardinals' Double-A affiliate in Springfield, Mo., and also had a chance to work with the big league team at spring training in Jupiter, Fla. Before that he was a strength coach at East Carolina after a two-year stint with the Chicago Cubs' minor league teams.

Kinsely was on the ground floor of the Cubs' World Series build, serving as a strength coach when Theo Epstein took over the team's general manager. Kinsley's minor leaguers included Javier Báez, Wilson Contreras and Jorge Soler.

"I remember the day when Soler signed," Kinsley said. "That was a big deal."

Arkansas coach Dave Van Horn cited Kinsley's work with professional baseball as one reason he hired him to replace Strouhal this summer.

"We wanted to get someone who had experience in baseball at the highest level as far as collegiately, and the professional experience is great," Van Horn said. "He's kind of someone who has been there and done that.

"When this job came open he jumped at the opportunity to come here. I know the players have really taken to him."

Kinsley's emphasis on lower-body workouts has resulted in several notable weight gains this off-season. Infielder Hunter Wilson said he has gained 22 pounds and pitcher Blaine Knight is 172 pounds, which he said was "definitely the heaviest" he has been in his life.

"Let me tell you, that guy is a psycho in the weight room," said Luke Bonfield, a senior who had gained 7 pounds in his first three weeks with Kinsley. "He works us out harder than we've ever worked out before, to the point where you're just pouring sweat."

Kinsley laughs at the psycho reference, but does admit his demeanor changes when it comes time to workout. His soft-spoken voice is replaced by a whistle in the weight room.

"I like to coach hard," Kinsley said. "I like guys playing hard and competing. Baseball, you have to compete every pitch and if you don't, that one pitch you take off might be the difference in the game. I like energy, enthusiasm and spirit. When we come in here, we tell them to bring the energy, bring the enthusiasm. You've got to get up for it. You've got to have a spirit that you want to compete, you want to win and want to get better.

"The things we do in here are going to mimmick the competitive nature of the game."

Kinsley, who turns 30 next week, calls his philosophy the "meat and potatoes" of weight-lifting, full of squats and presses. He isn't a believer in lifting heavy weights overhead.

"I like explosive stuff…pretty old school," Kinsley said. "The game is from the ground up, so we're going to hammer our legs quite a bit. You talk to the guys and we like to bend, to squat, power cleans. If you can't catch the clean…we make adjustments there.

"In everything we do we want the player to excel on the field. Whether you're a power guy or a speed guy, you're a finesse pitcher guy - the whole plan is to be individualized for you to meet your potential on the field. If it's a 6-6 first baseman or a 5-10 shortstop, we really take pride in here and try to get the full potential that translates to the field and their role on the team."

Kinsley's workouts jive well with Arkansas pitching coach Wes Johnson, who is known for his emphasis on lower-body training to gain endurance and power. The Razorbacks set a program record for strikeouts in a season in 2017, Johnson's first season on the job.

"I'll be honest with you, Wes Johnson is the best pitching coach in America," Kinsley said. "He's going to develop guys and he's going to get them strong. I can't tell you how much of an outstanding situation it is for a strength coach to work with him."

Kinsley was aware of Johnson prior to coming to Arkansas. With the Cardinals, Kinsley trained Dakota Hudson, who developed into a first-round draft pick after spending one season with Johnson at Mississippi State.

"What he learned from Coach Johnson at Mississippi State, he's actually taken with him and he's going to have success in the big leagues," Kinsley said. "I'm very fortunate to work with him. We're on the same page about everything. We want to get people strong and we want to get people tough when it comes down to make the 0-2 pitch.

Arkansas’ workouts begin as early as 6:30 some mornings. The conditioning is scheduled around other time demands such as class, tutoring and practice.

The workouts during fall practice are limited to about three times each week - low-volume sessions that take into consideration the work on the field that day or the day before.

Heavier workouts are reserved for the coming months of November, December and January. That’s also when big leaguers typically are hanging around the facility. Kinsley said he already has been contacted by some pro players about training with him in Fayetteville.

“I love to coach,” he said. “If you want to get better, I want to coach you.”

State of the Hogs: New players mesh with new ideas

By Clay Henry
WholeHogSports.com

October 10, 2017

FAYETTEVILLE — Talent is important. So is coaching. When the two come together, it can be fun, especially for the head coach.

Dave Van Horn might have the best of both worlds - a talented roster and two of the nation's best assistant coaches.

Why would I say that? That's what I see when I have watched fall baseball practices in the last four weeks. I've heard it from players, too. Sometimes it's off the record and sometimes it's from a veteran player like Carson Shaddy, who went on the record Tuesday ahead of the start to Arkansas baseball's fall intrasquad series.

“What's happening right now is that we have good pitching that is sharpening good hitting,” Shaddy said. “I think the hitting is pretty good, so that's helping the pitching.

“I think our pitching on this team – with top end guys like Blaine Knight and Isaiah Campbell - is as good as anything we'll see next spring.”

Van Horn agreed with Shaddy's assessment, then added, “Yes, we think our pitching is really good, but right now our hitters – and some of them are freshmen – are giving it to the pitchers.”

Wes Johnson is the second-year pitching coach and Nate Thompson in his first year as hitting coach.

There's a lot of belief that Thompson figures into the hitting surge. Van Horn also points out that there is growth in the pitching in the second year of all-around training (weight room and technique) with Johnson handling the pitchers.

“Both of them can recruit,” Van Horn said. “Wes really knows how to train pitchers. They have gotten much stronger with their legs. Dave Jorn did a great job with them, but I always tell our players you are going to play for a lot of different coaches and try to learn something from each one. Our guys are learning some new things from Nate and Wes.”

Shaddy, who hit .279 with 8 home runs and 40 RBI last season, thinks his offense has taken a jump with a flatter swing. He said he's staying in the hitting zone longer with the barrel of the bat.

“I think a lot of guys are saying that,” Van Horn said. “Nate has given them some drills to help them with that. They might have said, 'Whoa, what's this?' But they took it to the field and now they have taken it to the scrimmages. They see it working.”

Thompson had success with power numbers at Missouri State the last three seasons, including last year when Jeremy Eierman and Jake Burger formed college baseball's top power duo with 45 home runs.

Shaddy thinks the Hogs will hit home runs this spring, not a total surprise because they hit 83 to lead the SEC last year.

Chad Spanberger led the team with 20 and signed a pro contract after his junior season. But the Hogs return eight players who combined to hit 58 homers. They have hit plenty this fall.

“We hit home runs last year and I think we'll hit home runs again this year,” Shaddy said. “Coach Thompson has helped us and we are hitting the ball hard. That's the goal. I know I'm hitting it hard.”

Van Horn said Thompson's coaching points are about hitting it hard.

“There are so many things that figure into home run totals,” Van Horn said. “How many times do you get the right weather, wind and so forth, but I see the potential in this team to hit home runs.

“Nate has brought us some new philosophies and new drills. They are learning to keep the bat in the zone. We are trying to hit it hard and try to hit it over some heads. We are concentrating on hitting it hard and getting off as many good swings as we can.

“We can put a lineup out there where everyone on the field has power to hit home runs.”

Obviously, returnees Grant Koch (13 HRs), Dominic Fletcher (12), Luke Bonfield (9) and Shaddy all had good power years in 2017. Returnees Jax Biggers, Evan Lee, Jordan McFarland and Jared Gates can hit for power, too. There's power from newcomers Cole Turney, Heston Kjerstad and TCU transfer Zach Plunkett.

Kjerstad has impressed in the scrimmages. The freshman from Amarillo, Texas, has produced big hit totals in most of the live work.

“He's had a lot of scrimmages with three and four hits,” Van Horn said. “He's hit all of our top guys. It's going to be hard to keep him out of the lineup.”

Kjerstad, an outfielder, was an early commitment for Van Horn. He's grown into an impressive prospect.

“He was 5-11, 155 when he committed,” Van Horn said. “He's 6-3, 195 now. He's grown from a leadoff man to now I'd say he's going to be in the middle of the lineup. He's a lefty hitting outfielder. He hits it hard.”

There are other freshmen who will contribute, too. As far as hitters, Van Horn has seen good things from Casey Martin, Easton Murrell and Casey Opitz. On the mound, 6-8 righthander Jackson Rutledge has turned heads – or sometimes made hitters duck.

“He's big and it gets there in a hurry because it seems like he's closer,” Van Horn said. “He throws it 92, 95 and 96. Hitters don't like to hit off him. He's just wild enough.”

Van Horn said Martin, working at second and third base, is “incredibly talented. He's got a tremendous arm, is our fastest runner and has great bat speed. I see him playing as a freshman.”

Bonfield said the freshman class seems comfortable with the speed of the college game.

“They are more comfortable than I was when I was a freshman,” Bonfield said. “They seem ready.”

It's a deep roster.

“We've got guys who could start at other SEC schools who might be role players for us,” Bonfield said. “It's the best fall I've been a part of here.”

Elder statesman: Shaddy reaches college baseball rarity

By Matt Jones
WholeHogSports.com

October 24, 2018

FAYETTEVILLE — The final two days of the 2017 MLB Draft were hard on Carson Shaddy.

He thought he had played his last game at Baum Stadium a week earlier when Arkansas was eliminated by Missouri State in the NCAA Regional. He had grounded out to the shortstop for the second out in a 1-2-3 ninth.

Baseball players almost never spend five seasons in college - few even make it to their senior year - so Shaddy assumed his next stop would be on the busses of rookie-league baseball. But as he waited for his call, Day 2 became Day 3 of the draft and eventually all 40 rounds were over. He said his mom was crying when he wasn't drafted.

That isn't to say there weren't opportunities. Several teams inquired as to whether he would accept small signing bonuses - overtures he said "weren't worth" foregoing his final year of college eligibility.

Shortly before the final picks were off the board, Shaddy tweeted a screenshot of an iPhone note that began with, "After a long and disappointing 3 days, it's obvious that it didn't go the way I wanted it to go," and ended with, "ONE MORE YEAR!!!!!"

Four months later, Shaddy is at peace with being the rare fifth-year senior in college baseball. The disappointment has turned into drive to become better - a key piece in the Razorbacks' supremely talented 2018 squad.

"Coming back, I haven't regretted one thing about it because this team is the best team I've been on since I've been here," Shaddy said. "There's so much leadership and so much talent, and there's so much depth - it's just incredible. I'm very, very excited about this team."

His teammates seem happy to have him.

"I've known Carson forever and he's kind of like an older brother to me," said catcher Grant Koch, who played with Shaddy at Fayetteville High School. "I'm happy to have him back. I think everybody is."

Shaddy is one of the leaders on this year's team. He was a team captain last season and his experience at Arkansas trumps that of even some of his coaches. He's outlasted a hitting coach, a pitching coach, a strength coach and multiple volunteer coaches during his five years. Only the head coach Dave Van Horn, director of operations Clay Goodwin and trainer Corey Wood have been around the program longer.

"It's cool to get to see all the different kind of personalities that have come through here," Shaddy said. "…My favorite thing is being a Hog, so I've decided to take it one more year and enjoy this year."

Shaddy projects to start at second base against next season, making the first time in his career that he'll play the same spot two years in a row. He came to Arkansas as a catcher, spent most of his redshirt sophomore year at third base and even played some outfield.

If Shaddy starts at second, as expected, it will mean that he held off a talented group of middle infielders, most notably Hunter Wilson, who was expected to be a key player last season before suffering a deep shin bruise in mid-March that kept him out the rest of the year.

Shaddy's strength is his bat. He batted .279 - down from a team-best .332 average a year earlier - with 8 home runs and 40 RBI last season, which included a strong start to the campaign. His batting average peaked at .410 in early March and was still .350 following the Razorbacks' SEC opening series against Mississippi State.

In that series, Shaddy had two multi-hit games and hit a home run in each of the final two games of the series, an Arkansas sweep.

His weakness has been his fielding. Shaddy led the Razorbacks in errors each of the past two seasons, with 14 in 2015 and 16 last season.

"I feel like the last month of the season I showed I was more comfortable. Getting more experience at second has really helped me. I think this has been my best fall fielding and hitting. I just needed experience…I got put at second when I had never played second, so I knew there would be some growing pains.

"It's nice to be able to sit in the same spot and try to excel there….I feel like my feet are better and my hands are better, and the game has just kind of slowed down a little bit, too."

Van Horn, a former middle infielder, has worked extensively with Shaddy at second the past year. Shaddy missed some of fall practice with a wrist injury - it was unclear whether it was related to a 95 mph fastball from Jackson Rutledge that he took off the wrist - but Van Horn indicated he liked what he saw in the field from Shaddy when healthy.

"At some point instincts take over a little bit," Van Horn said. "He knows where to be every time and I think he's just gotten better with experience, repetition and just playing. He had a really good fall with the bat and the glove."

State of the Hogs: Campbell back and on a mission

FAYETTEVILLE — Isaiah Campbell threw Wednesday against live hitting in the Arkansas baseball team's individual workouts. The result was breathtaking, a consistent velocity of 95 to 96 mph with great command and location of pitches.

Campbell missed last season because of bone spurs in his pitching elbow, which required surgery. The pitching Wednesday was in the Fowler Center, not outside, but he faced regular position players.

"It was good to be throwing," Campbell said Thursday. "I was really pleased."

It may be that some of the hitters weren't pleased. Campbell is a different pitcher now than what they saw last fall.

"I added another pitch, a cutter/slider the last month of the fall and I was pleased with how it worked yesterday," Campbell said. "I'm still pleased that I have the downhill fast ball."

Campbell has an enhanced change-up and over-the-top curve to go with those other two pitches, making him tough on hitters from both sides of the plate.

Sophomore outfielder Dominic Fletcher didn't like hitting against Campbell on Wednesday, but took delight in knowing he's going to be in center when the big right-hander is on the mound next month.

"There won't be many teams score runs off of him," Fletcher said. "He was 95 to 96 with consistency yesterday. He's just got nasty stuff."

Lefty junior pitcher Kacey Murphy was working in the bullpen nearby when Campbell took on live hitters.

"I stopped," Murphy said. "I just had to see it. I'm sure he's still got more work to do before the opener, but I'd say he's 100 percent back and better.

"He looked really good. He looked confident."

Catcher Grant Koch wanted to be behind the plate for Campbell's session.

"I had to see it," Koch said. "His stuff got progressively better every pitch. It was electric, more electric than he's been. It was premier stuff.

"He always had that downhill fast ball that jumps and a 12 o'clock to 6 o'clock breaker. Now he's got a change and that cutter. All of it is off a downhill plane. You don't want to face that."

Campbell has more than some new pitches. He's got a new body. The 6-5 redshirt sophomore from Olathe, Kan., has lost 22 pounds from the start of the school year in August.

"I haven't done anything different workout wise," he said. "Same things there. It's what I'm eating."

It's more like what he's not eating.

"I quit eating the fries," he said. "I'm eating a lot of grilled chicken. I cheat about once a week with my favorite thing, some type of ice cream.

"I wanted to get lean muscles. It's helped my velocity and my endurance."

Arkansas pitching coach Wes Johnson raves about Campbell, who is likely to be the Razorbacks' Saturday starter behind Blaine Knight. Johnson says Campbell is "desperate" to prove himself and driven to be better after a year away from the game.

"I love to coach guys who are desperate," Johnson said. "What happened with Isaiah, something got taken away from him that he really loved.

"You see another gear, a different focus that elevated him more; his nutrition - every facet of the game that I didn't see all of last year."

Johnson noted 2018 is a draft year for Campbell, who is a redshirt sophomore.

"Those guys understand the importance of that," Johnson said. "He's come back and he's on a mission."

State of the Hogs: From ducks to batters, Knight brings heat

By Clay Henry

January 25, 2018

FAYETTEVILLE — Blaine Knight is built like a basketball player, long and wiry. Listed at 6-3 and 165 pounds, he'd fit in alongside the Arkansas basketball team.

It wouldn't have worked. Duck season doesn't cooperate with hoops.

Duck season does match perfectly with what Knight does best, pitch in grand fashion for the Arkansas baseball team.

It is interesting to see how many baseball players gravitate to duck hunting. Big league catcher James McCann, raised in Santa Barbara, Calif., had never thought of hunting until he played college baseball at Arkansas. But it fits with the offseason and has provided great release over the winter.

Knight grew up in a far different way from McCann. Duck hunting was a way of life in Bryant. He learned to build a duck call from his grandfather. He tunes calls for his teammates.

It's no surprise that Rachel Box, a catcher for the Arkansas softball team from White Hall, also loves to duck hunt. Knight quickly produced a picture of the couple with limits of ducks. There was also a duck hunting picture with the two of them with close friend Josh Alberius, a former UA pitcher, with his wife, the former Claire Clark, a former UA softball player.

"You talked to Blaine about duck hunting?" said Grant Koch at the start of another interview. "That took awhile, didn't it?

"I hunt a little, but not like Blaine. He's going to drive home every off day in the fall and winter, either to deer hunt or duck hunt. We have the report on what's going on when he comes back. The whole team knows whether the woods are frozen, the ducks are here or it's not worth going. We know he's giving it to us right."

Deer hunting?

"Oh, it's just something to do before duck season opens," Knight said. "I love duck hunting. I will go if I've got a day and I might go if I can get back for practice."

There are a bunch more that love it, but Knight might be the lead duck hunter on the team, but some former teammates are right there with him.

"Josh Alberius loves it, too," he said. "I've hunted with Josh the last three years. James Teague likes it, too."

There's a story about Teague calling Alberius about the possibility of a hunt west of his home in Bartlesville, Okla.

"I think Teague called Josh about 10 o'clock one night saying he had ducks," Knight said. "We were on the road pretty quickly. We got to Teague's about 3 a.m., got ready and were in the blind in another hour; never slept."

Knight knows his way in and out of the Bayou Meto Wildlife Management Area near Stuttgart. It's some of the best public shooting in the world, but it's often crowded. He also hunts the Cache River.

"If it's Bayou Meto, I have to get up at 3, leave at 3:30," he said. "For the Cache, it's more like 2, on the road at 2:30. I don't care.

"I hate the boat races at Bayou Meta. It helped when they put in gates in the woods. You have to slow down. You are going to wreck a boat if you don't. I don't race. I'll find a spot somewhere."

He's into the calling and the work it takes to tune a call. That means carving the reeds.

"I tune all the calls for my teammates," he said. "I got to know Rick Dunn and learned a lot from him."

Dunn's Echo Calls have produced many world championships at Stuttgart. I have one of his calls, given to me by champion caller David St. John of Conway. St. John works for the Beebe company. Knight perked up at my story of giving a band to St. John, then getting a personalized red call with a Razorback on it from Echo Calls.

"That's how they are," Knight said. "They are great people."

That's the feel you get from Knight. It's fun to watch him head to the railing before and after games in Baum Stadium to sign autographs.

"We are going to do that," he said. "I know how much it means to those kids. It meant a lot to me as a kid. I grew up in Bryant going to Travelers games – sometimes to see the Razorbacks there – and coming to Baum Stadium to see the Razorbacks."

There is proof of that hanging on the wall at home. It's a framed picture with Knight and Arkansas coach Dave Van Horn.

"My mom has a picture of me standing on the home dugout (at Baum Stadium) handing Coach Van Horn a ball for him to autograph," Knight said. "I was 12. He talked to me for 10 minutes. I went home the happiest I've ever been.

"So that's why I want to pay it back. I'm going to sign everything the kids bring to the wall. We were all kids once."

Knight probably didn't think he'd be signing autographs at Arkansas for his junior season. He was the best of Arkansas' starting pitchers in SEC play with a 6-3 record and a 3.38 ERA in 10 games. Overall, he was 8-4 with 96 strikeouts and only 20 walks.

Most thought that his fastball, regularly clocked at 94 mph with highs on hot guns close to 100, would attract an early draft number. But his asking price was too high and teams stayed clear. The Texas Rangers finally took him in the 29th round with the 884th pick. Knight quickly turned them down.

"I didn't really know what was going to happen," he said. "There were days that I thought I would not be back and days that I was on the fence. It all happens for a reason. God has a plan and it's for me to pitch here and I'm happy with it.

"We have a great older bunch with a really good young group, too. It's falling together for a great year. I came back with talented players and great coaches."

The Hogs have been in every preseason top 10 and picked as the likely national champ by D1 Baseball's Kendall Rogers.

"We are highly ranked," Knight said. "You look and it's anywhere from third to sixth. It's awesome. It's a great thing for the program.

"But you have to go play and it doesn't really matter for much. I take it as motivation. I guess it's a good pat on the back for what we do, but just that mention by Kendall Rogers doesn't get us anything. Go play.

"The key is to do what we did last year, play like our hair is on fire. Results prove what you are and that's what we know we have to do, win games."

Pitching coach Wes Johnson knows there are big expectations for Knight, just like the Hogs. Knight has been picked on a preseason All-America team. Johnson told Knight to quit reading the Twitter accounts of the top national media guys.

“I sat down with Blaine and wanted to check in with him and make sure he’s grounded because he is getting a lot of hype,” Johnson said. “I wanted to make he’s doing OK mentally. He seems to be really grounded.

“I challenged Dakota Hudson (at Mississippi State) with this back in 2016 because he was getting a lot of the same hype because of how he had performed in the Cape Cod League, but he wasn’t like Blaine; he hadn’t done anything in the SEC prior to that year.

“I told Blaine, ‘We go together.’ I challenged him to get off social media and to join a ban with me not to look at social media, and just put his head down and go. We’re talking five months, come on, you can live without it for five months.”

That’s when results will take the place of expectations.

“Blaine’s ability on the field is not going to be what defines his year,” Johnson said. “It’s going to be how he handles this off the field, in the media room after a game when he’s thrown well and we may lose. Blaine is probably in the top three competitors I’ve coached in my 21 years doing this. He’s such a competitor on the mound.

“Now he’s going to be the Friday night guy everyone is talking about. How can he handle success? I want him to be able to handle success and also handle failure. His stuff is fine, but that’s where he’s got to get to."

The schedule may be the most difficult any Arkansas team has attempted with games against Arizona, Southern Cal, Texas, Texas Tech and Missouri State - and that's just in the nonconference.

“Fun, that’s what it looks like to me,” Knight said. “I know it’s tough competition, but that’s what you want. Tough games are fun. If you win 14-1, it’s no fun. Games are not fun when they are easy. Tough and fun is what I expect every day with this schedule.”

Knight thinks he’s better in the second year under pitching coach Wes Johnson. He’s just not much bigger.

“I think I was around 165 (pounds) last year, maybe up over that at some points, but I don’t hold it,” Knight said.

No one is ever going to say he’s fat, no matter what he eats.

“Seriously, I don’t think I’ll ever be fat,” he said. “Maybe when I get to 60, right?”

That does sound right.

“I think I’m up 8 to 10 (pounds) from last year,” he said. “But I just don’t know if I can keep it. It doesn’t matter what I eat or do, it just doesn’t stay with me.

“It’s so frustrating to get on the scales one day and you have dropped 2 pounds. What I keep telling myself, that I’m built this way for a reason and I’m flexible and can throw with velocity. I believe that.

“I think it goes from 172 to 175 now, but I tell everyone I can eat a whole package of Oreo cookies and lose 3 pounds.”

Junior pitcher Kacey Murphy knows that’s true.

“We watch what he eats,” Murphy said. “None of the rest of us can do that. I sure can’t. It wouldn’t be good if one of the other pitchers ate a package of cookies like that. I don’t even want to hear him talk about it.”

Knight marvels at what he’s learned from Johnson, even if there have been no great revelations on how to add weight.

Asked to explain the knowledge Johnson has given the UA pitchers, Knight fired back, “How much paper do you have? Coach Johnson is a stud, a dude. I learned more about pitching in the last two years than the rest of my life. I didn’t think you could learn that much more, but he keeps helping us figure things out.”

That’s the good news “about not signing,” Knight added. There is another year to develop under Johnson.

“What he’s helped me do is figure out how to understand my body and when I don’t have a pitch or you just aren’t your best,” Knight said. “He’s taught me to figure out what each pitch is doing that day and adjust to it. I think when you look back, you have your best stuff maybe one, two or three times all season.

“There was that LSU game last year when everything worked. There was not another day like that. You’d have a pitch you couldn’t locate to one side of the plate, then you have to deal with adversity.

“Of course, he’s helped all of us with our velocity, but it’s the mental side where we’ve made a jump.”

Johnson sees the jump in Knight, especially in maturity. Falling in the draft below what some expected lit a fire under Knight.

“It has done two things for him,” Johnson said. “He’s worked even harder and found that next level in working. For me, he’s more mature which leads to him being more relaxed. He knows what we’re fixing to get into. He knows the grind of the SEC and getting everybody’s best bullet every weekend, even in your non conference games.

“From the workout, weight room side, to the maturity of understanding a pen or a pitch - like yesterday, we were working on a couple of pitches and if a guy hits him because he’s working on a pitch he’s fine. He knows the end goal is I’ve got to have this pitch to be successful in this league. Whereas last year he would’ve been ticked he gave up a hit. He has really matured.”

Knight sees a deep staff of pitchers.

“Unbelievably deep,” Knight said. “I look at our roster and see 20 guys who could help us. My freshman year there was no depth and guys had to go twice on the weekend. I know I got doubled up most weeks. It takes a toll.

“I don’t think we’ll see that this year. Guys like Jake Reindl pitched twice a lot on SEC weekends. I don’t think we’ll need that this year.

“We’ve got veterans, but we’ve also got talented freshmen. They won’t have to be thrown into the fire like we did my freshman year, but some are going to surprise people. Guys like Jackson Rutledge, Bryce Bonnin, Caleb Bolden and Hunter Milligan may get chances to show what they can do in this league.

“It won’t be easy. You’ll go out there and get knocked around. It’s going to happen to all of us. But we’ve got enough guys that if you get smoked, we can roll with the next guy.”

Blaine Knight doesn’t get smoked too often on the mound. Usually, when that word is mentioned, it’s what he’s doing to batters – or ducks.

Stronger Biggers proves to be tougher out

By Clay Henry
Hawgs Illustrated

January 26, 2018

FAYETTEVILLE — Arkansas pitcher Isaiah Campbell marvels at the work ethic from shortstop Jax Biggers and saw firsthand the way he battles in the box during the fall.

In a few weeks it will finally be time to let the opposition try to get Biggers out.

“I want to face some guys with something beside Arkansas on the jerseys,” Campbell said. “We’ve battled each other long enough.”

That goes double for seeing Biggers.

There are a few more scrimmages where Arkansas pitchers face Biggers. There’s one set for Saturday around 12:30 p.m. following media day for the baseball team. It is free and open to the public, weather permitting.

Biggers will be fighting pitch after pitch. He’ll whack a borderline pitch foul, or pass on those just out of the zone pressing pitchers to the limit each at bat.

Biggers hit the ground running last season, his first with the Hogs after a season at Cisco Junior College in central Texas. The junior from Missouri City, Texas, led the Hogs in hitting last season with a sparkling .338 average. It was tops among SEC regulars at shortstop.

“He’s a guy I love off the field, but not so much on the field,” Campbell said. “I’m talking about our scrimmages. I faced Jax four times in the fall. It went 10 pitches all four times, 45 total. He competes.

“I love the way he competes in the field, too. That’s exciting to take the mound with him at shortstop.

“I’ve never seen anyone work that hard. Grant (Koch) and Jax are hitting every time I go into the indoor facility. What he puts himself through is grueling.”

Biggers said his dad, a former college baseball coach, told him the best way to field ground balls is when you are tired.

“You want to hit until you get fatigued, then take grounders,” he said. “I just want to get better.”

There is a belief that first-year assistant Nate Thompson made Biggers better.

“I sure think so,” Biggers said. “He’s a great coach. I know everyone gets something different from him, but me personally, it was how to handle the low and away pitch. I never have had much power my entire life, but I’ve gained about 15 pounds and it’s a lot in my legs. I’ve been weak in my legs my whole life. Not now. He’s helped me learn how to use that leg strength.”

Thompson learned to appreciate Biggers when he saw him last year as a Missouri State assistant. The Razorbacks and Bears played four times in 2017, including three times in the NCAA regional.

“Jax is a big-time gamer, man,” Thompson said. “ He hit a triple and a double last year in the game in Springfield and he’s just motoring around the bases, just flying it felt like.

“I was sitting there thinking, ‘Man, this guy can really hit, can really run and he’s dynamic.’ He’s got a little bit of pop that I think is going to play to the pull side. He’s tough and he’s really smart.

“He’s done a really nice job this fall of flattening his swing a little. He produced last year in a big-time way - hit over .330 against the quality of competition Arkansas faced last year, which was pretty outstanding. We don’t want to fix something that’s not broken, but I felt like there was a little more there and I think if he plays with the bunt game a little bit, too, he’s going to be hard to defend.

“He can drive one of out of the yard, he can hit a double or triple into the gap real easy or he can have a 10-pitch at-bat. He’s very multi-dimensional. I love that kid.”

Biggers is glad the season is about to begin. He can’t wait for the opening weekend against Bucknell starting Feb. 16.

“The quicker I got back from Christmas, the sooner we would be playing and I can’t wait for this season,” Biggers said.

“We are all eager because we know what we’ve got. We should be good. We were good last year. We were probably better than what people thought we’d be, but we didn’t do as well as we should have done.

The Hogs didn’t need DI Baseball lead writer Kendall Rogers picking them to win the national title to get their minds on a championship run.

“If you don’t know it’s the goal here, then you probably aren’t here,” Biggers said. “I mean, you come here for that shot. It’s the goal of every one of us. We have everything you need to win it here.”

Biggers was talking about facilities, fans and coaches.

“That’s why I came here,” he said. “I know that’s the goal for our coaches.”

Arkansas coach Dave Van Horn said that’s why the 2018 schedule is loaded with top out-of-conference games against Texas, Texas Tech, Arizona, Missouri State and Southern Cal. There’s no doubt the SEC is as strong as ever, full of older players, just like the Razorbacks.

“You look at this schedule and you get excited,” he said. “It’s great for the fans. I wanted that for them, but then you realize it’s a big mountain to climb.

“I did it because I want to win a national championship. That’s how you do it.”

The goal is to face the kind of schedule that will put the Hogs – if successful – in the running for a national seed, which would keep them at Baum Stadium for the first two rounds of the NCAA Tournament.

“If we handle it, it will get us prepared for what we want to do, play deep into June,” he said. “It will give our pitchers a chance to face great competition in the midweek games. We have the depth that we don’t have to recycle guys.

“If someone saves their top guy for us, we’ll have someone good. Everyone wants to beat an SEC team, so we will get some of that. We should have a big RPI if we play well.”

The Hogs are as solid through the middle of the field with Biggers setting a great example as a workaholic.

“We have to run him out of here,” Van Horn said. “He’s a baseball gym rat.

“I really like what we have in the middle of the field. You want to be strong there, and we are with Grant at catcher, Jax at shortstop, Carson Shaddy at second base and Dominic Fletcher in center. We've got depth at all of those positions, too."

All four of those have an all-conference look. Koch led the USA Collegiate National Team in hitting last summer. Depth is good everywhere, including at catcher where Koch had to go without rest for much of last season.

Van Horn has the option of resting Biggers some, too. The pitchers on the Arkansas staff hope he does it in some of the scrimmages over the next three weeks. They are tired of those 10-pitch at bats.

State of the Hogs: It's all about Cole on baseball media day

By Clay Henry
WholeHogSports.com

January 27, 2018

FAYETTEVILLE — Most just refer to the home of the Arkansas baseball team as Baum Stadium. That it's also George Cole Field gets lost more times than not.

To be more specific, it's Charlie Baum Stadium at George Cole Field. I think with the way things are falling in place for the Razorbacks, it's a good time to emphasize Cole.

I'm not really writing about the field, but the players on the field. Specifically, I wanted to point out that Eric Cole and Cole Turney were among the focal points at baseball media day Saturday.

I was going to get to Kole Ramage, too, but the way he spells his name was like one of his tough off-speed pitches. Sorry, but I didn't get to Kole.

Arkansas coach Dave Van Horn set the table for the Cole story with his comments to a packed media room to start the morning. To set the stage, he was talking about two players both out during the fall with injuries.

Eric Cole is the junior from Southlake, Texas, who has the dubious distinction of becoming an every day player last year despite a .126 slump through non-conference play. Cole hit .315 in SEC games, raising his average to .282 overall.

Cole missed fall with a stress fracture in his back. He's full speed now with no problems.

Cole Turney is the true freshman from Richmond, Texas. The 6-0, 225-pound lefty was the top-rated hitter in Texas before tearing up a shoulder during his senior season. He committed to former UA assistant Tony Vitello as a sophomore, although Van Horn never thought he'd make it to campus.

“When he committed, we all said, 'Great, but he's not ever coming to school,'" Van Horn said.

Then, injuries - he also has battled an ankle problem - scared off the scouts.

"He couldn't throw last year and the ankle was a problem,” Van Horn said. “Until then, he was going to be a late first-rounder.

“We got his (labrum) fixed and he's still not throwing yet, but he can sure swing that bat. His first batting practice the other day after getting cleared, he hit one in the middle of the batter's eye in center. He could grab our DH spot.”

Eric Cole might be the leadoff man. At least, he was the leadoff man Friday – over and over.

Van Horn wanted to give him extra at-bats after sitting out the fall. Van Horn said he hit six times, but Cole said it was seven.

“I'll take it,” Cole said. “I was glad to hit. He said he wanted to get me caught up. He had me lead off four straight innings.”

Cole had a single, double and home run in a grand day. Van Horn reminded that Cole had three of the team's five hits in a losing effort in the Friday night game against Missouri State in the NCAA tournament.

“Yeah, that game still bothers me,” Van Horn said, slipping briefly into a mad face.

There is hardly anything to make him mad these days. This may be his best 35-man roster in his 16 seasons at Arkansas. It will be difficult to pick the top 27 for SEC games.

The veterans are good, but the freshmen are turning heads. Turney's time in the batting cage is must see for the entire squad. It's like last year when lefty power man Chad Spanberger took swings. Turney seems to hit the all the way to Foghorns across the road in right field.

“It's wow stuff,” said Grant Koch, the starting catcher.

“I honestly do stop to watch Turney. It's the same kind of stuff that you saw from Spanberger. The ball jumps off his bat. He's more compact, a different body type than Chad. But it's the same results.”

Pitcher Blaine Knight was disappointed to miss Turney's first time in the cage earlier this week.

“I was inside getting a bullpen,” he said. “But we all heard about it. I'm told he has the same kind of power that Chad had. When we'd play on the road in SEC games, every one in the park would be on the top step in BP to watch Chad.

“I'm looking forward to seeing it as we move along to games. That's when you have time to watch BP.

“All the hitters are talking about Turney. When someone has that kind of power, you stop and watch.”

Eric Cole said the same thing.

“You start comparing someone to Spanberger, that's saying something,” Cole said. “But I think Turney is more advanced from where Spanberger was as a freshman.”

That's heady stuff. Turney was humbled when told all of that Saturday morning.

“The main thing, I'm just glad to be back out there,” he said. “It was awfully tough to sit and watch in the fall after having surgery.

“I never saw Spanberger in person, but I watched him a lot on TV last year. He was fantastic.”

Turney is just starting to throw. He won't cut loose from the outfield until deep in the season and isn't likely to do anything but DH as a freshman.

“I'm out there shagging balls and doing some drills, but I can't throw,” he said. “I'm just glad to be swinging the bat again and feeling good.”

It took him a little bit to get back in shape.

“I'm 225 (pounds) now and I think that's my playing weight,” he said. “I didn't get to do anything for six weeks after the surgery and I got up to 230. I needed to lose a little bit.”

As far as Van Horn's comments about Turney destined to be drafted and sign, he said, “I don't think that was true. I wanted this kind of an atmosphere, like a family. It would have taken an awful lot for me not to be at school. I wanted to be here. This is a great situation. I've never been in a locker room with this kind of talent.”

Eric Cole's weight is headed the other direction. He was 175 pounds when he came to school and has packed on 30 pounds in the last two and a half years.

“I'm at 205 right now, so much stronger,” he said. “It's helped me in a lot of ways. My arm is stronger.”

Van Horn said Cole might have been the Hogs' toughest out down the stretch last season. It helps that he's good from both sides, a solid switch hitter. He's got some power, too.

“I think he's got more power this year,” Van Horn said. “And he can really run, steal a base for us.”

Cole still thanks his coach for sticking with him through a tough stretch to open last season.

“I made a couple of adjustments at the plate and that helped,” Cole said. “I am glad Coach Van Horn still had confidence to put me on the field when I was hitting .126. I guess he had seen something in me before that to keep playing me.”

Well, the field has his name.

Lee fulfilling childhood dream while taking on expanded role

By Scottie Bordelon

January 29, 2018

FAYETTEVILLE — Evan Lee was cold and soaked from head to toe when he got the call from the Arkansas dugout well after 2 a.m. on June 5th.

Dave Van Horn was turning to the true freshman lefthander to close out Missouri State and extend Arkansas' season at least one more game.

That he did. The Bryant native struck out the Bears' Justin Paulsen at 3:12 a.m. to end the wild, controversial 11-10 marathon game and set up a rematch 15 hours later with a Super Regional berth on the line.

"I respect him so much for giving me that opportunity, and I wasn't about to let him down," Lee said Saturday at Arkansas' annual baseball media day. "I was going to get it done for him."

Each appearance throughout the season - vs. Texas A&M, Auburn, Ole Miss, Mississippi State - prepared Lee for that moment.

He'd never experienced pre-game jitters like he did prior to his first career start against Louisiana Tech. Lee struggled, working just one inning while giving up a pair of hits and three earned runs. From that, he became more composed on the mound and an arm the staff looked to in tough spots.

"He's been thrown into the fire a little bit before, and he's not scared," Van Horn said after Lee secured the save against Missouri State. "What I like about Evan, mentally, is he doesn't act like he's a first-year college kid. He's mature for his age. He's a coach's kid and pretty intense."

Lee will be counted on on the mound and in the outfield once again this spring. He was arguably Arkansas' top option as a pinch hitter last season, too, reaching base six times in seven pinch-hit appearances.

On top of those responsibilities he's slotted to see time at first base, Van Horn said. It's a position Lee hasn't played since he was nine years old, but he's up for anything that will help Arkansas reach its full potential.

The move to first began as an experiment in a team scrimmage last fall. Van Horn shifted Lee to the right side of the infield and he excelled. With a talented cast of outfielders and what Van Horn calls the deepest roster of his Arkansas tenure, the expanded role gives Lee his best shot at seeing time in the field.

Grant Koch said he's taken notice of Lee's progression at first base and marvels at his versatility.

"Seriously, he's developed a lot at first base and it's something we didn't really expect," said Koch, one of the team's three captains this season. "He looks good over there and he's really smooth. We see him working and making sure he's getting better over there. That'd be great for us. He can do anything."

Footwork around the bag and flyball communication have been the biggest challenges so far. Throw bunt coverages into the mix as well. While there is a definite learning curve, Lee catches on quick.

"Yeah, there's guys that probably have six years under their belt as first basemen, and I've got three months, but I think I'll do it" he said. "There's so much you have to know as a first baseman and so many technical things that are involved. It's one of the most important positions.

"On the infield the ball is swirling and the game is faster compared to the outfield."

Lee believes in his skillset because he's had great coaches and mentors along the way, including former Bryant High School baseball coach Kirk Bock and his father, Mike.

The sophomore says he wouldn't be where his now without his father's guidance. Mike Lee, the standing athletic director at Bryant, was a third baseman/shortstop from 1986-89 and eventual volunteer assistant coach at the University of Central Arkansas in his day before becoming an area scout in the Kansas City Royals organization.

Then Evan was born, and the travel that accompanied the scouting gig took its toll.

"He'd show up one day and I would crawl to him. He'd be gone for 180 days and I'd walk to him. It broke him down," Lee said. "From what everyone has told him and me is that if he would have stuck with it he would have been in the front office for the Royals.

"But he chose to be with me and my sister (Megan), and I thank him every day for that because that's a father figure in your life, and he knew that."

Evan soaked up his father's wealth of baseball knowledge as best he could growing up, especially at the plate. Mike was a .318 career hitter at UCA.

"There's only two left-handed people in my whole family and I'm one of them, so he had to teach me from opposite sides, kind of like a mirror effect," he said. "That helped me understand things really fast and how to play the game. I just remember as a kid it being really cool having my dad teach me the game."

Lee became accustomed to Baum Stadium at a young age. There are photos back home of a two-year-old Evan calling the Hogs above the first base dugout. The Lees are a big baseball family, and watching the Razorbacks up close is a longstanding tradition.

He dreamed of one day getting to play on George Cole Field, and the commitment process was cut and dry once then-Arkansas assistant coach and recruiting coordinator Tony Vitello extended an offer.

He was on board 15 minutes later.

"I got a call, walked outside and Arkansas offered. I walked back inside to tell my parents, walked back outside and committed," Lee said with a smile recalling the day. "It's been my dream school since I was a little kid.

"To be able to fulfill that dream was the greatest day of my life. It was a joy."

Thompson settles into role on this side of the Ozarks

By Matt Jones
WholeHogSports.com

February 4, 2018

FAYETTEVILLE — When Hunter Yurachek was hired as Arkansas' athletics director late last year, he commented that his best win had just become his worst loss.

Yurachek's popular quote was in reference to Houston's blowout win over Arkansas' basketball team three days before he was hired by the Razorbacks. Yurachek formerly led the athletics program at Houston.

Nate Thompson could relate to that sentiment. One week after his Missouri State team eliminated Arkansas during an NCAA regional at Baum Stadium last June, Thompson found himself on the phone with Razorbacks coach Dave Van Horn, discussing the possibility of changing sides in a budding regional rivalry.

For fans, hiring Thompson away from Missouri State kind of served as bittersweet revenge for the Bears' celebration - one that featured a dog pile and a Gatorade bath - on the Baum mound days earlier, an Arkansas loss that left the Razorbacks at home following their first home regional in seven years.

For Van Horn, the hire was more prudent than vengeful. Not only had Thompson coached Missouri State into one of college baseball's highest-scoring teams, but he had developed a reputation as a strong recruiter in areas long valued by Arkansas.

And for Thompson, the move just made good business sense. The Razorbacks' affiliation with the Southeastern Conference commands a higher profile than Missouri State's and the Missouri Valley Conference, opening the door to more recruits and, down the line, potential head coaching jobs.

That Thompson, 35, was so familiar with Arkansas helped in his decision to make the move. During his three seasons at Missouri State, Thompson coached in 10 games against the Razorbacks, including six during the NCAA postseason.

"That was somewhat unique," he said. "I love playing in this park. Opposing teams love to come here and play. The crowd and how intense they are, they're fun. I wanted to come here for a regional because of those aspects."

Thompson also had indirect ties to Arkansas' coaches, Van Horn and pitching coach Wes Johnson. As a volunteer coach at Nebraska, Thompson had coached under Mike Anderson, a former Van Horn assistant during the Cornhuskers' great run in the early 2000s that included two trips to the College World Series. As a player at Dallas Baptist, his hitting coach was Dan Heefner, who later became the program's head coach and hired Johnson as a pitching coach, part of a series of events that built DBU into one of the nation's best small-school programs.

Thompson said he relied on advice from Johnson and Heefner before he accepted the position at Arkansas. He also spoke to his older brother, Mitch, a former college assistant at Baylor and Auburn who now is the head coach at McLennan Community College in Waco, Texas.

He said the advice all was largely the same, that Arkansas was a great place to work. The hitting coach job was a coveted position, having served as a launching pad for Todd Butler to become head coach at Wichita State in 2013 and Tony Vitello to become head coach at Tennessee last year.

Thompson was given a lucrative contract by college baseball standards - $165,000 annually for two years - and plenty of money to spend on recruiting nationwide.

"The recruiting aspect is great," Thompson said. "You have incredible resources and if you need to go see a guy, you go see him. You feel like you have what you need and have a legit shot at anyone in the country. That's awesome."

The resources have extended beyond recruiting. Thompson has brought new concepts and drills for hitters to use.

"He's going to help you if you need it, but he's not trying to change us," said Grant Koch, a junior catcher. "You see the new things he's gotten for us, like extra long bats (for drills) to help our extension."

"He's got boxing bags hanging for us to swing into," said Jax Biggers, a junior shortstop. "There are wooden bats with screws in the barrels to hook on stretch bands. I think that's not so much for bat speed as it is to increase our core muscles for control. He's given us new ideas on a lot of things. What he's done for me is help show how to use your legs and that's going to add power. I'm not a home run guy, but he's added to what I've got."

Dominic Fletcher said, "What he brings plays into what I was trying to do. I am a drive-the-ball guy. He gives you freedom and we know he's had success. He has drills to get you warmed up, heavy bats and things to create extension. It's all things to create more power."

Developing power in hitters was something Thompson developed a reputation of doing during his time at Missouri State. The Bears had college baseball's top home run-hitting duo the past two seasons. Jake Burger and Spencer Johnson combined to hit 45 home runs in 2016, and Burger and Jeremy Eierman combined to hit 45 home runs last season.

Burger, who was a first-round pick (11th overall) of the Chicago White Sox last summer, credited Thompson for turning line drive doubles his freshman season into line drive home runs the next two years, saying Thompson taught him "to put more balls in the air and hit the bottom half of the ball."

Eierman, a potential first-round shortstop in this year's draft, saw similar Year 1 to Year 2 power surge. He hit 23 home runs last season, including three during the Bears' regional win in Fayetteville.

Thompson says he doesn't love home runs as much as he loves to see players "hit it hard."

"I really encourage guys to hit the ball hard and be aggressive, especially if they have the ability to drive the baseball, if they have the ability to hit the ball with excessive exit velocity," Thompson said.

"The only two stats I think matter at the end of the day are runs and RBIs. I want to find a way to create runs and RBIs, and utilize the skills and tools each player has…encourage them to play their game and to know their game, and be smart about it.

"It's not an all or nothing mentality. We want to drive the baseball and play with speed, but we want to be really tough, too, and have the mindset to grind out at bats when needed. It's good of individual baseball, but I think it's good for team baseball, too."

Like at Missouri State, Thompson has a talented group of hitters to work with at Arkansas in 2018. The Razorbacks return seven position players who started the final game last year, as well as a number of other bench players and a talented freshman class that will compete for playing time.

“He knows he’s inherited a good group of older guys, but he’s also excited about our young players,” Van Horn said. “Nate brings a lot of energy to the park. He’s introduced our players to new things, both concepts and drills.

“I tell our players all the time that they need to learn something from every coach who works with them. We’ve had good coaches here. That goes for Todd Butler, Dave Jorn, Tony Vitello and now with Wes Johnson and Nate Thompson. Take something from everyone.

Logging off: Knight among Razorbacks taking social media hiatus in 2018

By Scottie Bordelon
WholeHogSports.com

February 6, 2018

FAYETTEVILLE — A quick glance around the field is all it takes for Arkansas players and coaches to know what kind of team they have entering the 2018 season.

Blaine Knight turned down big-league money to head a loaded pitching staff with Keaton McKinney and Isaiah Campbell back in the fold alongside a skilled group of young arms.

Dominic Fletcher, named a freshman All-American following a 12-homer season, anchors the outfield. Grant Koch, a D1Baseball preseason All-American and Arkansas' leading returning home run hitter, manages the gifted rotation as a second-year captain.

It's easy to understand why praise has poured in from far and wide in the last month. Arkansas is ranked in the top five in three national polls and as high as No. 6 in the USA Today Coaches' Poll - the program's highest preseason ranking since 2013.

It would also be easy for the roster to get swept up in the hype. But pitching coach Wes Johnson, Knight and others have crafted a plan to assure that won't happen — a social media hiatus.

"I just need to worry about pitching and not what people are saying or worry about where I'm ranked in the preseason in the draft," said Knight, the first Arkansas pitcher to be named a Louisville Slugger preseason All-American since Zach Jackson in 2016. "I just need to worry about pitching and taking this team where we need to go."

Johnson has implemented the tactic before, challenging former Mississippi State right-hander Dakota Hudson to take a break from social media in 2016 following a strong showing in the Cape Cod League.

Johnson has identified a trend over the years, and relays stories of multiple players who have become absorbed by extensive publicity.

"Then if you have a bad outing there's going to be some saying you're the worst we've ever had, and 'What are we doing pitching you on Saturday nights?'" he said.

Hudson went on to lead the Bulldogs' pitching staff with nine wins and a team-high 115 strikeouts in 17 starts the next spring as Mississippi State had a worst-to-first turnaround in the SEC. Johnson hopes the experiment can assist Knight in building on an 8-win campaign in 2017.

"It's not so much that it's me passing it on to Blaine, it's just that I've seen what's happened to so many good players. This is your career," Johnson said. "When this guy gets caught up in all this his performance suffers. It's not my views, or imposing that on anybody, it's just what we've seen over history.

"I've also talked to Isaiah Campbell a little more. Isaiah obviously has a little pressure on him, but he's still got stuff to prove, too, because he wasn't throwing last year. It's just to help keep them grounded."

Johnson often tells his staff that it's "really boring" being a great pitcher. "You don't call home to your parents and say, 'Hey, I worked on pickoff throws today,'" Johnson said.

The great ones are creatures of habit and extremely detail oriented, so the fewer distractions in front of them the better, he said.

Knight, admittedly, isn't a big Twitter user. He has just two tweets to his name since announcing his return to Arkansas on July 7, 2017, and his last tweet came more than two weeks ago in a friendly back and forth with former Mississippi State star and reigning SEC Player of the Year Brent Rooker.

Strong outing or lackluster, Knight won't be scrolling through his mentions or entering his name in a search bar anytime soon.

"I have it just to keep up with stuff. I kind of need to stay away from it and just focus on baseball," the wiry junior said. "I think it'd be good for the whole team to do it. It keeps you level-headed and doesn't let your head get too big.

"It is useful if you use it the right way, but it can be the downfall of a lot of guys if they use it the wrong way."

Sophomore Evan Lee agrees that taking time off from social media would benefit the team. He, like many other players, use Twitter as a source for daily news and thumb through their timelines to kill time, but logging off for the season will take him back to a simpler time.

"If you get off social media and just play it would be like you were 9-10 years old again where all you cared about was playing the game and getting a snow cone after," he said. "I didn't know what a phone was. Not having to worry about what people say if you screw up or what people say if you hit the game-winning home run; just don't get too high or too low."

Fletcher has seen firsthand the worst of what social media has to offer. Following a slide that sent LSU second baseman Cole Freeman airborne in last May's SEC Tournament title game, Tigers fans let him have it. He claims it was a clean slide. So did Dave Van Horn and Freeman.

"I still got a couple of messages from LSU fans that weren't too nice. That was interesting," he added.

The sophomore also knows firing back isn't worth getting into hot water over.

"Everyone is smart enough to know that we all have futures here," Fletcher said. "And I think it's good for anyone (to break from social media). The rankings don't really matter, and taking too much pride in it doesn't really help with anything.

"You've still got to battle every day and get better."

State of the Hogs: Kacey Murphy ready for any role

By Clay Henry
WholeHogSports.com

February 9, 2018

FAYETTEVILLE — Kacey Murphy looks a lot like last year. He's still the same, easy going lefty from Rogers Heritage.

But looks can deceive. The guy with the plain nickname, isn't so plain anymore. He's got some confidence, some swagger.

Likely to be a weekend starter when conference play rolls around, Murphy might be the guy to get the ball when Arkansas heads to San Diego for a big game Feb. 21 against Arizona.

It won't be like he hasn't gotten the ball in big situations in the past. Yes, he was mostly a midweek starter for the Razorbacks last season, but he was the starter in the SEC Tournament when the Hogs thumped eventual national champion Florida, 16-0, in an elimination game. He was the tough-luck loser – his only one of the season – in the NCAA Regional title game against Missouri State.

So don't be fooled if coach Dave Van Horn doesn't have Murphy in the starting rotation next weekend when the season begins with a three-game series against Bucknell. Murphy may be just "Murph" to pitching coach Wes Johnson, but there is nothing plain or vanilla about his stuff.

It is interesting that most on this UA pitching staff have better nicknames than Murphy. There's Jake "The Hammer" Reindl, Jackson "Big Nasty" Rutledge and Isaiah "The Professor" Campbell.

"I don't think he could think of anything for me, so I'm just classic Murph," Murphy said. "Giving us nicknames last year was a big deal. We kinda took on our own identity and I understand why Coach Johnson did it."

Murphy, who was a quiet 5-1 last season, understands everything Johnson gives the UA pitchers.

"It's been pretty amazing what he's been able to give us," Murphy said. "Our confidence is off the charts. I think you see it in just the way we walk around.

"We know that all of us were good enough or we wouldn't be here in the first place, but it can go one of two ways when you come to college. You can gain confidence, or you can lose confidence. I think most of our guys have gained confidence and have gotten better.

"It can be that you've developed in the system, gotten bigger and stronger. And, it can be that Coach Johnson has given you a new pitch. A lot of guys have added another pitch, sometimes two. He just gives you something that makes you better. I think that's our entire pitching staff right now."

There's little doubt the runaway victory over Florida has boosted Murphy's confidence. The Hogs run-ruled the Gators. Murphy pitched all seven innings and was never in trouble. He struck out eight and walked two.

"I went back and watched it later to pick up on some things that I'd been working on," he said. "We try to use tunnel vision while we pitch. I guess it wasn't until later that I realized how fun it was that day."

What Murphy did that day was superb. He doesn't have a heater like some of the UA starters. He's mainly 88-90 mph, but his running fastball dives in to right handers and is difficult to handle. He works both sides of the plate, with movement. His control is pinpoint.

The only issue coming into the season was a sore back that forced him to sit out some of fall practice. He's had no issues in January.

"I'm a lot better," he said. "I've done a lot of rehab. The coaches just thought it good to shut me down before the (fall scrimmages). It worked."

Plus, it gave a talented group of freshman pitchers more time in scrimmages.

"We've got depth and for those guys to pitch in the fall series was a confidence boost for them and the team," Murphy said. "These are guys who are going to step into big games this season. They can do damage. Yes, we have reliable veterans, but these young ones are extremely talented."

Murphy would love to be an SEC starter, but knows that the midweek games are just as challenging this season. Along with Arizona, there are games against Dayton and Texas in the midweek early in the season, and Missouri State and Texas Tech in April.

"I'm ready for whatever role is needed," he said. "Sure, everyone wants to throw on the weekend in SEC games. But this is a challenging schedule from start to finish. We need to win these midweek games, too.

"Don't complain. Do your job. Your job is to pitch for the Razorbacks. There isn't anything better."

Murphy is up for pitching more than once a week.

"I did that last year," he said. "I had to come back on short rest and I can do that. It forces a little change in your routine, but I can do it. Maybe we have more depth this year and it won't be as necessary."

That sounds like captain talk. Murphy said that's not his role, but he understands how to lead.

"We've really got great leaders," he said. "Everyone does it different. Grant Koch, our catcher, is a captain. He may not say a lot. But he is a leader. Among our pitchers, Isaiah Campbell and Blaine Knight lead. Carson Shaddy and Luke Bonfield lead among the position players.

"What I see is a lot of hard workers. Jax Biggers, our shortstop, is a captain. He doesn't have to say much. You see an incredible work ethic. I am not sure he ever leaves our facility. He's here when I get here and here when I leave. He'll stay all night and set up a machine to shoot ground balls at him."

There are lots of hard workers among the pitchers, but Murphy said the one who has turned heads over the last 12 months is redshirt junior Keaton McKinney. Battling back from Tommy John surgery just a little more than a year ago, McKinney is likely to get a start on opening weekend.

"I'm excited for Keaton," Murphy said. "He's looked really good. I was working the other day when he got his first time back against live pitching and I stopped to watch. He looked really good. He's got a new curve and some more velocity on his fast ball. He had command with all of it.

"I can't say enough about Keaton. He's done everything right for a long time and is completely ready. We are all pulling for him hard because he deserves something good to happen with the way he's worked."

McKinney will fall in behind Knight and Campbell in the opening rotation against Bucknell. He's the big man in that rotation after rail thin Knight (6-3, 170 pounds) and thinning Campbell (6-4, 215 pounds).

Murphy smiled about the way all three of those have changed their bodies. McKinney has beefed up to nearly 235 pounds on a long 6-5 frame. Knight has added a few pounds, but is stronger. Campbell has lost about 20 pounds.

“Me, I'm still about the same, maybe some bigger in my legs,” Murphy said. “I hear stories from Knight about all the things he eats to try to gain weight. I can't touch any of that stuff. He says he could eat a whole package of Oreo cookies and lose weight. I can't even look at cookies, much less eat them.”

It's a good looking Arkansas squad, balanced in all areas. Van Horn told the Swatter's Club on Thursday that extra lifting with new strength coach Blaine Kinsley has paid dividends. The team started fall workouts earlier to get more October and November time in with Kinsley.

There is balance as far as left-right options both at the plate and on the mound. Along with Murphy, the Hogs have lefty pitching talent in Matt Cronin, Evan Lee, Weston Rogers and Hunter Milligan.

There's lefty talent at the plate, too. Eric Cole is a switch-hitter. Along with Biggers and Lee, full-time lefty hitters among returnees are Jared Gates, Hunter Wilson and Jack Kenley. Among the freshmen most likely to play, Heston Kjerstad and Cole Turney are standout lefty hitters.

It's a good roster. There's a lot to talk about.

Mostly, no one is talking about Kacey Murphy. That is likely to change soon.

State of the Hogs: Putting the hurt on Texas

By Clay Henry
Hawgs Illustrated

March 13, 2018

FAYETTEVILLE — As has been the case while losing four of seven to LSU and Stanford, Texas was not vintage Texas on Tuesday night at Baum Stadium.

No. 10 Arkansas walloped the Longhorns 13-4 on their first ever trip to Baum.

“No, it wasn't,” said Kevin McReynolds, back in town for a reunion of the 1979 Razorbacks, the national runners-up.

The Longhorns were always strong on pitching and defense while making 35 trips to the College World Series, mostly under Cliff Gustafson and Augie Garrido. They've won six national titles, second-most all-time.

There are reminders of the glory years on coach David Pierce's second Texas team, but not on the mound. Second baseman Kody Clemens is the son of former great Roger Clemens. None of the five UT pitchers Tuesday night had anything close to Clemens-like gas.

It seems like every time the Hogs have faced UT in the past there was someone like Clemens or other future major leaguers on the mound like Calvin Schiraldi, Burt Hooten, Greg Swindell or Huston Street.

The Hogs aren't out of the woods yet. The best of the young UT staff may await on Wednesday. Freshman right-hander Nico O'Donnell (1-0, 2.13 ERA) awaits. He shut down Stanford for four innings last Thursday, but did not get the win in the only game the Longhorns won in the four-game set with the No. 3 Cardinal.

Pierce was displeased with the pitching, especially six walks. The Longhorns could not get their breaking pitches over the plate. There were a handful of breakers bouncing in front of the plate.

"First of all, we gave them too much; we just gave them way too many free passes," Pierce said. "They're a very quality team. Dave does such a great job. They pitch, play defense and have really got some guys in the lineup that can hurt you if you don't pitch them right. They did that tonight so we have to bounce back and be ready to play them tomorrow."

The Longhorns will have to play better defense than they did Tuesday night. They threw the ball around like a little league team in a couple of innings. They committed two errors and that played into a seven-run third that put some warmth in the 5,140 mostly red-clad fans on a cool night.

The Hogs took advantage of three walks in the third with Jordan McFarland delivering the big hit, a bases-clearing double on a 3-2 pitch with all the runners on the move.

McFarland was in the lineup partly after hitting two homers in relief of the injured Jared Gates on Sunday. But, Van Horn indicated that Gates is still nursing the sore hamstring.

The Hogs put it out of reach with four runs in the fifth, including three on a towering homer by Casey Martin. With Martin standing at the plate to watch, the ball drifted from over the seats down the line to just nicking the foul pole about 10 feet above the UT left fielder standing in foul territory.

“It was a northwest wind,” Van Horn said. “When it's like that, you see the ball drift back into the field of play. You know I'm part weather man. It clipped the foul pole, pretty amazing.”

Eric Cole, who had three hits and 3 RBI, was on deck.

“I thought there was no chance it was going to be fair,” Cole said. “You know, Casey has hit the foul pole about three times.”

Cole hails from Southlake, Texas. Asked if it was a big deal to beat the Longhorns, he downplayed the emotion.

“They didn't talk to me,” he said of the recruiting process. “I don't know any of their players. Like a lot of teams that come in here, I think there is some jealousy in what we have here.”

Interestingly, McFarland, an Illinois native, seemed to feel the rivalry a little more.

“I knew there was some excitement with the fans,” he said. “I got out of class and came by the park about 9 a.m. We already had fans here.”

Arkansas starter Kacey Murphy, strong over six innings, grew up in nearby Rogers.

“I've heard about the rivalry,” he said. “I remember 2012 when we played them (in Houston).”

There's enough to know the wins over Texas are sweet. The Longhorns lead the all-time series 54-29. The Hogs are 13-15 against the Longhorns in Fayetteville ahead of Wednesday's game.

Freshman lefty Hunter Milligan will get the start for the Hogs, but don't expect him to go long. Van Horn said it will be a day to work the staff with an eye toward a big series this weekend against No. 4 Kentucky.

One of the best of the freshman pitchers won't throw for the Hogs against the Longhorns. Jackson Rutledge is battling a sore arm after pitching twice against Southern Cal.

“We may give him off until the weekend and maybe through the weekend,” Van Horn said. “He may not throw until Charlotte.”

Too bad. He's something that reminds of vintage Texas, all those heat throwers the Hogs saw through the years.

There were some fans who openly spoke of Rutledge going against the Longhorns during the late innings as the Hogs romped. There are many who still remember seeing UT's legends.

“I sure do,” said Scott Tabor, a freshman on the great UA team of '79. “What we thought Gustafson did was take all of his scholarships and get the top 10 pitchers in Texas every year. They sure were good.

“This is fun because I remember taking some lumps from them. Heck, they couldn't hit much back then and I'd pitch knowing they wouldn't score much, but you might not score more than one against them. They pitched that well.”

There's one more game before any old-time Hog fans are going to say the Longhorns can't pitch like that now. Texas didn't look like Texas on Tuesday night, but it's not over.

“That's what I know about Texas,” one fan said. “I've seen good Texas baseball for a long time even if they did struggle tonight. Baseball can change on the next pitcher.”

FAYETTEVILLE — There was talk from Arkansas players on Sunday that the challenge against Texas would be to just play hard every inning. Arkansas coach Dave Van Horn admitted that was never a worry.

“As a coach your job is to get every player to play hard every game,” Van Horn said Wednesday after the Hogs defeated the Longhorns, 7-5, to complete a two-game sweep in what was clearly a rivalry game in the UA dugout.

“It's easier when you play teams like Texas. Those were two good wins for us. To split would have been OK, but to win both is huge.”

Yeah, all you had to do was watch the emotion from the Razorbacks from start to finish. The finish was from the beautiful depths of the rivalry as UA closer Matt Cronin recorded the final out. Cronin, who grew up around Little Rock but finished high school in Florida, flashed the downward hook 'em sign after the last out.

And, yes, everyone knows folks in Arkansas still hate the Longhorns. Van Horn put it another way, but the meaning was clear.

“There is just a lot of people who grew up (here) not in love with Longhorns," he said. "You don't play anyone else with burnt orange. I could go on and on.”

Arkansas junior second baseman Hunter Wilson grew up in Spiro, Okla., but has been a Razorback fan all his life. He watched everything Arkansas on TV and attended Van Horn's camps.

Wilson was pumping his fists and screaming from start to finish. He was in the middle of key plays that helped beat the Longhorns on Wednesday. Consider:

• In the third inning, he charged a slow roller and only had time to glove and shove it to first baseman Jordan McFarland. Wilson celebrated.

• Then, after Texas closed to 5-3 in the fifth, Wilson turned a bases-loaded double play to end the inning when shortstop Jax Biggers made the flip on a slow roller. Wilson almost wiped out his teammates waiting at the lip of the dugout steps with more celebration.

• Texas made it 6-5 in the eighth, but Wilson provided an insurance run with a two-out single to center. Wilson screamed at the top of his lungs as he rounded first, pumping both fists.

“It's a dream come true to be playing here,” Wilson said. “The passion has been there since a little kid.

“I watched every big game played here for a long time. And it takes me an hour to get here. I absolutely love this. You may hear that Oklahoma-Texas is big, but I think Arkansas-Texas is bigger.”

It was the one-year anniversary of the day Wilson broke his leg, ending his season.

“It was a fun day, knowing that,” he said. “The double play was a big play in the game. It wasn't hit that hard but we turned it. Jax got it to me and I just spun with it.”

Van Horn thought that play was a key moment in the game, but other defensive plays were important, too. He praised the defense of third baseman Casey Martin, along with the way the freshman from Lonoke has provided offensive power. Martin flashed far to his left to cut off two slow rollers that Biggers would have not had a play on had they gone through to shortstop. Martin made the plays look easy.

"Casey has a lot of defensive range," Van Horn said. "He gives us a lot of things."

Van Horn has hit him in a lot of spots in the lineup. Martin hit fifth in the lineup on Wednesday night, going 2 for 3 with 3 runs scored and 2 RBI. He hit his team leading sixth homer. Martin batted leadoff on Tuesday night, clubbing a 3-run homer.

"I think he can bat anywhere," Van Horn said. "He could bat cleanup."

Martin said his approach the plate is to "look for something up. I'm like everyone else, you want something up you can drive. So I try to lay off the low stuff."

The difference is that Martin can turn on a fast ball that's up no matter the speed. His hands and bat speed are that exceptional. It's quick twitch to the ultimate level and unbelievably strong hands.

Martin's play is just what Van Horn thought it would be when he begin surprising reporters in the fall when he talked about his rare ability. The coach predicted several times before the season that Martin had all-SEC talent. Rarely, does Van Horn talk like that about true freshmen before they've played a game.

Martin leads the team with a .417 batting average. His 20 RBI also ranks first. Fellow freshmen Heston Kjerstad is second with 16.

"I knew he was electric," Van Horn said. "The question was just when it would all happen. Would it be late in this season, or next year? He's got everything. He can hit for power, run and has a great arm. He can literally play about every position on the team, but he's won the third base spot."

In the grand scheme, what happens in the next three weekends is probably more important. The Hogs play host to No. 4 Kentucky, idle in midweek, to start SEC play this weekend. They travel to Florida and Ole Miss the next two weekends. Players called it a “big” weekend series.

“We don't know much about Kentucky yet, but I know it's big,” Wilson said.

Van Horn knows it's important, but the same as every SEC series.

“The way we look at it may look different than what people see from the outside,” Van Horn said. “Come May, all 30 (SEC games) count the same. After this, it's a grind. It's 10 straight weeks and it never stops.”

Wilson said it's the same every day with Van Horn. That was obvious after a reporter wanted to know if Van Horn seemed different for Texas.

“That man is always ready to go,” Wilson said. “You can't see his emotions, but he's always ready to roll. It was a huge win today, but he's ready for SEC.

“So are we. We've been in the fire with a tough schedule. We have been prepared for it.”

The No. 10 Hogs take a 13-4 record into conference play. They have played plenty of tough games.

“I know our guys were excited today,” Van Horn said. “But they were excited against USC, too. You don't always get teams like that to come in here so that makes those games big.”

Clearly, both teams looked at it as a big series. Van Horn said Texas used some of its top pitchers out of the bullpen Wednesday, just as he did with Cronin closing after Jake Reindl.

“It was the battle of the bullpens,” Van Horn said. “It came down to who do you want to use ahead of the weekend and how much do you want to use them.”

When Cronin came on for a five-out save, it was clear Van Horn wanted it a lot. When Cronin flashed the victory sign for Razorbacks in the UT-UA series, it was clear he wanted it, too. His last pitch in the eighth - which stranded the bases loaded - flashed 94 mph on the radar gun displayed on the scoreboard.

“I just gave it everything,” Cronin said. “I was throwing fast balls, up and just trying to get it by them. I was trying to bring it on every single pitch.”

State of the Hogs: For Kjerstad, it's silent 'J' and loud bat

FAYETTEVILLE — Heston Kjerstad carefully stopped the reporter as the interview seemed to come to the end. The reporter was reaching across the table for a concluding handshake.

Just a minute, Kjerstad said. He patted the reporter's notebook. He wanted to make sure he covered something.

"I don't know if we talked about this and I just want to be sure," he said. "I want to say that it's an honor to be at Arkansas, play baseball for these coaches, with these teammates and in front of these fans. It's a great place. I'm so excited to be here. There is no place better."

Double-checking the notes, most of that had been covered earlier, just maybe not in one swing. But that's Kjerstad, always with an effective swing to end an at-bat. He's been like that for all seven months at Arkansas. Really, he's been like that at every level of an all-star career.

It all reminded of his first appearance in the media room after cracking three hits in the season opener, his first college game. He joined two veterans at the interview table with last-second instructions from communications specialist John Thomas: talk loud, be clear.

Kjerstad talked slowly, loudly and covered all the questions sent his way. It was like his at-bats: pitches either hit that lead shoulder or he puts them in play, spraying line drives to all fields based on where the ball is pitched.

"He's a special player," Arkansas coach Dave Van Horn keeps saying over and over, like after the home run that lifted Arkansas to a 1-0 victory over Arizona in a pitcher's duel in San Diego.

It was a night when dew covered the field early in what California native Dominic Fletcher calls "the marine layer," heavy wet air that comes in from the Pacific at dusk.

"Fletcher had told us about it," Kjerstad said. "Sure enough, we go out for the first inning and the grass is wet. You feel that cold, damp air. There were some balls crushed that night that didn't make it to the wall. Jared Gates hit one in the ninth. I was on second. I came racing around third just knowing it was way out. No, sir."

Third base coach Nate Thompson held Kjerstad up and they both exclaimed that it was unbelievable it wasn't a home run.

That puts it in perspective what Kjerstad did in the fifth inning, crushing a high fastball the opposite direction over the wall in left center, near the 410-foot mark in the deepest portion of the park.

"I had to say there have been a lot of fun moments already this year, but that one was pretty good," Kjerstad said. "It was my first home run.

"I'll also remember my first hit. I can still see it going through the right side. I was committed to play here for so long, that it just meant so much to finally help this team."

Yes, Kjerstad was an early commitment. He began to follow the Razorbacks as a ninth grader, then committed as a sophomore. He recalls watching on TV as Andrew Benintendi had a breakout sophomore campaign that ended in the College World Series.

"I followed him and I wanted to come see this stadium," he said. "I was being recruited by the other teams in the region: Oklahoma, Wichita State and Texas Tech. But I wanted to play for Coach Van Horn. I wanted to play for these fans."

Kjerstad has been impressive at the plate and in the field. After hitting over .400 in the first three weeks, his average stood at .358 after the first week of SEC play. He's started every game for the 16-4 Hogs, surely to rise from their No. 10 spot after a three-game sweep of No. 4 Kentucky. He has two assists on throws for outs at the plate. He's got 22 RBI, tied for the team lead with fellow freshman Casey Martin.

"On both of those (assists), he got his body behind the ball, was square and delivered great throws," Van Horn said. "We knew he was a good hitter, but he's really done well. I knew at some point he might be a guy in the three hole, but I've put him there and I don't think it's too big for him. We will move him around based on how we want to stack or left and right hitters."

Lefty pitchers have tried to jam him inside. He's already been hit 11 times. He's only gone down on strikes five times, lowest among regulars.

"The book on him is that if you don't jam him, he'll go the other way," Van Horn said. "So they are pitching him inside and if they miss a little he'll get it.

"The one against Arizona was a big swing for us. The air was heavy and he hit it a long way the opposite way. It's one thing to hit one out to the opposite field down the line, where it might not be that far. He hit it out to the deepest part of the park against Arizona. It went a long way."

Kjerstad hammered another long home run the other way against Kentucky, a three-run shot to deep left center. It was part of the 13 homers the Hogs hit against Kentucky. Kjerstad also blasted an opposite-field drive to the warning track in almost the same spot later in the series for a sacrifice fly and another RBI.

Van Horn praised both Kjerstad and Martin for their contributions in the Kentucky series, but also noted they were a little nervous in their first SEC series.

"They chased (pitches outside the strike zone) a little more than I've seen from them so far this season," Van Horn said. "They were a little anxious. They hadn't been that way. Hopefully, they'll settle down after this first weekend."

Kjerstad committed as a 5-10, 155-pounder projected to possibly hit leadoff. By the time he made it to campus he was 6-3, 190.

"I admit that I thought he'd be bigger in time," Van Horn said. "I looked at his dad and he was a big man. He's grown to about his size. Really, he's still growing. He got bigger just over Christmas, picked up some weight. He's still filling out."

Dave Kjerstad is a giant of a man.

"I was sort of a late bloomer," Heston Kjerstad said. "But my dad is 6-4, 250. I guess Coach Van Horn could see that I was going to grow."

Dave Kjerstad gives Van Horn big props for picking up on that.

"I guess that's what makes someone like Coach Van Horn so good, to have that kind of insight," Dave Kjerstad said. "I wouldn't have much confidence in recruiting a sophomore. But he saw something and he was right. To me, that's pressure on the coach to see a 16-year-old and know that quickly, even on a bad day."

That's what it was on Van Horn's first in-person scouting trip. He was following up on a recommendation from former assistant Tony Vitello. There had been multiple trips by the UA recruiting coordinator to see Kjerstad with the D-bats, the top travel team from the Dallas area.

"Coach Van Horn came to Arlington to see a showcase," Dave Kjerstad said. "Heston struck out on pitches in the dirt, twice. He had a throw back from center bounce in to the infielder. After the game when Heston and I were together, he told me, 'Dad, I guess I screwed that up.'

"But Coach Van Horn called him that night and told him he liked what he saw, especially that he didn't let it get him down. He talked to him about his attitude. He just kept playing. He liked that. What I remember also was that Coach Van Horn was out there watching the entire game and it was about 105."

Kjerstad gave his commitment soon after.

"How could you not want to come here?" he said. "There isn't a better place. Coach Van Horn is a legend."

Van Horn's judgment was rewarded when Kjerstad filled out and his quick lefty stroke kept pumping out line drives. He made the all-tournament team last summer with the D-bats at the Connie Mack World Series, a U-19 tournament with the nation's top talent.

Then, when he arrived in the fall, Kjerstad dominated the UA pitching staff. He hit .500 for the fall, leading the team and winning the left field job. He'd always played center field because of a strong arm. With Fletcher already the starter there, Kjerstad was happy to call left his new home.

There have been impressive moments in almost every area -- especially in attitude. He's got it all. Teammates are impressed. Martin has been impressive, too, but he's like others who noticed Kjerstad's talents immediately in the fall. More importantly, Martin said it hasn't changed his new friend.

"I'm proud of him for not getting a big head, staying level-headed and just competing every day," Martin said. "That's what makes him good.

"He has quick bat speed, quick hands and recognizes pitches. That will take him a long way.

"He can hit for contact, can run a little bit and has a little power. He's got a good arm from the outfield.

"Against Arizona we won 1-0 because of his late-inning oppo home run. That shows how good of a player he is and how well he recognizes pitches. He trusts his hands and he has enough power that he can hit it out of the ballpark."

Van Horn has played with a lot of different lineups, but most of them have had Kjerstad in the third spot.

"That's a big spot for a freshmen, but it sure looks like he can handle it," Van Horn said. "He's not afraid of the stage."

Kjerstad said he never worried where he was going to bat, just that he was going to bat.

"My goal first was just to help the team anyway possible," he said. "If that meant platooning, fine. But I came here wanting to start. I just knew it was going to be about adjusting every day to something new.

"I'd faced good pitching before, but not like this every day. You might see high velocity once a week in high school. But the pitching at this level — and what we are about to see in the SEC — will make you adjust to something new every day."

The big adjustment early this season has been the way college pitchers consistently pitch Kjerstad inside – way inside. With so many hit-by-pitches, he quickly donned a protective shield for his right bicep.

"No bruises," he said. "It's been kind of weird, though. The other day I went to some of our pitchers. I asked them, 'Do I crowd the plate? Am I too close? What's the deal?' They all said, 'No, it's just going to be the way they try to get you out, jam you tight."

Van Horn saw it immediately and understood.

"He's so good with anything middle of the plate to the outside, just going the other way," Van Horn said. "So the scouting report was jam him. Well, if you don't get it way in, he's going to rip it to the alley in right. So if you miss just a little in, he's so quick and so now they are missing way in."

Freshman pitcher Jackson Rutledge recalls the first week of fall practice when pitchers thought they had Kjerstad figured out.

"Curve balls in the dirt, he'd swing," Rutledge said. "That lasted about a week, then he made the adjustment. He didn't chase after that."

It's tough to recall any two freshmen -- Kjerstad and Martin -- playing this well this quickly. Senior Luke Bonfield has tried to prepare both for tough stretches, but there haven't been any.

"Heston is a big leaguer," Bonfield said of Kjerstad, but it fits for Martin, too. "That's what I see. We all saw it pretty fast.

"And, it's not just his talent, but the way he conducts himself. He's special and has a bright future.

"He's never too high, never too low. He reminds me of Benintendi. They have a different swing, but the same approach to the game.

"Heston's swing is really good. The bat stays in the zone a long time. He gets it going early and then can adjust to pitches. We all respect what he can do."

Still, the SEC can be tough on young hitters.

"I pulled him aside and told him that there can be rough spots," Bonfield said. "Even before the season I told him you can get humbled in this league. The pitching is just that good. He just nods his head and works. He's respected by our team. He's a great kid and a good student."

That's part of the Kjerstad's motto, treat teammates well and respect the game. Asked about big leaguers that he might want to emulate, there was a clear target: Derek Jeter.

"He treats everyone with such respect," Kjerstad said. "He's a great teammate. I want to be like that. I want to be a great teammate."

In that vein, he'd rather talk about his teammates than himself. He knows a fast start can fade and it will be about making adjustments as SEC pitchers search for other ways to get him out.

Some stock baseball cliches were starting to dominate the interview until there was a mention of his parents. Kjerstad lit up.

“Oh, I can tell you lots about my mom and dad,” he said of parents Dave and Jody. “They came to Amarillo back in the 1980s, literally with nothing and have built a good business. They liked it and stayed. They were farming in South Dakota and it was a tough life. I’ve heard the stories.

“What they did with hard work is make a great life for my family, so that I could play baseball and be able to go with travel teams. We drove all over.

“I’d love for you to call my dad. I think he can tell you stories.”

Dave Kjerstad didn’t seem to be surprised by the phone call.

“We’ve told our kids the stories about how we got here,” Dave Kjerstad said. “They know about South Dakota, cattle farming. We started the business here 28 years ago and it’s a little different. It’s bottled water and iced tea, all out of a retail store.”

It’s worth a trip to the website (Waterstill.com) to understand what the Kjerstads have done in Amarillo. There are now two locations.

Heston loved telling the story.

“The whole family works in the business,” he said. “I love it.”

Dave Kjerstad is glad Heston and the other four children enjoy it.

“They didn’t have a choice,” Dave said. “They had to participate.

“Because of the business it worked out where we could travel for baseball for Heston. There were a lot of trips to Dallas. We’d just drive them together. It was about then that he was learning to drive. Dallas is a good place to teach a 16-year-old to drive.”

Really?

“Well, maybe not to start, but in time,” Dave said. “I did finally get to where I’d trust him enough on those trips to try to sleep. We commuted for a lot of summer weekends the last three years. That’s a six-hour drive. We did some miles. We maintained a routine. I’d say it was a good experience traveling together.”

There were some times that it looked like Heston was “playing up” in age groups.

“Well, he looked like he was 14 when he was 16,” Dave said. “Now, he looks like he’s 16.”

Sometimes he did play “up” in age groups.

“I didn’t play baseball,” Dave said. “Heston’s older brothers did and I think he was about 3 when he started trying to play with them. He hung out with the older groups and it seemed to come easy.

“What I saw was that he obsessed with baseball. He just enjoyed it so much. I never told him to play. Never told him to practice. I just felt that it should be their passion and it should be their idea. It was for him with baseball.”

You see it in Heston Kjerstad’s blue eyes. Yes, the background is Norwegian.

“South Dakota is where so many from Norway settled,” Dave Kjerstad said. “You could get a plot of land and call it your own. It was a rough life. I still say that South Dakota should have been left for the buffalo. It takes a lot of work to care for the cattle there.”

Heston is quick to point out the last name is Norwegian.

“I tell everyone that in Norway, the j is silent,” he said. “Now, I have no idea where Heston came from. I’ve asked my parents. I don’t know that I ever got a good answer.”

Dave Kjerstad was ready when it came up.

“His name came from two places,” he said. “There’s a great old farm implement company, Hesston hay equipment. Then, there was Charleton Heston. That’s as good as I can give you.”

State of the Hogs: Pitchers' duel delivers

By Clay Henry

FAYETTEVILLE — Dave Van Horn is generally up front with everyone – players, media and fans. What he says is what he thinks. Mostly, he's right.

The Arkansas coach told his players exactly what to expect from the Friday night matchup between ace pitchers Blaine Knight and Casey Mize.

“I told them to expect it to be 2-1 or 3-2,” Van Horn said. “So it's pretty much what I thought.”

Knight gave Arkansas its fourth consecutive opening victory in an SEC series, out-dueling Auburn's Mize, 2-1, at Baum Stadium on Friday. Mize is considered the nation's top draft-eligible college pitcher. Knight is just plain good and may be pitching his way into the first round, too.

Pro scouts were everywhere as Knight (6-0) allowed only a solo homer in the fourth while pitching into the seventh. He scattered six hits and fanned six.

Mize (6-1) allowed only seven hits in seven solid innings, but the Hogs bunched three straight hits with one out in the fourth to plate their only runs. All three hits came with two strikes. Mize had seven strikeouts and one walk, just his fourth walk of the season, and stopped on the way to the dugout to talk to home plate umpire Jeff Head.

Luke Bonfield stroked a 0-2 Mize fast ball just inside the foul pole in right for a solo, opposite-field homer with one out in the fourth. Dominic Fletcher followed with a double on a 2-2 pitch. Grant Koch smoked a 3-2 pitch to center to drive home Fletcher.

Knight exited after giving up back-to-back singles in the seventh. Sophomore reliever Matt Cronin, bringing 95 mph heat, retired all eight Tigers he faced for his sixth save.

Mize his 96 mph and Knight hit 95 on the radar gun, readings that produce red numbers on the Baum Stadium scoreboard. MLB scouts nodded as their guns matched those numbers.

“I'd take any of those three,” said one of the highest-ranking scouts. “That's both starters and the Arkansas closers.”

Of course, Knight and Mize are draft eligible, while Cronin is not.

It was vindication of sorts for Knight, the losing pitcher last year when Auburn romped, 15-2. Knight didn't make it out of the second inning, giving up eight hits and eight runs.

Bonfield said Knight came into the game with a chip on his shoulder after the way the Tigers smacked him around last year.

“I did,” Knight admitted. “I think the rest of the team did, too. We came out with an edge.”

Knight loves the head-to-head competition with top SEC pitchers on Friday night.

“I enjoy it,” he said. “I said that last year that it brings out the competitor in you.”

Knight shrugged off giving up the homer to Edouard Julien.

“I figured Mize was going to make a mistake, too, and one of our guys would punish him for it,” he said.

Van Horn thought the pitching was electric in a typical Friday duel. The quest is to build on what Knight gave the Hogs.

“Blaine's been huge for us,” Van Horn said. “He's given us those (four) 1-0 starts to series. So we are pretty confident with him.

“But the thing has been, we've only won one series out of the first three. It would be nice is we could win at least two on the weekend.”

There was more than just good pitching for the Hogs. They did not commit an error for the second straight game.

Fletcher was lights out in center field. He ran down a gap shot that was slicing away from him and also went to the wall to track down a wind aided blast.

“If he doesn't make the play in right center, we are down, 3-2,” Van Horn said. “He got an incredible jump. He's not the fastest we've had in center field, but he's the most talented.

“On that play, it seemed like he took a step to his left on contact. I guess he saw the pitch was away and just went with it.

Fletcher said he was comfortable on the towering fly even though he was near the wall. He got some help from right fielder Eric Cole.

“Eric told me I had room,” Fletcher said. “That ball was a mile high and the wind blew it a long way.

“It was funny, you have to take a stance to one side of the mound or the other (to see the pitch). On the pitch before that line drive, I set up on the right side of the mound. On that next pitch, I thought, 'This guy is a pull hitter,' so I switched sides.”

Auburn coach Butch Thompson had a tip of the cap for Fletcher after the game – and the way the Hogs battled with two strikes in the fourth.

"I thought (Fletcher) robbed four runs,” Thompson said. “I thought (against) Edouard Julien, he caught a home run against the wall, against the yellow line of the wall.

"They got three hits with two strikes on them. That's how they scored their two runs. I thought we were really close there, but I thought Fletcher's defense really made the difference tonight."

Thompson also gave Knight credit.

“I thought he was competitive,” Thompson said. “It was a commitment to throwing strikes. He's a little animated, but he competes really hard for his ball club. He's a great Friday night guy in the SEC. He has a willingness to throw in the strike zone....He looks really settled and in control."

Fletcher said Mize was as good as advertised.

“He has that splitter and you don't want to get down 0-2 and see that, so we were trying to look for something early,” Fletcher said. “I was down 0-2 and laid off a couple of splitters. I got the fast ball in.”

Arkansas pitching coach Wes Johnson knows good pitching when he sees it. He compared what Mize throws to a combination of two of his aces from Mississippi State and Arkansas of the last two seasons.

"Casey Mize is the best guy I've seen in a long time, just special," Johnson said. "At the end of the day, Blaine just grinds it out and was really good and was up to the challenge.

"That young man (Mize) has Dakota Hudson's cutter, a fastball that reminds me of Trevor Stephan and the best split finger I've ever seen. You put all that into a funnel and that's what you saw tonight."

Mize threw 72 strikes tonight. Arkansas made contact on 37 of those pitches and swung and missed at 15. Arkansas, the top hitting club in the SEC before the series at .337, watched 20 strikes. Arkansas is batting .298 in SEC openers, but .346 in Games 2 and 3.

Bonfield gave his own pitchers credit for helping hit Mize.

“We face Blaine (Knight) and Isaiah (Campbell) in the fall,” he said. “That puts us in good position to face guys like this.”

Knight threw 113 pitches, including 12 to Conor Davis on a strikeout in the fifth.

“I think there was one other at-bat against Blaine that went eight or nine pitches,” Van Horn said. “Those are the at-bats that get a pitcher out of the game, but Blaine hung in there.”

Razorbacks' Cronin aims to close out record

By Bob Holt
Arkansas Democrat-Gazette

April 19, 2018

FAYETTEVILLE -- Wes Johnson, Colby Suggs and Matt Cronin were walking down a hallway in Baum Stadium a week before this season opened when they passed a list of Arkansas Razorbacks' records posted on a wall.

One record in particular caught Cronin's attention, and the sophomore left-hander from Navarre, Fla., wasn't shy about expressing his thoughts.

"Matt saw that Colby has the most saves in a season and he goes, 'Hey, I'm coming after your record,'" said Johnson, the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville pitching coach. "I just laughed, and said, 'OK, yeah. Whatever, Matt.'"

No one is laughing now about Cronin's chances of surpassing the school-record 13 saves Suggs had in 2013.

Going into No. 3 Arkansas' series at Mississippi State this weekend, Cronin has nine saves with 17 regular-season games remaining and likely appearances in the SEC Tournament and at least an NCAA regional. He's tied for seventh on the Razorbacks' season saves list.

"It's nice having a guy on the back end like Matt," Arkansas sophomore starting pitcher Isaiah Campbell said. "You know he's going to throw strikes and compete.

"It's incredible he has nine saves and we still have a lot of games left. He's on pace to break the record. Knowing him and the confidence he has in himself, I can see him doing it."

Suggs, a volunteer coach for the Razorbacks while completing work on a communications degree, said he wasn't taken aback by Cronin's declaration about breaking the saves record.

"I wasn't offended at all," Suggs said. "That showed Matt has the confidence to get it done. Hopefully, he breaks the record this year and then breaks his own record next year. That'd be awesome."

Cronin, 6-2 and 190 pounds, throws a fastball that has topped out at 96 miles per hour and an improved slider to go with that confidence.

"Matt's got a special fastball, and he's able to locate it and move it around," Johnson said. "Then he's able to spin that breaking ball."

Cronin showed potential last season when he was 3-1 with a 2.00 ERA, 31 strikeouts and 12 walks, but he pitched just 18 innings with 1 save.

The Razorbacks didn't have an established closer as their 14 saves were divided among seven pitchers, with Jake Reindl having a team-high three.

"That's the position I wanted last year," Cronin said. "I didn't quite get it. I wasn't commanding my pitches as well as I needed to. That's the position I wanted again this year, and I finally secured it.

"I think it was more of a confidence thing. I have a lot more confidence in my fastball, and I'm just able to fill it up and throw a lot more strikes with it."

Cronin is 2-0 with a 2.05 ERA in 15 appearances. He has 32 strikeouts and 5 walks in 30⅔ innings while holding opponents to 13 hits and a .129 batting average.

"Matt has some serious stuff," said Suggs, a second-round pick by the Miami Marlins in 2013 who played three seasons professionally. "Left-hander with a fastball in the mid-90s with a breaking ball he can throw for a strike.

"That's tough for any level of competition."

Six of Cronin's saves are against SEC teams -- including two in both ends of a doubleheader against South Carolina on Saturday. He also has saves against Arizona, Texas and Grambling State.

"He's got the right mentality," Arkansas Coach Dave Van Horn said. "You can tell he doesn't seem like he's rattled at all no matter what the situation is. I think he's the best at doing it on this staff."

Cronin has pitched two or more innings in nine of his appearances, including 4 against San Diego State, 3 against Ole Miss, and 2⅔ against Southern California, Kentucky and Auburn. He pitched a combined three innings in his doubleheader saves against South Carolina.

"Matt has the mindset that he doesn't care what the situation is, if he's in the ballgame he's shutting it down for however long he needs to for us to get the win," Suggs said. "That's really impressive to see from a guy who may not have gotten as many innings as he would have liked as a freshman."

Arkansas senior second baseman Carson Shaddy is batting .364 with nine home runs, but said he's glad he doesn't have to try to reach base against Cronin.

"Matt is absolutely nasty," Shaddy said. "It's called a high spin rate fastball, and it's untouchable right now.

"When he's pumping 95, 96 and he gets that right mentality, he's unstoppable. He's really hungry for that [saves] record."

Johnson said he expected Cronin to be a strength for the back end of the bullpen, but he didn't know whether Cronin was ready to become a dominant closer.

"Matt's really embraced that role," Johnson said. "It's no secret around here he's grown up a lot in the last six or eight months. Last year he had a good stuff, but we had to get him acclimated to some different things."

Johnson said Cronin has become more organized with his academics so he's able to focus on pitching at practice instead of stressing about a class assignment to complete.

Cronin worked hard in the weight room to add strength to help him recover quicker after he pitches, Johnson said, and has developed into a better student of the game by extensively studying tapes of hitters as well as himself.

"The off-the-field stuff has been huge for Matt," Johnson said. "He's got all that in order now so he's having more success on the field."

Cronin hasn't allowed a run or a walk while holding opponents to 1 hit with 4 strikeouts over 8⅔ innings in his past four appearances -- all ending with saves.

"He just attacks you with a fastball that's both sides of the plate, up, in, down," Van Horn said. "He moves it around. He can locate it.

"Now we're starting to use his breaking ball a little bit more. We're showing it. We've actually tried to finish a couple of hitters with it.

"He hasn't really allowed people to get on. When we've brought him in with runners on, he seems to get out of the jam. When we've let him start an inning, just seems like not too many guys get on base."

Cronin got the last three outs in the seven-inning opener of the South Carolina doubleheader when Kacey Murphy allowed a hit after retiring the first 18 batters he faced.

Murphy said he was disappointed to come out the game but felt good handing the ball to Cronin.

"He's got the highest ceiling for a guy I've seen in a while," Murphy said. "When you have a fastball like his -- and now you add a breaking ball -- there's not a lot of guys that stand a chance. I trust the guy with the world.

"He grew up a lot in the offseason. You can see it in how he carries himself that he doesn't second-guess himself at all. He knows he can do the job, and that's what we love about him."

Cronin didn't allow a run in his first 7⅓ innings this season while picking up victories against Bucknell and San Diego State, and a save against Arizona.

"Matt had a hot start right out of the gate," Suggs said. "He was just throwing pellets for strikes.

"He really wanted that closer role, and once he was given the opportunity, he just took it over and didn't give anybody else even a sniff at it."

Fletcher showcasing hot bat, golden glove

By Scottie Bordelon

FAYETTEVILLE – Last season, right fielder Eric Cole experienced a slump similar to the one Dominic Fletcher battled through at the beginning of this season.

Cole knew what Fletcher was going through as he saw his batting average plummet and his time in the lineup diminish some. However, it was just a matter of time before the California native broke through and became a threat in a powerful Arkansas lineup again.

Fletcher is hitting .362 in Southeastern Conference play through 18 games, good for second-best on the team behind the injured Carson Shaddy's .418 average. That figure is a far cry from his early-season numbers that resulted in him not starting for the first time all season in the series finale against Southern Cal on March 4, a game in which he he hit a walk-off single as a pinch-hitter.

"We knew it was going to happen at some point, we just didn't really know when," Cole said. "He's one of our better hitters for two years in a row, so it's really just when it was going to click for him. Once you get out of it it's a great feeling and it's all uphill from here.

"It's one of those things where the more you change, the less it's actually going to happen, so you've kind of just got to stick with what's been working for you your whole life. Luckily, Dominic got out of it pretty quickly."

Fletcher said his struggles stemmed from a combination of pressing at the plate and swing mechanics. Now, he said, he's more relaxed as he steps into the box and is sticking with the same approach he's always had. It was never a confidence issue.

Dave Van Horn said Fletcher has also done a good job of buying in on details that have helped him stay through the ball and shoot pitches to the opposite field when given the chance.

That, and not trying to hit every pitch for a home run, Van Horn added.

"I think he's just laying off some pitches out of the zone early in the count, and taking singles. … I still think he's got a lot better days in front of him," Van Horn said. "He's been a lot better, but he knows he's a lot better than what he's been this year, and we do. Hopefully he can stay hot and really get hot down the stretch for us."

Fletcher has also been able to reach base a number of times by laying down bunts, taking advantage of the depth at which corner infielders are playing him.

As a freshman at Cypress High School in California, the smaller Fletcher would utilize the bunt to snap out of a hitting funk and create potential scoring chance for his team.

"In high school, freshman year of high school, I was always kind of smaller and not as strong, so I wanted to be a good hitter and hit for average, so that's one of the things I learned to do," Fletcher said. "I think I have five this year, so it's working out well."

After a 0-for-3 game at the plate in the series finale against South Carolina, Fletcher opted to switch things up a bit and shave his mustache.

"I had it for a couple of games and it was good," Fletcher said with a grin. "Then I went 0-for one game and it was out of hits, so now I'm trying to start a new one to see if it has more hits in it."

While his high batting average and hit totals – 25 hits in SEC play – grabs a lot of the attention, Cole, Van Horn and Saturday starter Kacey Murphy said they are often in awe of defensive contributions Fletcher makes and his immediate reads on challenging fly balls in the outfield.

Murphy said he's never seen an outfielder get jumps on balls like Fletcher does regularly. In the final game of the Mississippi State series last weekend, Fletcher made a diving catch to rob the Bulldogs of a run in the eighth inning, keeping the Razorbacks within striking distance in a two-run game.

"When you look at it, he's not one of the fastest outfielders you've ever seen, but he gets to balls that most outfielders can't get to," Murphy said. "It's great as a pitcher because I see balls in the gap and, off the bat, I'm not so worried about it getting down as I am looking to see if he's going to make a diving catch."

That ability is natural to Fletcher, and Cole added the outfield group often watches Fletcher take fly balls in the outfield hoping to pick up a thing or two for themselves.

"We've got a good defensive outfield and it all starts with Dominic, and it has since the day he stepped on campus," Cole said. "We have all the faith in the world in him in centerfield to go catch those balls. … I think he can read a swing better than anybody on this team, honestly. It'll take him a long way."

Van Horn took it a step further, noting that Fletcher's glove has saved at least two games for Arkansas this season and helped avoid big innings on a number of occasions. Auburn coach Butch Thompson said Fletcher "robbed four runs" in the Razorbacks 2-1 series-opening win over the Tigers on April 6 when he made a leaping catch at the wall and made a running catch into right field with runners on base.

"I think he's as good as any center fielder we've ever had," Van Horn said. "He's not the fastest center fielder I've ever had, but he's probably the best I've ever had at not misjudging a ball off the bat."

Fletcher credits daily work with a high school coach at Cypress for his ability to read balls and gain a half-step often before a pitch comes off the bat. Even if his average isn't up to his standard, he can still be a plus glove in the outfield.

"I take a ton of pride in that," he said. "And I know that that's one of the things that's a big part of my game, and even if I'm not hitting I can bring that to the table."

Pigs dig the long ball: HR hat was inspired by college football

By Matt Jones
WholeHogSports.com

April 27, 2018

FAYETTEVILLE — While watching college football last fall, some Arkansas baseball players took note of a trend in the sport.

More football teams were coming up with creative ways to recognize defenders who were forcing turnovers.

At Alabama, there was a replica wrestling title belt called the "Ball Out Belt." At Georgia, spiked shoulder pads with the word "Savage" across the back. At Virginia Tech, a lunch pail to symbolize a blue collar attitude. At Tennessee, the infamous "Turnover Trashcan," which had previously been used in practice by John Chavis at Texas A&M and Chad Morris at SMU.

The one that really caught the attention of the Arkansas baseball players was the Miami "Turnover Chain," a 10-karat gold chain that defenders got to wear on the sideline after recovering a fumble or intercepting a pass. The Razorbacks wanted to create a similar incentive for hitting a home run.

"We thought about a home run chain, but decided we couldn't do that because everyone else was doing that," said Hunter Wilson, a junior infielder.

The idea for a home run hat wasn't conceived until the night before the season opener against Bucknell in February. That's when Zach Barr, the team's video director, bought a new-generation version of the Uncle Heavy's Hog Hat that was made popular in the 1970s, and which The Oklahoman's Jim Lassiter once wrote was "the most hideous piece of fan paraphernalia ever put on the market" and "is like UFOs: Sightings have been reported all over the world."

The idea was to put the hat on a batter after he hit a home run, then plaster it with stickers that said "WPS" — short for "Woo Pig Sooie" — after each home run.

"You know this game can be such a frustrating game and there's a lot of failure, so you need to try to do some things to make it fun," Arkansas coach Dave Van Horn said.

Carson Shaddy was the first to wear the hat after he hit a three-run homer in the second inning of the Razorbacks' first game against Bucknell. During a 32-4 win the following day, Dominic Fletcher was able to wear the hat for one pitch before Grant Koch hit another home run. Koch had to give the hat away minutes later when Shaddy hit the third homer of the inning.

"It just caught fire from there," said Wilson, a backup most games who greets home run hitters with the hog hat before slapping them on the rear. "We're hoping to run out of room for the stickers."

Arkansas hit an SEC-best 83 homers last season and is third nationally this year with 63 home runs through 42 games. The Razorbacks are on pace to hit 96 if they play the same number of games as a year ago. A strong candidate to be a national seed this year, it's possible Arkansas could play more games than in 2017.

The school record for home runs is 92, set in 2010 before the NCAA required bat manufacturers to modify bats to reduce exit velocity.

Home runs dropped significantly nationwide in subsequent years. The Razorbacks' totals were 38 in 2011, 39 in 2012, 27 in 2013 and 28 in 2014.

In 2015, the NCAA modified baseballs to have lower seams, which reduced wind resistance and increased home runs nationwide. Andrew Benintendi hit 20 of the Razorbacks' 53 that season.

Last season, Chad Spanberger hit 20 of the team's 83, but this season's power surge is more of a team effort. Twelve players have hit home runs, with no batter hitting more than nine, but six players hitting more than five.

"Everybody goes up there and you never know who is going to hit a home run, who could go off for two or three home runs in a single day," said Eric Cole, who is tied with Shaddy and Heston Kjerstad for the team lead with nine homers. "It's pretty awesome. In (batting practice), everybody is shooting balls out to every part of the field. It's really something I've never been a part of, where every single person can do it pretty easily."

Arkansas' home run depth was best displayed during a home series against Kentucky on March 16-17, when eight Razorbacks combined to hit 13 home runs in three games.

"We hit 10 in one day of a doubleheader," Wilson said. "Watching that is electric, it's fun and it keeps everybody upbeat in the dugout, and really gets your team going. Having that ability makes the games fun."

As would be expected, the Razorbacks are hitting home runs at a much less frequent pace since the Kentucky series. Arkansas was swept by Mississippi State last weekend and over the final four weeks of the regular season it plays Alabama, LSU, Texas A&M and Georgia - all of which rank in the top half of the SEC in fewest home runs allowed.

This weekend's opponent, Alabama, has allowed only 24 home runs in 43 games. The Razorbacks have hit 43 home runs in 26 games at Baum Stadium, with nine multi-homer games and four games with at least four home runs.

"Baum Stadium on some days is a good place to hit and some days it's not," Wilson said.

The ability to hit home runs has allowed Arkansas to come back from deficits in short order. Seven of the Razorbacks' 29 wins were in games they trailed by at least three runs.

Arkansas scored seven runs on four homers in the final two innings of a comeback win over Kent State on March 11. During an April 17 comeback win over Missouri State, Kjerstad and Martin each hit home runs during a five-run inning that quickly erased a four-run deficit.

Even during a March 31 loss at Ole Miss, the Razorbacks hit four home runs over the final four innings to turn a six-run deficit into a one-run loss.

"I feel with the lineup we have, there is never a game that we're out of," Kjerstad said. "We're all confident that we will be able to scratch some more runs on the board as the game goes along."

"I think they've got a lot of guys that are capable of getting the ball in the air and hitting the ball over the wall," Missouri State coach Keith Guttin said after the Bears' loss to Arkansas on April 17. "That's a very good offensive team."

Even-keel Hogs say more to do

Tom Murphy
Arkansas Democrat-Gazette

June 6, 2018

FAYETTEVILLE -- The Arkansas Razorbacks were exuberant about closing out Sunday's 4-3 victory over Dallas Baptist and moving on to the NCAA super regional round, but they kept their celebration in check.

"I'll say we're excited, obviously, but there's a lot more we want to accomplish, and we're locked in on that right now," said reliever Jake Reindl, who picked up the victory with seven innings of long relief.

"We're excited, but it's a process and this is just one step along the journey we have ahead of us," added freshman outfielder Heston Kjerstad.

The low-key celebration was in line with Coach Dave Van Horn's expectations.

"That's what you're supposed to do," Van Horn said. "To me, you don't dog pile at a regional. To me, the only time you dog pile is if you get to go to Omaha, and I don't even like it then.

"I don't want anybody to get hurt. You win a conference championship, maybe you can get excited. But they are pretty businesslike, and they know we've still got some work to do to get to the goal that we're trying to achieve and go from there. I appreciate the way they acted. They acted like they've been there before."

Closer Matt Cronin, asked about the Razorbacks' mood after the regional victory, brought up words of advice from pitching coach Wes Johnson.

"Coach Johnson always says, 'After midnight, forget this one and move on to the next one,' " Cronin said.

Replay review

Arkansas Coach Dave Van Horn lamented what appeared to be a bad "safe" call at first base on a ground ball by Dallas Baptist's Jameson Hannah. The call gave the Patriots runners at first and third with no outs in the ninth inning of a 4-2 game.

Razorbacks closer Matt Cronin allowed a sacrifice fly, but the call did not come back to haunt the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville as he retired the next two batters and left Hannah at first base to end the game.

"You know, it's interesting that we have instant replay throughout the season in the SEC and in our tournament, and one of the biggest times of the year we don't have it," said Van Horn, who unsuccessfully argued the call with first-base umpire David Brown. "I think it might have swung the other way."

Replays will be on tap for the Arkansas vs. South Carolina super regional this weekend, but the current rules would not have allowed for a review of the Hannah play since regional sites were not allowed to use replay.

He's back

Closer Matt Cronin threw 36 pitches in two innings to save the Razorbacks' 4-3 victory over Dallas Baptist in his only work at the regional and only his fourth appearance since returning May 13 after a bout with mononucleosis.

In those four games, Cronin pitched 8⅔ innings and allowed 6 hits, 4 earned runs and 3 walks while striking out 14. His stamina has improved along the way, and he's picked up saves in each of the past three outings -- an 8-6 victory at Georgia, an 8-2 victory over Florida at the SEC Tournament and the 4-3 victory Sunday.

"I'm 100 percent now," Cronin said late Sunday.

Jake's stuff

Right-hander Jake Reindl did not expect to get a call as early as he did Sunday -- three batters into the game.

Reindl said he threw six or seven warmup pitches and wasn't as sharp as he'd been lately.

"I didn't have very good stuff," Reindl said. "I really couldn't command very well and the ball wasn't moving like it usually does, so it was a grind.

"I kind of had to figure out a way to get out of some jams and do some stuff I hadn't done before. I usually rely on this pitch or that pitch to help me get out of a jam. But yeah, it was kind of interesting."

Reindl's grind worked out well, as the former Shiloh Christian standout gave up 5 hits and 1 run in 7 innings to a Dallas Baptist team that had scored 27 runs in its previous 18 innings.

"Reindl did a really nice job," Dallas Baptist Coach Dan Heefner said. "He threw both pitches for strikes. Obviously, he's got really good numbers on the year. He maintained his stuff throughout the whole game."

SEC 3 guarantee

The SEC will send three teams to the College World Series next week.

How do we know? Because all six SEC teams that remain in the final 16 square off against each other in NCAA super regionals.

In addition to No. 5 seed Arkansas (42-18) hosting a series rematch against South Carolina (36-24), overall No. 1 seed Florida (45-18) will host Auburn (42-21) starting Saturday, and Vanderbilt (34-25) will host Mississippi State (35-26) starting Friday.

Grand Gran

Dallas Baptist outfielder Devlin Granberg put on a hitting display, played two outfield positions during the NCAA Fayetteville Regional and was named MVP after going 12 of 18 with a double, 2 home runs, 7 runs scored and 5 RBI.

Granberg would've been 13 of 18 if not for Heston Kjerstad's home run-saving catch above the left-field fence in the sixth inning Sunday.

All four coaches at the regional sang Granberg's praises.

"You don't get him out very much," Arkansas Coach Dave Van Horn said. "He reminds me of a right-handed hitting Wade Boggs. He's always talking to the umpire after every pitch. 'Was that a strike? Was that a ball?'

"He's always talking. You try to beat him inside and he gets his hands inside the ball. You try to throw him away, he hits the ball the other way. And he's got 14 or 15 home runs. He's like a professional hitter. And I think he's going to hit with a wood bat. I think he's going to hit his way to the big leagues.

"How did we pitch him? We pitched him in, we pitched him out. We tried to get him to chase up. We tried to get him to chase down. And then sometimes you just have to throw it over the plate and hope he hits it at somebody."

The Razorbacks held Granberg to a 2-of-4 night, which included a walk, double, an RBI groundout and the near home run.

Red cheek

Heston Kjerstad was all smiles in the postgame news conference after the Hogs' 4-3 victory Sunday, and for good reason. Kjerstad drove in a critical insurance run in the seventh inning and made the best catch of the regional by going over the wall to rob Devlin Granberg of a would-be tying home run in the sixth inning.

Kjerstad also sported a bruise high up on his left cheek, where a misplay on a pop fly led to him taking a ball off his face.

"It's fine," said Kjerstad, beaming as usual.

Coach Dave Van Horn addressed Kjerstad's perpetual grin after the freshman hit two home runs in the Hogs' 10-2 victory over Oral Roberts on Friday.

"It's obviously fun having Heston on the team with the personality he has," Van Horn said. "He's always smiling and he doesn't get down too much.

"Sometimes he frustrates me because he's smiling too much and I don't think it's funny all the time, but he's just a great kid. He's a great student. He's a straight-A student. If you had a bunch of Hestons on your team, you'd want to coach until you're 80, I'll tell you that."

Clay Henry
WholeHogSports

June 3, 2018

FAYETTEVILLE — Jake Reindl warmed in the bullpen more than once Friday, but there were no wasted tosses loosening up Sunday night before a first-inning call from Arkansas coach Dave Van Horn.

“I think I got maybe six or seven (pitches) down in the pen,” Reindl said. “Then, it was, 'Here we go.' It all happened so fast.”

Van Horn disputes that bullpen pitch count, but the number no one can dispute was the big 97 that was on the scoreboard when Reindl finished seven innings of relief as the Razorbacks advanced out of the NCAA Fayetteville Regional with a 4-3 victory over Dallas Baptist. That 97 was Reindl's pitch count against the gritty Patriots.

Reindl was sent to the bullpen after starter Isaiah Campbell walked the game's opening batter on a 3-2 count, and he began to warm with a second walk on another 3-2 count. He was summoned when the third batter singled on the first pitch.

“As I'm walking out, I looked to my left and he had stopped throwing,” Van Horn said. “In my mind, he was ready. I peeked again and he was at the gate.”

And, there was a clear understanding that Reindl was to get ready in a hurry when he was sent to the bullpen.

“He went down there knowing he was coming into the game,” Van Horn said. “He hustled down there to get ready.

“I think he threw more than six or seven pitches. We have radios. We got the word that he was hot.

“I thought he was hotter than what he just said. Really, he's a reliever. He doesn't need long.”

Reindl gave up a slow roller to give up one run in the bases-loaded jam. Dallas Baptist made it 2-0 in the second on a single, a hit batsman, sacrifice bunt and a groundout. But that's when Reindl began to rack up zeroes.

It wasn't like Reindl dazzled the Patriots. There were some hard hit balls, including one that left fielder Heston Kjerstad kept out of the UA bullpen with a spectacular catch in the sixth. Devlin Granberg blasted a hanging slider that was held up slightly by a hint of a northeast wind.
“I didn't have very good stuff,” Reindl said. “I couldn't command anything. Nothing was moving. It was interesting how I had to navigate through things.”

Kjerstad said Reindl did more than enough, especially in the Dallas Baptist fifth when a misjudged fly banged off the side of Kjerstad's face for an error. Reindl got the next batter, former Shiloh Christian teammate Luke Bandy, on a three-pitch strikeout for the third out. That was on Kjerstad's mind later when he robbed Granberg.

“Jake was working his butt off,” Kjerstad said. “He had my back, so I had to have his back.

That was the case the first two nights when starters Blaine Knight and Kacey Murphy both went eight innings to keep the top pitchers in the bullpen rested. Arkansas won the regional and never had to throw Barrett Loseke, an important arm in the final half of the regular season.

Campbell, the streaky third starter in the UA rotation, failed to make it three quality starts. Van Horn didn't like to bring the early hook, but said there was a fear of what the Patriots did to Southern Miss in an elimination game Sunday afternoon, a 9-4 DBU win that included five home runs by the winning team.

“What I thought was that Jake was our best option,” Van Horn said. “I didn't want the game to get away from us.

“Really, I hated to make that move. Isaiah is a big part of our team. I still have confidence in him.

“What I will say that Jake had my back. If he'd given up a couple of hits there in the first inning, it wouldn't have worked out so well.”

Van Horn said the plan was to get to the seventh inning and perhaps turn the game over to closer Matt Cronin.

“Jake didn't have his command of the fastball, then he got it in the fifth,” Van Horn said. “That's when he started throwing some at the knees. So we went a little longer with him.”

Van Horn did have a back-up plan if things got away late.

“We had Kole Ramage and Barrett Loseke saved for (a possible Monday championship) game,” Van Horn said. “But we didn't need it.”

Cronin did have to work through some trouble in the ninth, partly because of a missed call at first base. Jameson Hannah was called safe on a ball hit to the infield, but replay showed he was out by at least a half step.

There are no replays available in regional play. They will be available the rest of the postseason.

“That was a tough call in the ninth,” Van Horn said. “But Matt kept it together and kept his cool.”

Cronin called it a “shock” when the Hogs didn't get that call.

“I just thought, 'Stay cool,'” he said.

Cronin gave up a sacrifice fly for the first out, then recorded a three-pitch strikeout before Kjerstad squeezed a medium depth pop in left for the final out.

There were only hand shakes as the Hogs celebrated advancing to college baseball's round of 16.

“We are excited, but it's just one step in the process,” Kjerstad said.

Reindl added, “We are excited, but we want a lot more than this.”

Van Horn said dog piles shouldn't happen for regional championships, a contrast to a year ago in Fayetteville when Missouri State piled on the Razorbacks' mound.

“Maybe you'd do it for a conference title and maybe if you go to Omaha,” Van Horn said. “But I don't even like them then because you might get someone hurt. I'm just excited we played well.”

Martin's success no surprise in Lonoke

By Harry King
Whole Hog Sports

May 31, 2018

LITTLE ROCK — Tailoring a basketball term to fit a baseball player, Lonoke coach Chris Foor said plenty about Casey Martin with a couple of single syllable words.

Instead of a gym rat, Razorbacks third baseman Martin is a “dirt rat,” said Foor, who witnessed the young man’s uncompromising work ethic and devotion to the game during one year as Martin’s high school coach.

For example, at-bats vs. the pitching machine when most young men swing away at every pitch. Not Martin. He would say to Foor, “Let’s go with our 0-2 approach,” and work on protecting the plate or remind the coach he didn’t see a curve ball in the previous game and ask that the pitching machine be adjusted to chunk breaking balls on the outside corner.

Or like last year, when Martin was coaching sixth- and seventh-graders, including Foor’s nephew. During every break, Martin would work on fundamentals, including keeping his head in a linear position during a swing, something that is difficult for many, particularly in high school. Martin, Foor said, “spends hours working on perfection.”

At Lonoke, Martin wasn’t much more than 155 pounds and almost frail-looking, Foor said, but his power was undeniable.

Batting first his senior year, pitcher-shortstop Martin hit 12 home runs in 34 games, batted .490 and his on-base-percentage topped .720.

Always into weights and conditioning, Martin was among the team leaders who called Foor the day after the former Sylvan Hills assistant was hired in 2016, telling Foor that he and his teammates had not done much with weights and were eager to get into lifting full bore.

The UA lists Martin at 179 pounds and Foor believes Martin gained weight in the fall because he was not playing travel ball as he had in the past.

In the recent SEC Tournament, Martin was 4-of-12 with three home runs, giving him a team-leading 13 and tying the school record for a freshman that Zack Cox set in 2009. Named to the Freshman All-SEC team and second-team All-SEC, Martin was a big part of the offense that helped Arkansas earn a No. 5 national seed in the NCAA Tournament that begins Friday with a 2 p.m. game against Oral Roberts in the Fayetteville Regional.

Foor’s recall of a couple of Martin’s bombs are vivid, including one that cleared the Little Rock Central football stadium grandstand that abuts the baseball facility.

He also referenced another off Little Rock Catholic pitchers who lived on the outside corner with the ball running away from Martin. First time up, Martin lined out to short. Next time, he adjusted and whacked one out of the park in right-center. “Fifteen feet high the whole way,” Foor said. “It never arced.”

Pressed about the source of Martin’s power, Foor mentioned superb strength in the lower half of his body, fast-twitch muscles and precise techniques.

So many hitters, he said, “come up out” of their legs. Not Martin. Asked to explain, Foor talked about Martin’s stance — slightly open, but not upright and erect.

“When he moves forward slightly, he never raises his head,” Foor said. “Just a hip turn and connection, using the powerful part of his body.”

Even with Martin’s slightly open stance, it’s all about getting to a square position at contact.

Martin was so impressive during the SEC Tournament that members of the TV crew speculated he would be a top 10 pick in the major league draft in two years.

Foor has told Martin that when and if that happens, there are only two things he wants.

“I want a hat and tickets if I fly out to see you,” Foor told Martin.

The young man responded with his favorite message to Foor: “I’ve gotcha coach.”

As usual, there were naysayers when Martin signed with the Razorbacks, folks who questioned whether Martin could cut it in the SEC.

“Casey is one of those … if you tell that to him, you’re in trouble,” Foor said. “If he went 0-for-3, I’d feel sorry for the next pitcher.”

FAYETTEVILLE — Late in fall practice Dave Van Horn was going over the probable starting lineup around the infield. Carson Shaddy's name was mentioned and Van Horn got serious.

“Some of our young players have gotten Carson's attention,” Van Horn said. “There are some who could take that spot at second base and he knows it.”

In particular, Van Horn was talking about freshman Casey Martin competing with Shaddy at second. Eventually, Martin settled in at third. That was mainly because Shaddy never provided an opening.

Shaddy has produced from the start until the end of the season. He was first team All-SEC second baseman after returning as a fifth-year senior. He went undrafted last June after his batting average dipped from .332 as a sophomore to just .279.

He hit .327 this year, including a team best .395 in SEC games. He led the team in slugging percentage in SEC games at .716.

“Carson had a really good year,” Van Horn said. “He was very good in the clutch, especially the South Carolina series. He was the only guy who hit that weekend and we won a doubleheader on his home runs and his defense.”

Shaddy will likely be drafted, although his leverage for a signing bonus isn't good because he is out of eligibility. But he's finishing as one of the SEC's top players and a definite pro prospect.

“Sure he is,” said one MLB scout watching practice Thursday ahead of the NCAA Fayetteville Regional.

The Hogs face Oral Roberts at 2 p.m. Friday to open the tournament. Dallas Baptist and Southern Mississippi meet in the other game at 7 p.m. Friday.

“Shaddy is on my list of guys to watch,” the scout said. “But it's a deep regional. I've got 25 names to write reports on. There are guys on all four teams that are prospects.

“But if you are the best player at your position in the SEC – like Shaddy – then you are going to be on the list. I'd think someone would want him. He's had a great season in a great league.”

Shaddy has always shown promise since he finished at Fayetteville as the Arkansas Gatorade Player of the Year as a senior. He redshirted as a true freshman, battling arm issues. He eventually had Tommy John surgery and played just seven months later.

That was problematic. He was used at catcher, third and the outfield before settling in at second base last year. He made 37 errors in his first three seasons. There were 11 miscues this season, but only four in SEC games when he was among the best defenders on the team.

“I think he just had to learn the position and also get that arm healthy,” Van Horn said. “He made a lot of big-time plays this year. His range is very good. He got to a lot of plays and he made them. He turned some big double plays for us.”

The scout said, “Carson is no longer a defensive liability. He's turned the corner there at second. He's aggressive and makes the routine plays and makes some tough plays, too.”

The offense has been impressive. He hits to all fields, with power. Of his 10 homers, six were in league play. He leads the team with 47 RBI.

Shaddy began the season at the bottom of the lineup. Of late, he's hit in the second spot.

“What he did was become more consistent,” Van Horn said. “He always started hot, but then faded. He didn't fade this season.”

Shaddy said he's made minor adjustments after watching tape with new hitting coach Nate Thompson. They compared tape of his sophomore season to his junior campaign. He also sought some advice from Andrew Benintendi.

“We found some things that we could fix,” Shaddy said. “It was mainly things about timing. There were just a couple of things. The other thing I did was call Benny. I wanted to compare notes about some things he did with his hands that I might try.

“I watched Benny's hand patterns and copied some of that. I'd text him and he'd help me. I mimicked things from his sophomore year when he was (national) player of the year.

“So with the help of Coach Thompson and with some things Benny told me, I really changed my timing. It's all worked. I've felt good at the plate all year. I really found my timing about one/fourth of the way through this season.”

It helps to finally be healthy. The arm issue did bother him for two seasons.

“I came back early,” Shaddy said. “I just played through (some pain). It definitely did hurt at times.”

There aren't any arm issues now. He's had bruises on both hands when inside pitches landed on his fingers.

“One of them is fully healed,” Shaddy said. “It's just one now that hurts a little, but I'm a lot better.”

There is much excitement as Shaddy hopes to play two more weekends in his hometown. The Hogs would host the super regional next weekend if they can win this weekend.

“It's exciting,” he said. “We are in a good position to get to Omaha, but we were at home last year and we didn't take care of it. But we know there are four really good teams here and we will have to play well.”

The Hogs have a veteran core through the middle of the field that is outstanding. Catcher Grant Koch, shortstop Jax Biggers, center fielder Dominic Fletcher and Shaddy provide offense and defense to support a strong pitching staff led by Blaine Knight, Kacey Murphy, Matt Cronin, Isaiah Campbell, Jake Reindl and Barrett Loseke.

Shaddy, Koch, Biggers and Fletcher were featured on the cover of the Hawgs Illustrated baseball preview with the caption “Strong Up the Middle.” It's a motto that Fletcher said the Hogs try to live up to in every game.

“I think that's the key to playing good baseball, being strong up the middle,” Fletcher said. “We take pride in our defense. I think we have veterans all the way through the middle and we've had a good season. We want our pitchers to feel good about what they have behind them.”

That wasn't always Shaddy's strength, but Fletcher said he's seen some great play in front of him.

“Carson has been terrific,” Fletcher said. “I think he's really cut down on errors in the league and you've seen big plays from him. He's been one of our leaders. We want to keep things tight up the middle and he's done that.

“The main thing, Carson just went off in SEC play with the bat. He just exploded.”

Actually, Fletcher exploded in SEC play, too. After struggling through most of non-SEC games, Fletcher hit .325 in SEC games with five homers. He slumped during a trip back to California, his home, early in the season. Van Horn said he put too much pressure on himself on that week.

“Really, I didn't change my approach this year,” Fletcher said. “I got off to a good start, then we went to California and I struggled. I thought, 'OK, I'll be OK.' Then I kept struggling. You have that in baseball because it's a game of failure.

“Everyone wanted me to try to go opposite field, but I really didn't change my approach. I just tried to make sure I was swinging at strikes. I just didn't hit my stride until SEC games.”

Fletcher was still a valuable asset because of his spectacular play in center field.

“I think my defense probably helps me stay on the field when I'm not hitting,” he said. “You just always want to play great defense.”

Both Shaddy and Fletcher are excited about the regional. They have tried to speak to the younger players about what the atmosphere will be like at Baum Stadium with big crowds expected.

“You just have to treat it as another game,” Fletcher said. “I really didn't know what to expect last season since I was a freshman. I know now. What you have to do is try not to put too much pressure into the games.”

All 30 MLB teams will be represented by scouts. Shaddy said that's exciting news, but Van Horn said that should not be a concern.

“He's a prospect,” Van Horn said. “That's not the issue. He shouldn't worry about that. He just needs to go play baseball.”

Confident Murphy relishes role

By Bob Holt
Arkansas Democrat-Gazette

May 31, 2018

FAYETTEVILLE -- Wes Johnson knew after his first practice as the Arkansas Razorbacks' pitching coach in the fall of 2016 that he liked Kacey Murphy.

Just watching the pitchers play catch, Johnson said, convinced him Murphy would be a key contributor despite a freshman season in 2015 when he had an 8.48 ERA in 11⅔ innings.

"We do a command thing when we play catch, and I'm sitting there watching Kacey throwing the ball to all different areas," Johnson said. "He was hitting every spot we were asking him to hit, just playing catch.

"I told him, 'You're going to be a guy here,' " Johnson said. "Right away I liked how his arm worked, liked his stuff."

Johnson's initial impression about Murphy was spot on.

Murphy, a junior left-hander from Rogers Heritage, has become a weekend starter for the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville this season -- after solid work in 2017 -- and helped the Razorbacks host an NCAA regional at Baum Stadium.

"I can't ask any more out of Kacey than what he's given us this year," Johnson said. "But we need him to give us some more, obviously, this week."

Murphy (7-4, 3.15 ERA) moved into the starting rotation during the second SEC series at Florida and was the No. 2 starter for the last seven regular-season weekends, so he figures to go against Southern Mississippi or Dallas Baptist on Saturday.

Blaine Knight (10-0, 2.78 ERA) will start the Razorbacks' regional opener against Oral Roberts University on Friday.

"I've known Murph a long time, and I've played with him for a long time," said Knight, a junior right-hander from Bryant. "It's a lot of fun to be able to sit back and watch him do it at this level.

"He just pitches. That's all he does. He doesn't get rattled. Nothing bothers him. He's very mature about everything he does. He throws each pitch with conviction."

Johnson said Murphy's fastball has hit 92 miles per hour this season, but it's consistently in the 88 to 90 range.

"He comes across as just that crafty, left-handed veteran," Arkansas Coach Dave Van Horn said.

"That's pretty accurate," Murphy said. "I know I'm not going to overpower guys. I've kind of embraced that role. I understand who I am on the mound, and I think that's what really helped me with the success this year.

"I just find ways to get guys out. I don't try to go right at them with fastballs. I try to put it where I want it and make them hit my pitch."

Johnson said Murphy is able to throw his fastball to either side of the plate as well as up in the strike zone or tailing away from hitters. He also has good command of his slider and changeup.

"I mean, he can put just about any pitch that he throws where he wants it," Arkansas sophomore closer Matt Cronin said. "He can move in and out with guys and spot up."

Murphy was 5-1 with a 3.65 ERA in 49⅓ innings last season, including some memorable postseason performances. He pitched a complete game in Arkansas' 16-0 victory over Florida in seven innings in the SEC Tournament, then on back-to-back days in the Fayetteville Regional threw a combined 151 pitches in 8⅔ innings against Oral Roberts and Missouri State.

Van Horn and Johnson felt confident enough about Murphy entering this season that he pitched just one inning in the opening series against Bucknell so he'd be ready to start against Arizona when the Razorbacks played the Wildcats in San Diego on Feb. 21.

Arkansas beat Arizona 1-0 with Murphy holding the Wildcats to 1 hit and 1 walk with 6 strikeouts in 6 innings.

"To me, that game set the tone for the whole year for Kacey," Johnson said.

Murphy held Texas to 2 runs and 5 hits without a walk in 6 innings in the Razorbacks' 13-4 victory on March 13, then four days later in their 16-9 victory over Kentucky he pitched 5⅓ innings and allowed 7 hits and 2 runs while having 5 strikeouts without a walk.

"Kacey took down Texas and Kentucky in the same week," Johnson said. "That's who Kacey is now."

Other strong performances for Murphy have included:

• Holding Auburn to 5 hits and 2 runs in 7 innings with 7 strikeouts without a walk.

• Retiring the first 18 batters against South Carolina with 6 strikeouts without a walk.

• Throwing 7⅓ scoreless innings against Texas A&M.

Murphy has 69 strikeouts and 15 walks in 80 innings this season. He's held opponents to a .234 batting average.

"He's a dog on the mound," Arkansas senior second baseman Carson Shaddy said. "He's a guy you really love to play behind because he's got the right mentality and he works quick.

"I think he's going to have a great regional and do what he's been doing all year."

Murphy said becoming a weekend starter was his ultimate goal.

"Once I got it, I wasn't letting it go," he said. "Regardless of my outing, I'm going to put that same work in and earn my spot again."

Murphy has pitched well enough to have a better record. He allowed a combined six earned runs in losses to Florida, Ole Miss and LSU.

"We haven't scored enough runs for him in some games," Van Horn said. "But he seems to pitch well through 5, 6, 7 innings just about every time we give him the ball."

Johnson said Murphy understands he deserves the weekend starter role.

"Kacey wasn't the most confident kid when I walked in here," Johnson said. "Now I think he knows that he's really good, and that's half the battle."

More than routine: Superstitions part of Hogs' culture

By Tom Murphy
Arkansas Democrat Gazette

May 30, 2018

FAYETTEVILLE -- The iconic hog hat has received a rejuvenating new splash for the Arkansas Razorbacks this season.

The hat -- with 84 "WPS" stickers adorning it for each home run hit by the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville this season -- will hold a spot in the Razorbacks' dugout all weekend at the NCAA Fayetteville Regional.

Joining it will be a seemingly endless array of good-luck charms, superstitions and routines that make baseball a lively pastime.

For every turnover chain or golden spiked shoulder pads in college football, there's a hog hat or rally possum on the diamond.

And those are just the tip of the iceberg for baseball teams, who seek good fortune in any form possible. Facial hair, grooming habits, food choices, standing order in the dugout, apparel, pregame rituals: No facet of a ballplayer's life can escape the hunt for good luck.

"I used to be a lot more superstitious than I am now," Arkansas Coach Dave Van Horn said. "I can honestly say, if we're rolling a little bit, I'm going to listen to the same radio station, drive the same route to work, and I'm probably going to park closely, if I can, in the same parking spot.

"I won't go crazy about it, but yeah ..."

Not everything is a big gesture.

"Oh, I guarantee you ... everyone has something," Arkansas senior Luke Bonfield said. "Some people call it superstitions, some call it routines. It can be both things. At the end of the day, it's something that gets you comfortable."

Eric Cole and Grant Koch had long hair early in the season, sprouting the term "Floma-Hogs," though they've since had haircuts. Senior Carson Shaddy, sophomore Dominic Fletcher and others grew mustaches earlier in the season.

They come and go.

"That was just for fun, not so much superstition," Shaddy said. "The funny thing is, you walk around and you start getting a good 'stache going like I had that one time and then you look in the mirror and you're like, 'Wow, I look like an idiot.'

"Then you go 0 for 4 in someone else's ballpark and you're like, 'Man, I feel so stupid for having this 'stache. I'm going to shave this off.' "

Watch Arkansas left-hander Kacey Murphy before his first start this weekend. He's got a lot going on regarding routines.

For home games, he wears stirrups with thick soccer socks underneath -- a combo that drew jovial jeers from ESPN's Eduardo Perez a few weeks ago, with the analyst describing it as the behavior of a typical lefty pitcher with oddball antics.

"I like the look," Murphy said. "Kind of an old-school look."

Another couple of his routines come from his heart.

He writes "soft" and the date "2-19" on the back of the mound when he pitches.

Feb. 19 is the date his mother, Cynthia, was rushed to the hospital in a diabetic coma on the day Murphy made his first pitching appearance last season. She has recovered.

"That kind of reminds me that I play for more than just the game," Murphy said. "I draw the word 'soft' because coach [Wes] Johnson got up in my grill when I was a sophomore and said a lot of kids from Rogers don't make it here and people think they're soft. So I write that on the mound to prove to myself that I can make it here and I will make it here."

Razorbacks ace Blaine Knight came upon a "thing" last year that now has to be repeated.

"I was getting loose and my trap[ezoid muscle] was really tight," Knight said. "I told coach Johnson and he sent [Matt] Cronin into the dugout to get one of the sticks we have for soft tissue stuff. He came back and rolled out my whole trap for me.

"I went out and did really good that game. I had like eight punchouts, and it was one of my really good games last year. Maybe the LSU game. Ever since then, it's just kind of stuck. We do it every game."

Said Cronin: "It has to be me every time."

Former Razorback outfielder Jake Arledge, who is now a student assistant on the team, had a good luck routine going last year.

"Good example is last year, Jake Arledge wore the same undershirt he's been wearing since high school, so that's a big superstition," Shaddy said.

"Arledge had this really old undershirt last year, and he would wear it every single game and it just looked disgusting, but he would wear it," Cronin said.

Then there's the "goes without saying" kind of routines.

"People have to stand in the same spots in the dugouts and stuff like that," Cronin said.

Some players shun the whole realm of seeking good luck, made famous a generation ago by Wade Boggs' mandatory fried chicken meal before games.

"I don't really have any pregame rituals at all," said freshman Heston Kjerstad, who did pretty well without one by earning SEC Freshman of the Year honors last week. "I try to stay away from the superstitions because as soon as you stop doing one, it'll probably get to your head."

Bonfield had a food thing rolling during a hot stretch once.

"Last year when I was the SEC Player of the Week, I ate chicken parm from Loafin Joe's like every day," Bonfield said.

The Razorbacks also were rewarded a bright, yellow "Hulkamania" T-shirt each week last season by then-assistant Tony Vitello for having the most quality at-bats that week.

Now the hog hat is hot.

Knight has one more superstition that he's held on to for a while.

"About the only thing I have that's superstitious is I have a dollar bill I found my freshman year in high school that was in the state tournament," Knight said. "We were playing Fayetteville and it came a down-pouring rain. Once the rain got done we were getting ready to start playing again, and there was a dollar bill that had floated in from somewhere and it was sitting in a water puddle.

"I picked it up and threw it in my pocket. We ended up winning that year when we weren't supposed to because Fayetteville was such a powerhouse. I kept it with me every year I've pitched from my freshman year all the way up to now, and I've done pretty well."

Bet your bottom dollar that's a routine that will be repeated this weekend.

By Danny West HawgSports.com

May 30, 2018

Dave Van Horn has been to the College World Series six times -- four with the Arkansas Razorbacks -- but he's still searching for his first national championship in Omaha. After several years of knocking on the door, Van Horn's 2018 team might be the one that finally kicks it down.

College baseball expert and managing editor of D1baseball.com, Kendall Rogers, seems to believe it's going to happen for the Diamond Hogs. Rogers replied to well-known ESPN football analyst and Razorback fan Chris Mortensen on Twitter Tuesday afternoon, saying, "I like the Hogs' chances to do some serious damage in the postseason. Picked them to win my bracket." He later stated on Sports Talk with Bo Mattingly, "I do have Arkansas beating Oregon State in Omaha to win the national title," which stays in line with his preseason prediction that Arkansas would be the last team standing come June.

Despite the love, Arkansas fans are remaining cautiously optimistic. They've seen some great DVH-coached teams come up short before, so most would rather keep their expectations in check. However, there is a different sense of confidence surrounding this year's team as it enters postseason play. After gaining its highest national seed in program history, this is the first year that Arkansas doesn't have to hope a couple of the elite teams get knocked off along the way, even in Omaha. This year, they are one of those 4-5 elite teams that others are hoping will stumble.

That's really never been the case for the Razorbacks. In Van Horn's first trip to Omaha with the Razorbacks (2004), Arkansas entered as the eighth national seed but was quickly bounced from the CWS in lopsided losses against Texas (13-2) and Arizona (7-2). In short, the Hogs were simply outmatched on the main stage despite putting together a tremendous season that included 45 victories.

Arkansas returned to the College World Series five years later with a team that began the year 31-12 overall and 14-7 in the SEC. However, the Hogs went 1-8 to finish the regular season and were coming off a 2-2 run in the SEC Tournament. They headed to Norman (Okla.) as a 2 seed and saw their bats come alive. Arkansas scored 38 total runs while going 3-0 and taking the regional. From there, they stayed hot at the plate and won Florida State's Super Regional by scores of 7-2 and 9-8. In terms of talent, this 2009 was arguably the Hogs' best shot to date. Still, teams like Texas and LSU were still just a step above, and the Bayou Bengals ended Arkansas' year in Omaha with 9-1 and 14-5 victories over the Razorbacks.

In 2012, the Razorbacks were 39-19 after the SEC Tournament but didn't have the same type of resume as this year's 39-18 club. The 2012 Hogs were given a 2 seed in the Houston regional, where they went 3-0 against Sam Houston State (2x) and Rice to move on to the Baylor super regional. They lost the first game but won two straight to advance to Omaha, where other teams such as Florida (overall No. 1 seed), South Carolina (who had won the last two national championships), UCLA and Florida State were considered the favorites. And once again, it was a team from Arkansas' own conference -- the Gamecocks -- that sent them packing in the semi-finals. Another great season, no doubt, but still not quite good enough on the biggest stage.

Van Horn's most recent trip to Omaha was in 2015 with a team that sat at 14-14 by the end of March. A drastic turnaround helped the Hogs win 21 of their next 26 games, but they were still forced to go on the road to the Stillwater Regional as a 2 seed. They swept the field there and were very fortunate to host a Super Regional in Fayetteville as a result of Missouri State's facility being unavailable for the event. Arkansas took two of three games against the Bears to advance to Omaha, but the Hogs still weren't viewed in the same light as the others from the SEC, like Florida, LSU, and Vanderbilt. The Hogs went 0-2 in Omaha with losses to ACC schools Virginia and Miami.

This year, however, sets up a little differently than ever before. Arkansas enters the postseason at No. 3 in the RPI rankings after playing the third-toughest schedule in the nation. The Razorbacks are 30-3 at home this season and they've got home field advantage as a national seed. Ten of their 18 losses came by one run, five more were by two runs. They've got the pitching, they've got the offense, and the defense has continued to improve down the stretch. They've proven they can win slugfests or pitching duels. They're legit. While other teams such as Florida, Stanford, Ole Miss, Florida State and Oregon State appear to be serious contenders, as well, it's impossible to say that any of them are clearly a step above the Razorbacks.

Granted, Arkansas needs to worry about what's in front of it this weekend. Southern Miss, Dallas Baptist and Oral Roberts all pose a threat to upset the Razorbacks and it's way too early to get the cart before the horse, here. But this just might be the one Van Horn and Razorback fans have been waiting on so long.

By Eric Bolin

SEC Country

May 23, 2018

Question of the Day: Wednesday, May 23, 2018

This is hard to say right now because the season isn't over. Any previous seasons would include the postseason, so let's get that caveat out of the way up front.

The best coaching job, honestly, was his second season. Arkansas in 2004 was a great college baseball team. Look back at that roster. Only one player went on to Major League Baseball, and even he didn't have much of a career at that level until the last couple seasons, in his early 30s. Those Razorbacks were 163rd in slugging and 148th in batting average in the nation and sixth in the SEC in earned-run average. They shouldn't have made the College World Series on paper, and they did.

Flip side is 2008 Arkansas, which probably should have been a bit better. Three future MLB hitters and two future pitchers, and the Razorbacks were only 34-24 and lost in regionals. Good season. Not a great one.

This year comes closer to the first example than the second. Anyone who tells you Arkansas baseball has underachieved this year is an idiot. Plain and simple. Sorry to be so blunt about it, but these naysayers should probably not watch baseball anymore because they have no clue what is going on.

The Razorbacks are outstanding. Outstanding. And, believe it or not, this isn't a team that is loaded with players expected to make it all the way to the big leagues. Blaine Knight is expected to be a high-round pick; Isaiah Campbell, too. After that, there's a drop-off. Bryce Bonnin and Cole Turney, two players who have had minimal impact this year, are maybe the next two biggest future draft picks. Eric Cole, Heston Kjerstad and Casey Martin are three team members who have played themselves into higher picks than when they arrived, but you'd be hard-pressed to find anyone say, "Oh, yeah, future big league players, definitely."

Good players. Strong college baseball players. Sometimes those are the best teams, even. Guys who are playing for everything they can at this level. Guys such as Carson Shaddy and Luke Bonfield. They know that, probably, this is it. A career full of bus rides awaits. It's up to Van Horn to get the most out of them when they come to this realization. And he's doing a mighty fine job of it.

Murphy saves best for final regular-season home start

By Matt Jones

FAYETTEVILLE — The second-lowest earned run average in the Southeastern Conference belongs to Arkansas' second weekend starter.

Junior left-hander Kacey Murphy lowered his ERA to 2.32 with 7 1/3 scoreless innings Saturday in the Razorbacks' 3-1 win over Texas A&M. Murphy won for the sixth time in 11 starts.

Murphy was unable to speak after Saturday's game because he had lost his voice. Instead, he let his pitching do the speaking for him.

The career-long outing might have been the best yet for Murphy because he had to work through some trouble. He stranded the bases loaded in the first inning and stranded another runner at third base after a leadoff double in the fifth.

He struck out five, including the final batter he faced, Texas A&M No. 3 hitter Braden Shewmake, on an 88 mph fastball in his 111th pitch of the game in the eighth inning.

"That was huge," Arkansas catcher Grant Koch said. "I talked to him between innings to make sure he felt good and his stuff was the same. I think that's why he's been so good for us is because he's so consistent from the first to the eighth.

"That was good to see that he felt good and was able to execute that pitch."

Murphy left to a standing ovation from the crowd of 8,876. It was likely the final regular-season home game for the junior from Rogers Heritage, who is rated as the No. 415 prospect in next month's Major League Baseball draft by Baseball America.

Murphy wasn't overpowering, instead relying on good defense behind him, especially at critical times. Casey Martin forced out a runner at home plate in the first inning to keep the Aggies off the board and Dominic Fletcher made a perfect throw home from center to keep a runner from tagging from third base in the fifth.

"He hits spots," Arkansas coach Dave Van Horn said of Murphy. "If you don't throw the ball in the middle of the plate, you've got a shot. If you're throwing it on the corners and you locate it well with a little deception, hitters sometimes will get themselves out and that's what Murphy relies on.

"He comes across as just that crafty left-handed veteran. There are some of those guys at the big league level that just pitch and look the same. The lefties are crafty. The ball gets away from the right handers and they can throw the breaker away from the lefties. He uses his changeup and really gets them guessing."

Murphy pitched into the eighth inning, but it wasn't so clear cut that he would make it deep into Saturday's contest. He had 58 pitches through three innings mostly because of shaky command. He hit a batter and walked a batter with one out in the first inning, and walked another to lead off the third.

He began to settle in with an 11-pitch fourth inning that was extended when second baseman Carson Shaddy committed a two-out error on a ground ball that took a late hop up his arm.

"The fifth and sixth, especially the sixth, he looked great," Van Horn said. "He looked like he was commanding everything. If the pitch count wouldn't have been so high we would have let him roll."

Murphy came back for the eighth inning to face the Aggies' No. 2 and 3 hitters. Cole Bradford singled to lead off the inning when a hard-hit grounder went off Murphy's glove. After Murphy struck out Shewmake, Barrett Loseke worked around the runner with a strikeout of clean-up hitter Hunter Coleman and a groundout from pinch-hitter Will Frizzell, who hit a home run Friday.

"We were trying to figure out if we wanted to bring him back out for the eighth, but he seemed like he was rolling to us," Van Horn said. "We wanted him to get those first two hitters. The first guy hits it back and off his glove might have been a base hit up the middle if he doesn't touch it. We wanted him to face Shewmake one more time. He struck him out. That was it. That was good."

Murphy out-dueled Texas A&M left-hander John Doxakis, who allowed three runs on five hits in 6 1/3 innings. Doxakis struck out seven.

"The story of the game was both pitchers did a great job," Van Horn said. "Murphy did a tremendous job for us."

It was the eighth time this season Murphy pitched at least six innings in a start. Only Friday starter Blaine Knight (9) has more starts of six innings or more for the Razorbacks.

"It seems like every time he goes he's going to get us deep into a game and give us all he's got," Koch said of Murphy. "I think you've seen throughout the year he always limits the damage. I think that keeps him in the game for a long time."

By Clay Henry WholeHogSports.com

FAYETTEVILLE — Blaine Knight and his coach both have bemoaned the lack of top-shelf stuff for the staff's undefeated ace for much of the last month.

The good stuff returned Friday night as Arkansas thumped Texas A&M, 9-3, in the opener of the SEC series.

Knight mixed four quality pitches to keep the Aggies off balance. He improved to 8-0 with seven quality innings, allowing five hits and tied a career-high 11 strikeouts.

“I know you've heard me say more than a couple times that Knight's stuff was just OK,” Arkansas coach Dave Van Horn said. “Tonight it was really good.

“The fastball was really good, in and out. He was running the cutter in to right handers and then he had that breaker at 72 (mph) that is a 12 to 6 downer that he was putting in for strikes. And he was mixing in a few sliders.”

Knight threw 105 pitches and said there was never a doubt about his command. There were no walks and 74 of his pitches were for strikes.

The junior from Bryant didn't argue with Van Horn that it was his best outing in quite some time.

“I agree,” he said. “It was the best command, the best stuff in a few weeks.

“I hope it stays around. I'm going to work to make sure of it.”

Knight said the Aggies seemed to be sitting on his fastball and cutter.

“They were not ready for the curveball,” he said. “I had only been throwing it a hand full of times in recent games.”

Michael Hellman, A&M's best hitter, was befuddled. He fanned all four times, including three times against Knight.

“I just wanted to mix it against him,” Knight said. “I didn't want to let him see the same thing twice.”

The Hogs gave Knight a 4-0 lead in the first behind a three-run homer by Carson Shaddy. The Aggies climbed back into it with homers in the second and fourth to make it 4-3. The Hogs exploded for five runs in the fifth and there would be no more action until the postgame fireworks show.

Eric Cole had a two-run single in the fifth, following two clutch at bats by Jack Kenley and Hunter Wilson. Both fought back from 1-2 counts. Kenley walked and Wilson was hit by pitch to force in two runs.

“We put together two really good innings,” Van Horn said. “Kenley's walk was a big at bat and Wilson was behind in the count, too, and gets hit. Cole was behind 1-2 and singled for two more. That was a productive inning, tacking on runs.”

The Hogs battered A&M ace Mitchell Kilkenny (8-3) for nine hits and seven runs. Casey Martin led the way with three hits. Seven different Hogs scored.

“We knew he had a good fastball,” Cole said. “He likes to pitch off that fast ball as most of their staff does. We went up their hunting the fast ball in the first. Once we did that, he adjusted and did a good job.”

Shaddy said his homer – his 10th of the season - came on a down and in slider.

Shaddy and Cole said their approach fed off Knight.

“We start Blaine every single Friday night and he's such a warrior,” Shaddy said. “He might give up a dink hit and it just pisses him off. He's a great example for us.”

UA freshman duo are big hits

Martin isn't even the top-hitting freshman in his dorm room.

Freshman outfielder Heston Kjerstad -- Martin's roommate -- is batting .344 to lead the Razorbacks going into this weekend's NCAA super regional against South Carolina that opens Saturday night at Baum Stadium.

Both are on the Collegiate Baseball Freshman All-American Team -- which has several players at every position -- announced Wednesday.

"I faced them in the fall, and I figured out real quick they were real good," Razorbacks junior pitcher Blaine Knight said. "If they could bring that over into the season, I knew they were going to have a good year. They did.

"They've gone through the freshman slumps and everything else where teams are figuring them out because this is a really, really good league. They've had games where Heston's gone 0-fer, Marty's gone 0-fer, but they bounce back better thanI thought they would.

Kjerstad was voted SEC Freshman of the Year by the conference coaches, and he was joined by Martin on the All-Freshman team.

"Heston's my teammate, so I'm definitely proud of him regardless of who got what," said Martin, who is from Lonoke. "At the end of the day, it's just an award. You still have to go out and play ball just like always."

Not only have Kjerstad and Martin roomed together but they also batted back-to-back in the three Fayetteville Regional games. Martin hit second and Kjerstad third.

Both were voted by the media to the All-Regional team. Their photos and bios are even next to each other on page 73 of the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville's media guide.

Kjerstad and Martin also lead the team with 13 home runs each to tie the Razorbacks' freshman record set by Zack Cox in 2009. Kjerstad has set a freshman record for runs with 56.

"It's been awesome to have another freshman right alongside," said Kjerstad, who is from Amarillo, Texas. "We've had a blast being roommates, and it's always fun to be able to talk with him about game plans and certain pitchers.

"We've talked a lot of baseball and just had fun gettng to know each other."

SUDDEN IMPACT

Here's a look at how Arkansas freshmen Heston Kjerstad and Casey Martin compare this season:

Kjerstad has started all 60 games in left field. Martin started just one of the first five games -- at third base -- but since then has started 52 of 55 games, including 46 total at tird and seven at second.

"Heston showed out pretty quick in fall ball," Arkansas Coach Dave Van Horn said. "We could tell by the way it was going in scrimmages for Heston that it was going to be hard to keep him out of the lineup. He was going to have to fall on his face, which he never did.

"Casey was a guy where you'd see it one day and then the next day it was just OK. But he's athletic and the fastest guy on the team. A guy that has power and a good arm. He can play all kinds of different positions.

"I don't think Casey felt like coming out of fall ball he was going to play a whole lot. But we as coaches knew he would. He didn't start much early in the year, but once he got in there, it was kind of like, 'Hey, we've got to keep this guy in the lineup.' He just kind of took over at third base."

Knight said what impressed him the most about Kjerstad and Martin in fall practice is that they didn't approach at-bats the way most freshmen do.

"They didn't give in," Knight said. "A lot of freshmen, coming in the fall, you get them behind in the count and you can throw chase stuff and get them out really easy. But those guys, they laid off all that stuff. They actually had an approach and they executed it.

The Razorbacks returned seven position regulars and most of their top pitchers from last season's 45-19 team, and Van Horn said the veteran players quickly accepted Kjerstad ad Martin.

"They saw the talent and they saw in the locker room these were good guys," Van Horn said. "They weren't in there telling everybody how good they were and what they were going to do, because we've had freshmen do that, and it usually doesn't work out too well.

"They just kept their mouths shut and worked hard every day and went out and proved it with the way they played. That's the way you go about it."

Kjerstad and Martin aren't going to break Jeff King's Arkansas freshman hitting record -- the No. 1 overall pick in the 1986 draft batted .383 in 1984 -- but they have the top two averages for SEC freshmen.

"Heston just has a knack for putting the barrel on the ball, and he's so strong that when he makes contact, he can really drive the ball -- and he drives it to all parts of the yard," Razorbacks hitting coach Nate Thompson said. "As people have started to pitch him differently throughout the year, he's made adjustments. He's a very advanced kid that way.

"Casey has power, but also speed. He doesn't even have to get hits to get hits, because he can put a ball in play somewhere tough on the infield and just beat it out because of his speed."

Kjerstad said the adjustment from high school to college hasn't been as easy as he and Martin have made it look.

"Every pitcher you face up here is good and throwing 90 [miles an hour]," he said. "You have to adapt and change. You can't be beat by the fastball or fooled by the breaking pitches. Normally in an at-bat you'll only get one pitch you can drive, and you can't miss it."

Van Horn said he was confident Kjerstad and Martin would make significant contributions, but no one could have predicted the seasons they've put together.

"Freshmen still have got to go out and do it," Van Horn said. "You never know whether kids can handle everything that's going on around them with academics and social stuff and friends and people pulling on them.

"These guys have done a good job with everything because they're focused. They're a little more advanced mentally than a lot of freshmen. They feel like they're good

"They're pretty dedicated, and they know where they want to be in a couple of years, and that's to be in position to have a chance to play pro ball at a high level."

Razorbacks baseball showing lots of depth this season

Nate Allen
Arkansas Democrat-Gazette

Saturday, May 5, 2018

FAYETTEVILLE -- Since the second of his now approaching 15 full seasons head coaching Arkansas Razorbacks baseball, Dave Van Horn annually commences each preseason extolling his team's depth.

Yet even the great seasons that include four trips to the College World Series, it seems his Razorbacks roster often plays from the shallow end of the pool. Other than the occasional super sub his teams tend by the end to rely on a basic nine.

Not this year. These Razorbacks wouldn't have gone 13-8 leading the SEC West into Friday night's start of this weekend's SEC series at LSU without a strong bench.

During their 4-0 last week, a nonconference victory over then nationally No. 4 Texas Tech and a 3-game SEC series sweep over Alabama, Van Horn subbed without drop-off against Tech second baseman Hunter Wilson and first baseman/ third baseman Jared Gates at third for injured starters Carson Shaddy and Casey Martin. With Shaddy still injured for the Alabama series, Van Horn moved Martin to second and played reserve Jack Kenley at third. And he derived a 3 for 4 response Saturday from senior designated hitter Luke Bonfield after benching Bonfield Friday night for sophomore sub Evan Lee producing two RBI.

"It's the deepest team that I've definitely had here at Arkansas," Van Horn said before the Razorbacks departed Fayetteville for Baton Rouge, La. "As far as if somebody gets hurt, if it's one of our top players, it's not going to kill us. It's a good feeling knowing that you have two position players down and you still feel good about your lineup."

Even remorsefully good when all are healthy sitting some too long.

"Sometimes I write a lineup and I feel bad about not having somebody in there because I feel like they deserve to play or they can help us," Van Horn said. "But we only have nine spots."

Whatever the remorse, it's way outweighed knowing the security in reserve. Like Kenley, last year's late-inning good field-no hit defensive replacement, delivering last Saturday's biggest at bat.

With the Hogs trailing Alabama, 3-2 in the sixth of their 7-4 victory, left-handed hitting Kenley, with two out and the bases loaded, fouled off five 1-2 pitches from lefty Brock Guffey then hit the go-ahead 2-run single in a 4-run inning.

"That was a big-time at bat," senior Bonfield marveled.

Sophomore center fielder Dominic Fletcher knows his spectacular catches against Alabama would be in vain but for the bench.

"Obviously it's huge if you look at our last week," Fletcher said. "Those other guys stepped up and played a role that was really big."

Just like Fletcher expected after the fall practices.

"I don't think any of us are really surprised because we saw it the whole time in the fall that we pretty much had two starting lineups," Fletcher said. "We knew how deep we were and if we had a couple of guys hurt that we'd be fine."

NCBWA names Cronin one of nation's best relievers

Specializing in closing the door on opponents in crunch time, sophomore Matt Cronin's nine saves this season have brought him national recognition as the National Collegiate Baseball Writer's Association (NCBWA) has named him to the Stopper of the Year Award midseason watch list.

The NCBWA listed 41 of the nation's top relief pitchers on the watch list and will name one winner after this season. This is the 14th year of the Stopper of the Year Award's existence. According to the award's website, 12 of the 41 made the preseason watch list and 21 different conferences are represented, including four SEC pitchers.

Cronin is 2-1 with a 2.76 ERA and has thrown 37 strikeouts in 32 and two-thirds innings. He has nine of Arkansas' 15 saves on the year, seven shy of NCAA leader and fellow member of the watch list, Chris Mauloni of Jacksonville (16).

The lefty from Navarre (Fla.) made 15 appearances in 2017 as a freshman, recording a 3-1 record and a 2.00 ERA, the best among Hog relievers. He also allowed the lowest batting average of any Razorback pitcher at .136.

This season, Cronin's allowed batting average is even lower at .131. According to a release from the university, he's earned six of his nine saves in conference play, including two massive showings against No. 2 Florida and No. 4 Ole Miss. Cronin became the first pitcher in the Van Horn era to earn two saves in one day when he did it in a doubleheader against South Carolina on April 14.

Cronin and the Razorbacks take on the Alabama Crimson Tide at Baum Stadium in a three-game SEC series this weekend. The Hogs sit at second in the SEC West at 10-8 following Ole Miss' win Thursday while the Tide are in dead last at 5-13. Cronin will look to add to his save total as he approaches the Razorback record for single season saves, held by Colby Suggs (13 in 2013).

Worried about Arkansas pitching? Hogs staff better than last time team went to CWS

Do you feel confident that the weekend starters will be good enough to get Arkansas to Omaha? Obviously they've all three shown they're capable of being good against good teams, but will they be consistent enough when postseason rolls around? — Andrew Ellis

Definitely. The Arkansas pitching this year is a forest-for-the-trees thing for lots of Razorbacks baseball fans. Quite often it's brought up how the Diamond Hogs struggle at times with the staff. Those are typical anecdotal pieces of evidence, however. Let's take a look at the big picture.

Arkansas pitching is fourth in the SEC in earned run average. They are a modest seventh in opponents' batting average and strikeouts but second in strikeouts looking. Most importantly, Arkansas pitchers have given up the fewest extra-base hits and have allowed the fewest walks of any team in the SEC.

Simply put, the Razorbacks pitching staff doesn't put itself in a lot of terrible situations. Teams don't put up huge innings on the starters. Arkansas doesn't pitch itself out of games. And in baseball, which is a game all about numbers, Arkansas' are good. Great, even, considering the quality of the SEC.

Fans have to feel better about this staff in 2018 than they did with the staff in 2015. Arkansas made the College World Series that year mostly on the strength of Andrew Benintendi and the lineup. Keaton McKinney was a find as a freshman, but his stuff didn't blow anyone away. Plus, by the last weekend or two of the regular season, his hip had degenerated to the point that he wasn't nearly the same pitcher. Trey Killian didn't have a great season either with an ERA above 4.50.

This year, Blaine Knight's ERA is at 2.24, with Kacey Murphy's at 2.26. The third weekend starter, Isaiah Campbell, has struggled in some games, but his ERA is still a better than many at 4.09. Knight and Campbell average better than 9 strikeouts per nine innings. Opponents are hitting .218 against Murphy, and he's allowed just 6 walks. Jake Reindl is back to his 2017 self. Kole Ramage is reliable in his freshman season out of the bullpen. Matt Cronin is electric.

Honestly, there are not a ton of staffs I would have more faith in for the postseason than Arkansas.

By packing more power, former Husker coach Dave Van Horn likes his Razorbacks' CWS chances

By: Jon Nyatawa
Omaha World-Herald

June 7, 2018

The last time coach Dave Van Horn led his Arkansas team to Omaha, he watched the Razorbacks struggle to scratch across runs in two close defeats.

The Razorbacks scored three times in each game back in 2015, but even that kind of limited production seemed like a chore.

They finished their College World Series opener by putting just two runners on base over the final four innings of a 5-3 loss. They managed two hits in the first five innings of a season-ending 4-3 defeat.

Arkansas' experience in a CWS appearance three years before that wasn't much better. Arkansas went 2-2 in Omaha, scoring 12 total runs and batting .219 as a team.

The conclusion was a simple one.

"We looked at our last couple (CWS trips), and that kind of got us thinking: 'We've got to find a way to get some more hitters in here,'" Van Horn said in a phone interview this week. "I think we've done a pretty good job of that."

They started targeting a higher percentage of their available scholarship dollars to position players, Van Horn said. He said one of the trends they've noticed, too, is that the top-tier high school hitters have been less likely than their pitching counterparts to get drafted early and sign pro deals. So they've found some good talent.

The results reflect that.

Arkansas led the SEC in home runs for the first time ever last year. This season's squad is one behind Florida for the league lead — the Razorbacks' 90 home runs rank fourth nationally. They're tied for first among conference teams in batting average at .300.

The players deserve credit, too, Van Horn said. There's been year-to-year improvement by veterans like senior Carson Shaddy (.331 average, 11 home runs) and junior Eric Cole (.328, 13 HR). Freshmen Heston Kjerstad (.344, 13 HR) and Casey Martin (.336, 13 HR) didn't back down from the challenges associated with transitioning to Division I ball, either.

"It's been a pretty good mix for us," Van Horn said.

But the Razorbacks aren't done. They're still two wins from Omaha.

They'll host a South Carolina team that won 12 of its final 17 regular-season games before stomping through East Carolina's regional last weekend. The Gamecocks finished second behind Florida in the SEC East Division.

"They're awfully good and they've been playing great baseball down the stretch," Van Horn said.

Arkansas did take two of three in a home series against South Carolina in April and beat it in the SEC tournament, too.

The last two super regionals that Arkansas hosted came in 2012 and 2015. It won both.

And that's the goal. The Razorbacks were seeded No. 5 overall — they've never been higher — for good reason. They were 11-6 against the 15 other teams remaining in the NCAA tournament field.

Van Horn, the former Nebraska coach who is in his 16th year with Arkansas, is looking to make his seventh career CWS appearance. He and Florida's Kevin O'Sullivan could move into a tie for second among active coaches if they both made it to Omaha next week.

Van Horn's teams haven't won a title, though. They've not even reached the CWS finals.

One could argue that the Razorbacks haven't had a team better suited to make a run in Omaha. The players certainly carry themselves with that in mind.

"It's just the way this team plays," Kjerstad said after the Razorbacks clinched a regional title. "The higher level team we play, the team understands how important those games are and everyone seems to step up when they need to step up to win big games."

From pain to gain: Hogs' Shaddy turns things around

Tom Murphy
Arkansas Democrat-Gazette

June 8, 2018

FAYETTEVILLE -- Carson Shaddy had to leave his ego at the clubhouse door this season and it has paid off handsomely for the homegrown product at the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville.

After going undrafted as a junior second baseman last June, Shaddy wasn't happy. The 5-11, 185-pounder wanted to show every major league club that they had made a mistake.

The infielder has battled through emotional pain -- along with a big dose of the physical kind -- to take a .331 batting average into this weekend's NCAA super regional against South Carolina at Baum Stadium.

He's also a proud, new 10th-round draft pick, having been taken with No. 311 by the Washington Nationals on Tuesday.

"I think I left my ego at home after last year," Shaddy said. "I sought out a lot of advice from other guys like Benny [Andrew Benintendi]. ... I think I'm just an older guy and I know what's going on a little bit."

It was a strong bounce back season for Shaddy.

"It was definitely worth the wait," Shaddy said. "All the heartache I went through last year, and a little the year before, it's turned out great. When I saw my name, I lost control. I couldn't even see straight I was so happy.

"Just seeing my name was all worth it, and being here. God's blessed me to be a part of this team and the position we're in right now, it's all worth it."

Shaddy made himself attractive to major league clubs by hitting a team-high .395 in SEC play, second only to Ole Miss' Ryan Olenek's .404.

He shot out of the gates with home runs in the first two games of the season and had 9 RBI after the opening weekend. He went 7 for 13 with five extra-base hits and four RBI in a series sweep of Kentucky to open league play, raising his average to .333, and he's been between .327 and .368 the rest of the way.

"He had a lot better year than he had last year," Arkansas Coach Dave Van Horn said. "He's been very consistent all year. Last year he got off to a really good start and then it kind of faded and went away.

"This year he's just stayed the same and played great every weekend and during the week and continued to hit. He's been a special player for us."

Shaddy's odyssey at Arkansas has been the definition of perseverance. After redshirting as a true freshman, he played catcher and outfielder and batted .337, second on the team, in 44 games on the 2015 team that made it to the College World Series.

He underwent Tommy John surgery on his right (throwing) arm after that season, then made 34 starts at third base and 19 in center field and hit a team-high .332 on the 2016 team that did not qualify for the postseason. His average dropped to .279, with 8 home runs and 40 RBI as a junior and did not get the hopeful draft call.

In addition to the Tommy John surgery, Shaddy had to deal with a minor knee problem and other ailments during his career. He took a pitch off his left hand against South Carolina on a cold, rainy weekend with a 3-for-7 showing that included 2 home runs and 3 RBI.

The next weekend at Mississippi State he was hit on his right hand by a pitch, which caused him to miss seven games. Shaddy returned from that setback by notching five hits and six RBI in his first three games back. He has 14 of his 43 RBI since the second hand injury, despite having an 0 for 12 run at the SEC Tournament when the hand was aching again.

"It's still painful," Shaddy said. "I found something else that's kind of helped me. The little rings that go around the thumb ... help my hand thing a lot."

Shaddy has played much better second base this year, cutting his errors in half, from 16 to 8.

Van Horn, a former Razorbacks second baseman himself, thinks focusing on one position was beneficial for Shaddy.

"I think he learned how to play second base last year," Van Horn said. "It was just a learning process for him throughout the year, learning how to just instinctively cover the bag, be at the right spot on relays, and turning the double play was probably the main thing, making good flips and pivots to the shortstop.

"Just being a leader in the middle of the field. This year it's come easy to him and he plays it like he's been playing there forever. It's a position that some people think it's a short throw, but there's a lot going on over there and a lot of thinking. You have to be a good athlete to play there and he's handled it really well."

Shaddy is elated to be back on the doorstep of another trip to the College World Series.

"It's a blessing I wasn't taken last year and that I've had a chance to come back and be a part of this team," Shaddy said. "I'm so happy that everything happened the way it did.

"Getting an opportunity to [play in super regional] is huge. But we can't really think about that this first game. We really need to focus on just winning the first game and going out there and playing Hog baseball and hopefully good things will happen for us."

Clay Henry
WholeHogSports

June 8, 2018

FAYETTEVILLE — When the baseball season gets hot, Arkansas coach Dave Van Horn tries to cool it.

That's his approach as the Razorbacks hit the third weekend of postseason play with hopes for a deep run all the way to the College World Series.

It would be wrong to classify Van Horn as anything but intense. The veteran coach has an attitude about him that is unmistakable.

Ask any relief pitcher who has gotten the hook. The fire is easy to read when Van Horn asks for the baseball after the walks have built up. Sometimes it's in the middle of an at bat when Van Horn has come with the hook, with a pitcher or a hitter.

But, there is little doubt that it's a less intense Van Horn leading the Razorbacks into the NCAA Fayetteville Super Regional against South Carolina on Saturday.

Van Horn's plan is to run less than full hot for this time of the baseball season. It's a successful plan. Van Horn has coached in eight Super Regionals as head coach at Nebraska and Arkansas. He's advanced to the College World Series in Omaha six times.

It was early on that Van Horn figured out to change gears as far as intensity in postseason play. By this part of the season, his players know what to do and what's expected. Long practices aren't needed.

“My first Nebraska team I was probably a little too intense at that first Super,” he said. “We lost our first game and were home quickly. That was at Stanford.

“I told myself after that it would take a different approach. We practice, but we don't stay out there long this time of year. The main thing we try to do is take things off our players. When we do practice, I want it to be at the time of day when we are going to play.

“What I tell our coaches is that we don't want to get them too worked up at practice. Don't try to reinvent the wheel. I want our players to enjoy this. I don't want them to be too loose, just ready.”

“It's huge,” Johnson said. “He's the man, a pro. Dave knows it's a tough, hard SEC season, a real grind both mentally and physically.

“The pressure in an SEC season is that you grind every at bat, every pitch. So when you get a chance for a bit of a break between these tournaments, you do it. Dave wants to make sure there is time to decompress between the SEC Tournament, the regional and the super regional.

“You get your mental freshness back. You get your legs back. I think you see why he's had such success getting to Omaha.”

The Hogs still have to win two of three from South Carolina to make it to the College World Series. They know beating the Gamecocks won't be easy.

They will play the opener at 5:30 p.m. Saturday. The teams will play again Sunday at 2 p.m. and, if necessary, Monday at 6 p.m.

“We have set our practice times all week with those starting times in mind,” said Clay Goodwin, Arkansas' director of baseball operations and an infielder at Arkansas from 2001-05.

“I've noticed that Dave keeps to that same plan as when I played and we were in postseason. You see him back off the players some. And he makes sure that the coaches are on the same page.”

Student assistant Colby Suggs played in the 2012 super regional at Baylor when the Hogs advanced to Omaha.

“I'm looking forward to this,” Suggs said. “This will be my first Super at Baum. We feel the pressure for tickets. There aren't enough.”

That's one of the things Van Horn cautioned players about Monday morning at a team meeting.

“I just told them to get that stuff out of the way early, that first night, if possible, then get to thinking about baseball,” Van Horn said.

Goodwin handles ticket requests during the season, but the NCAA has a streamlined process that's all web-based. Players get six tickets apiece to give family and friends.

“I think we all did it that first night,” said Jake Reindl, a junior relief pitcher. “It takes about 15 minutes, then you just text those you got tickets for. You have to make sure who is going to be in town and then take care of it. I think everyone was done with that quickly.”

Then it was on to baseball matters. Reindl finished his last physical workout Friday afternoon, what he calls a “touch pen.” That means working on his touch on pitches at less than full speed.

Reindl threw 97 pitches over seven innings during the Sunday regional championship game against Dallas Baptist when the Hogs advanced with a 4-3 win.

“I was tired, but I felt great the next day,” he said. “It went great. You just make sure you get your treatments.”

Now, it's just about staying relaxed ahead of game time.

“That's all I want them to do now,” Van Horn said. “To get this far, you have good players and you have to be lucky. We just don't want the moment to get too big. Have fun.

“We are just trying to find ways to take the pressure off our guys at this point. I've learned a lot about how to do that and I think it's so important this time of year.”

Johnson said it's fun to watch Van Horn operate at tournament time.

“It's the way Dave does it and it's so vital,” Johnson said. “He handles all of the little things as far as preparation. Stuff like making sure our pitchers and infielders are practicing with the shadows sliding across the field, at the same time as when we are going to play.

“That's real important. Yes, we are at home, but the sun is different than when we've played here all year. Last week he wanted us to see that sun again from the angle it is now. It changes as the season goes along. It's different than it was, say, in March. So we checked all of that out.

“You deal with the sun different now. Just think, we played an afternoon game against ORU to start the tournament last week. We hadn't seen this sun angle much with these shadows. So we worked on it. Those are the details that Dave covers.”

FAYETTEVILLE — Arkansas coach Dave Van Horn gave home plate umpire Mike Morris an earful during the game, but decided it best to walk away from a chance to blast his tight strike zone in the post-game interviews after an 8-5 loss to South Carolina in the Fayetteville Super Regional on Sunday.

Van Horn roasted Morris during a slow walk to the mound to lift pitcher Bryce Bonnin during South Carolina's long sixth inning at the plate. Asked what he might have said later, Van Horn looked straight at the reporter and smirked.

“You think I can talk about the home plate umpire, or what?” Van Horn said. “I can't talk about him.”

Just a couple of minutes later Van Horn was asked about his confidence level as the Razorbacks take on the Gamecocks at 6 p.m. Monday with a trip to the College World Series on the line. Arkansas won, 9-3, on Saturday to open the series at Baum Stadium.

“I'm real confident,” he said. “We are resilient. It's not like we just lost our puppy. We will get over it.”

Apparently, that was the theme Van Horn delivered to his team just after the game in the post-game talk in left field. He repeated it for the media.

The Hogs didn't adjust to the Morris strike zone. Starter Kacey Murphy walked four in 4 1/3 innings. The other four UA hurlers in the game also walked at least one and the staff combined for 10. There were more than a few pitches that seemed to split the heart of the plate, but called balls.

The huge Arkansas crowd, announced at 11,481, booed Morris early and often.

Murphy seemed unsettled from the start. Usually able to work both corners, his fastball was deemed just wide on the right-handed hitters in the USC batting order.

However, Van Horn said Murphy wasn't sharp at the outset anyway. He gave up three hits in the first inning when the Gamecocks broke on top, 1-0.

“Kacey didn't command anything,” Van Horn said. “There were a lot of borderline pitches that he didn't get, but in the first inning everything was up. He had no easy innings and it was all about command.”

It was a script flip from Saturday when the Hogs won, 9-3. South Carolina hurlers walked eight (and hit two more batters) while the Hogs allowed just two free passes.

Three USC pitchers walked only two batters. Sawyer Bridges, the final reliever, went 3 1/3 innings without a free pass, probably the difference in the game. His side arm delivery kept the Hogs off balance except for Heston Kjerstad's solo homer on a 3-2 pitch in the seventh. The Hogs got an unearned run in the eighth.

Arkansas reliever Jake Reindl didn't have his usual good stuff in relief of Murphy. He faced only three batters. There was a walk to load the bases, then a grand slam by LT Tolbert and a solo homer by Hunter Taylor.

Van Horn pulled him after just 10 pitches with Monday's game in mind.

“He didn't have control or command,” Van Horn said. “He's definitely available (Monday).”

The start will go to sophomore Isaiah Campbell, pulled after just three batters in the start for last week's regional title game. Campbell's up-and-down season leaves lots of questions about what he might deliver Monday, but Van Horn talked him up.

“I feel fine about Isaiah,” Van Horn said. “He's got good stuff. We will go with what we see and feel. There is no tomorrow.”

Obviously, that means Campbell will be on a tight leash again. Yes, that's a reference to Van Horn's puppy remark. Campbell was lost in his last trip to the mound and faced only three batters in the regional championship against Dallas Baptist.

“We are going to give him the ball,” Van Horn said, “and let him go as long as he earns it.”

Campbell walked his first two batters last weekend. Van Horn made sure his 6-4 right-hander got work in the next practice.

“He threw against live hitting and looked good,” Van Horn said.

Carson Shaddy knows what kind of lineup Campbell will face. There was a tip of the hat to the Gamecocks after the game. They are the only SEC team to win at Baum Stadium this season. Arkansas' last home loss prior to Sunday was 3-2 to the Gamecocks in April.

“They are a really good team,” Shaddy said. “They don't give away any at-bats. They have older guys who know the strike zone.”

The Gamecocks figured it out Sunday when the Razorbacks could not. Shaddy said the Hogs know they are facing a tough challenge Monday.

“They are not going to hand it to us,” Shaddy said. “We wouldn't want them to. That's not who we are. We are going to play our best game of the year tomorrow.”

Omahogs: Arkansas returning to the College World Series

By Matt Jones
Arkansas Democrat-Gazette

Arkansas 14, South Carolina 4 - Final

Arkansas is going back to the College World Series after a dominating win over South Carolina in the final game of the Fayetteville Super Regional. This is Arkansas' ninth trip all-time to Omaha and first since 2015.

The Razorbacks out-hit South Carolina 11-6 and took command with five runs in the first and fifth innings.

Barrett Loseke was the winning pitcher with 2 1/3 innings of relief. Starter Isaiah Campbell had one of his best outings of the season by allowing two runs in four innings.

The offensive stars for Arkansas were Luke Bonfield, who was 3-for-4 with 4 RBI in his final game at Baum Stadium, and Eric Cole, who hit a home run and a double, and scored five times.

Arkansas will play Texas at the College World Series in the opener for both teams.

Arkansas 14, South Carolina 4 - Bottom 8th Inning

Jacob Olson hit his second home run of the game in the top of the eighth. Arkansas is up for what should be its final at-bat of the season.

Arkansas 14, South Carolina 3 - Bottom 7th Inning

Arkansas 13, South Carolina 3 - Middle 7th Inning

The attendance tonight is 11,217, which is the sixth-largest ever at Baum Stadium. All six of the largest attendances here have come during either the 2015 or 2018 super regional.

Arkansas 13, South Carolina 3 - Top 7th Inning

Jacob Olson's solo home run to lead off the seventh is South Carolina's first runs since the fourth and first against reliever Barrett Loseke, who is in his third inning of work. Jake Reindl caught the home run ball while warming up in the Arkansas bullpen, flipped it to a fan and the fan threw it back on the field.

The Razorbacks went down in order in the sixth, all on strikeouts. That was only the second 1-2-3 inning for Carolina tonight.

Arkansas 13, South Carolina 2 - Middle 6th Inning

Barrett Loseke struck out Hunter Taylor to complete a perfect top of the sixth. He also got a couple of ground outs in the inning.

It would be easy for these fans to leave, but almost every seat is still full. The fans are ready for a postgame party. Really, this whole game has been a big party for the Baum faithful.

Arkansas 13, South Carolina 2 - End 5th Inning

Arkansas tacked one more on in the fifth for its second five-run inning of the game. Luke Bonfield's RBI single scored Casey Martin. Bonfield has 4 RBI tonight - one in each at-bat.

Dominic Fletcher hit into a double play to end the inning.

Barrett Loseke is coming back out for the sixth inning. There are several pitchers available for the Razorbacks.

Arkansas 12, South Carolina 2 - Bottom 5th Inning

The Razorbacks are in the middle of another huge inning. The first five batters reached. Eric Cole walked with the bases loaded, Casey Martin followed with a two-run double and Heston Kjerstad hit a sacrifice fly to score Cole to force South Carolina to the bullpen for the third time this inning. The Razorbacks have only one out in the inning and Martin standing on third.

Arkansas has only eight hits, but has benefitted from six walks and two hit batters.

Arkansas 8, South Carolina 2 - Middle 5th Inning

Isaiah Campbell was replaced by Barrett Loseke after a leadoff walk. Loseke also walked a batter to put two on with no outs, but retired the next three Gamecocks on a pop up to third base, a swinging strikeout and a line out.

Loseke's strikeout of three-hole hitter Madison Stokes was on a pitch high and inside, but Stokes swung through the pitch, which came close to hitting his shoulder. Eric Cole made a sprinting grab in right field for the final out, robbing Jonah Bride of an RBI hit.

Arkansas 8, South Carolina 2 - End 4th Inning

The Razorbacks got a run back in the fourth but could have done more after they loaded the bases with no outs. Eric Cole, who doubled to lead off the inning, scored on Luke Bonfield's sacrifice fly, his third RBI of the game. Dominic Fletcher, who has struggled a lot with runners on third and less than two outs, popped up to the shortstop and Carson Shaddy struck out swinging at a 3-2 slider from Logan Chapman.

Chapman, a freshman right-hander, is facing Arkansas for the third time this season. He started the game at Arkansas on April 12 - a South Carolina win - and the SEC Tournament game in Hoover, Ala., last month. Chapman walked Heston Kjerstad in four pitches to load the bases. Casey Martin had reached on a hit by pitch in the previous at-bat against Graham Lawson.

Arkansas 7, South Carolina 2 - Middle 4th Inning

South Carolina is on the board, but not without some more displeasure with the home plate umpire. Isaiah Campbell bounced a pitch that appeared to glance off the leg of LT Tolbert, but home plate umpire Billy Haze said it didn't and two Carolina runners came home while Arkansas catcher Grant Koch stood at the plate.

Dave Van Horn argued the call intensely on two separate occasions - once before a conference between umpires and once after. Tolbert also doubled and was stranded on a punch out of Jacob Olson. Campbell has four strikeouts looking today.

Arkansas 7, South Carolina 0 - End 3rd Inning

Jared Gates, Grant Koch and Jax Biggers went down quickly in the third for Arkansas. That was just the second half inning tonight in which neither team had a base runner.

Arkansas 7, South Carolina 0 - Middle 3rd Inning

South Carolina's first hit came on Danny Blair's bloop single over the head of Carson Shaddy at second base, but he was stranded when Carlos Cortes flied out to the warning track in left-center field.

Isaiah Campbell has given Arkansas three strong innings so far.

Arkansas 7, South Carolina 0 - End 2nd Inning

Dominic Fletcher's sacrifice fly scored Heston Kjerstad from third base before Carson Shaddy hit into an inning-ending ground out.

Arkansas 6, South Carolina 0 - Bottom 2nd Inning

Arkansas is putting pressure on South Carolina's pitching staff tonight. Eric Cole singled, Heston Kjerstad walked and Luke Bonfield had his second RBI single of the game with one out.

There are runners on the corners when Dominic Fletcher coming to the plate.

Arkansas 5, South Carolina 0 - Middle 2nd Inning

Isaiah Campbell was perfect in the second inning with a punch out, a ground out and a fly out.

South Carolina is already going to the bullpen. Right-hander Graham Lawson, who had some command issues yesterday, will face the top of the Arkansas order in the second.

Arkansas 5, South Carolina 0 - End 1st Inning

Grant Koch had a two-out single to left field and the inning ended when Jax Biggers flied out to right.

Arkansas sent all nine batters to the plate in the inning and had four hits, a walk and reached on an error. That gives Isaiah Campbell some breathing room as he comes back for the second inning.

Arkansas 5, South Carolina 0 - Bottom 1st Inning

Carson Shaddy just cleared the bases with a three-run home run to deep left field. That broke the Razorbacks' single-season record for home runs, their 93rd this season. The previous record was 92 in 2010 before the bat modifications.

Arkansas 2, South Carolina 0 - Bottom 1st Inning

Arkansas could not have asked for a better start. Eric Cole walked, Casey Martin singled and Heston Kjerstad reached on a throwing error by the South Carolina third baseman Jonah Bride, which allowed Cole to score and Martin to go to third.

Luke Bonfield followed with an RBI single to score Martin and move Kjerstad to third. No outs.

Arkansas 0, South Carolina 0 - Middle 1st Inning

Campbell threw right at about 20 pitches in the inning. The pitch counts aren't available in the box until the second inning.

Pregame

Arkansas and South Carolina are almost ready to take the field with a trip to the College World Series on the line. The game will begin at 6 p.m., and has been moved to ESPN2.

Arkansas will throw redshirt sophomore right-hander Isaiah Campbell (4-6, 4.17 ERA) and will be countered by South Carolina freshman right-hander Carmen Mlodzinski (3-5, 4.85 ERA). Campbell pitched five scoreless innings in his appearance against the Gamecocks earlier this year. The Razorbacks have not faced Mlodzinski.

The home plate umpire tonight is Billy Haze, who is the crew chief. Haze works for several conferences, including the Pac-12, on the West Coast. Mike Morris, the home plate umpire from yesterday, is at third base tonight.

It is hot in Fayetteville and will be in the 90s and 80s throughout the game. There is a pretty stiff breeze blowing in right now from the south that could knock some balls down in the outfield. There is a slight chance of a shower.

Arkansas' lineup remains the same with one exception: Grant Koch and Jared Gates have swapped spots in the lineup, moving Gates to seventh and Koch to eighth.

Matt Williams, who did not play yesterday, is back at first base tonight for South Carolina and will bat ninth.

By Clay Henry
WholeHogSports.com

June 12, 2018

FAYETTEVILLE — Arkansas pitching coach Wes Johnson asked for some help from the team's video man Monday morning. He wanted a “best of” tape of Isaiah Campbell.

“We brought Isaiah in and it was a video of every one of his strikeouts on the season,” Johnson said. “I wanted him to watch it and then go out and dominate.”

That's what Campbell did. The 6-4 sophomore right-hander gave the Hogs four great innings as they whipped South Carolina 14-4 to win the Fayetteville Super Regional at Baum Stadium.

Johnson wasn't concerned after the pre-game visit in the locker room.

“I knew he was ready to go,” Johnson said. “We just told him to go out there with a closer's mentality, just give us everything from the start.”

There was also a little help from Campbell's friends. The UA hitters put up a five-run first, then made it a 7-0 lead after two innings.

The other weekend starters, buddies Blaine Knight and Kacey Murphy, also helped. They escorted Campbell to the bullpen with a reminder that he's got the “best stuff” on the pitching staff.

“I called Blaine and Kacey and asked them for some confidence-booster type talk,” Johnson said. “They are his brothers. I knew that was 100 percent what we needed, just a little talk to scoop him up.”

Campbell said that's really the routine for the season.

“Those guys are my best friends,” Campbell said. “We all go to the bullpen together before every start. We are there for each other. So I knew that's what they were going to do.”

Knight said Johnson did make sure that they kept the routine going, but it wasn't needed.

“We are there for each other,” Knight said. “We go to the bullpen and talk to each other. He told Isaiah the truth, that he's got the best stuff of our entire staff. You look at each pitch one by one and he's easily got the best. All four of his pitches are the best on our staff.

“So we just told him to go execute his stuff. I just told him to have fun and execute.”

Murphy said as much.

“What I told him was to trust what he's got,” Murphy said. “He's got it all. And, what I saw tonight was complete confidence. He did a great job.”

Campbell allowed four hits and two runs, both on a fluke play in the fourth when the home plate umpire appeared to blow a call on a ball that appeared to hit the batter. There were five strikeouts.

“What I saw was that he had command of all four of his pitches: fast ball, cutter, slider and change,” Johnson said. “He could throw all four for strikes.”

Campbell wasn't so sure of that.

“I pretty much stayed with the fast ball and the cutter,” he said. “I was able to throw those two for strikes and didn't do much else.

“I felt confident going out there. Coach showed me the video. It was all my strikeouts. It was just to get my confidence up.

“And, I went back to the locker room and it was loose and fun. I was having fun in the bullpen, laughing and just relaxing. I went out there and was confident.”

Head coach Dave Van Horn said the locker room was incredibly loose before the biggest home game of the year.

“I made the comment to our staff when we went through there that it was loose, but quiet,” Van Horn said. “I knew they were locked in.”

It was Campbell on the mound first because the Hogs were the home team. Van Horn said there was one brief down moment at the start.

“His first two pitches were balls,” Van Horn said. “You could hear some moans, like here we go. But he got through that first inning and then was locked in for the second.”

Van Horn said the ball was coming out of Campbell's hand hot.

“It just looks effortless,” Van Horn said. “It just shoots out of his hand. You don't think it's that hard and you look and it's 94.

“We told him to go out with a closer's mentality, and whether it's one, two or three innings, don't hold anything back.

“He listened to us. He's been through some stuff and he's thick skinned and stayed positive. He's mature enough to handle some things.”

Campbell said it's about having a “short term memory. There's been some adversity. You learn from it.”

Was there pressure?

“I didn't feel pressure,” he said. “But I didn't want to have our season end at Baum Stadium. I wanted to do it for my 35 closest friends (on the team). I did think we were loose. We didn't do anything to add pressure.

“I think what you try to do is stay loose and have fun. You don't want to make it too big. Just have fun.”

Van Horn said there was some of that in his speech after the loss to South Carolina on Sunday night.

“I told them pressure was when you have two kids, a mortgage and a car payment, you lose your job and you have to go home and tell your wife," Van Horn said. "This is not pressure.”

That's easy to say, but sometimes hard to understand. The Hogs had the pressure of high expectations from the start of the school year. This was a team picked to make it to Omaha by most and to win the national title by some.

“It's been a grind,” Van Horn said. “There were a lot of expectations, some the (players) probably feel and some the coaching staff feels.

“But I will say that they took all the drama out of tonight (with the early lead) and I appreciated that.

It's going to be great fun for the veterans like Campbell, Knight and Murphy. They were on the 2016 team that lost the final 13 games of the season, the only time a Van Horn team hasn't advanced to the NCAA Tournament in 19 seasons.

“That's what makes this trip special,” Murphy said. “We went 7-23 in the SEC two years ago. It's not talked about, but it's there in the back of our minds for those who were here. We went through a lot.”

Murphy brought it up. Van Horn would later dead pan, “So you want to talk about that?”

It is his only losing season.

“That was a beauty,” Van Horn said. “Cody Scroggins, one of our pitchers now, started at third base against LSU. We got smoked by the draft ahead of that season. We were playing Clark Eagan, an outfielder, in the infield. Sometimes you have to go through those sort of things.

“It was hard. I remember blowing an 8-1 lead (against LSU). You tell them, 'We are going to overcome it one day.'”

That day was Monday. It started with great stuff from Isaiah Campbell, something more for his “best of” video.

Bonfield caps career at Baum in style

By Scottie Bordelon
WholeHogSports.com

June 12, 2018

FAYETTEVILLE — Luke Bonfield smiled ear to ear as he removed his helmet and stepped into Arkansas' dugout one last time.

Bonfield had just grounded out in his final at-bat at Baum Stadium, but his jog from first base back across the infield allowed the crowd of more than 11,200 to give the senior a standing ovation.

The Skillman, N.J., native capped his home career by going 3-for-4 with 4 RBI in Arkansas' 14-4 Super Regional win over South Carolina. The win sends the Razorbacks to their ninth College World Series and first since 2015 when Bonfield was a freshman.

Bonfield recorded RBI singles in the first and second innings, contributing a pair of runs as Arkansas jumped out to a quick 7-0 lead. The two hits marked his first multi-hit game since the SEC Tournament opener against the Gamecocks, a 13-8 Arkansas win.

"It was a big relief for me because I didn't have that great of a night last night," Bonfield said of his 1-for-5 performance in Game 2 of the super regional. "They were throwing me away all series long and I was pulling off the ball trying to do too much probably. I stuck with a good approach and was able to put some good swings on it and help my team win."

Bonfield struggled much of the regional round against Oral Roberts, Southern Miss and Dallas Baptist. Arkansas' clean-up hitter finished with just two hits in 12 at-bats in those games and entered Monday 2-for-8 against South Carolina the previous two days.

Arkansas coach Dave Van Horn lauded Bonfield after Monday's win, calling on his "blue collar" work ethic and "professional" approach at the plate.

"Luke could probably hit 15-18 home runs and hit .220. But he's hitting .300 and driving in enough runs," Van Horn said. "He battles and sees a lot of pitches and bothers pitchers. He's been a little up and down, but he had a great night.

"I just think Luke shows up with the same mindset every day. He comes to work. After tonight, I'd say he's hot. ... I see the same Luke every day and I think that's what his teammates see."

In the fourth inning, Bonfield's sacrifice fly to center field scored Eric Cole and pushed Arkansas' edge to 8-2. The senior later singled home Casey Martin to put the exclamation point on a five-run fifth inning that put the Razorbacks ahead 13-2.

Right fielder Eric Cole, who made the final out near the warning track in right field and passed the ball on to his father, Terry, said he got chills as fans shouted Bonfield's name and gave him a standing ovation in the home eighth.

"He's had one of the best careers of anyone at Arkansas," Cole said of Bonfield. "The numbers may not show, or the draft may not show, but he's a fan favorite. He's out here talking to fans every day. He's huge for this community.

"Coming from Jersey – a long way away – and not knowing much about the SEC ... I'm so happy for him."

Of Bonfield's night, Martin added, "To see him pick it up in today's game when we really needed him, it's big time.

"It shows what type of player he is."

Dave Van Horn no stranger to Omaha

By Matt Jones
WholeHogSports.com

June 12, 2018

FAYETTEVILLE — Dave Van Horn's 1,000th game as head coach at Arkansas turned to be just another number.

It was the 1,001st that he will remember more.

The Razorbacks defeated South Carolina 14-4 Monday in Game 3 of the Fayetteville Super Regional to earn another trip to the College World Series. Arkansas will play its old nemesis Texas on Sunday at 1 p.m. in Omaha, Neb.

Van Horn's 639th win at Arkansas sent him to his seventh College World Series, which is tied with Florida's Kevin O'Sullivan and North Carolina's Mike Fox - both also in this year's field - as the second-most among active college coaches. Florida State's Mike Martin, who broke college baseball's career wins record earlier this season has 16 appearances in Omaha.

Outgoing head coaches Jim Morris at Miami and Wayne Graham at Rice have been 13 and seven times, respectively.

Since his hire prior to the 2003 season, Van Horn has enjoyed unprecedented levels sustained success at Arkansas, including NCAA postseason berths in 15 of 16 seasons, division or conference championships five times and three national seeds in the NCAA Tournament. But none of those accolades are as impactful as the five times he has taken his alma mater to the College World Series, breaking a tie with his former head coach, Norm DeBriyn, who went to four between 1979-89.

"I've told people for years (Van Horn and DeBriyn) have a lot of similarities," said Clay Goodwin, Arkansas' director of baseball operations who played for both head coaches between 2001-05. "One picked up where the other one left off and it's just kind of blown up from there. It's kind of unreal."

It had been 15 years without a College World Series when Van Horn took the Razorbacks there in 2004, his second season after he was hired away from Nebraska. It was another five years before Van Horn went back again, but Arkansas' trips to Omaha have been predictable for much of the past decade.

The Razorbacks' last four appearances in college baseball's pinnacle event have come in three-season intervals - in 2009, 2012, 2015 and 2018.

"We just tell every class that comes in here, 'Hopefully before the time you leave here, you'll play in Omaha,'" Van Horn said. "It is so hard to get to Omaha. I mean, did anybody stay up and watch those games (Vanderbilt vs. Mississippi State and Cal State Fullerton vs. Washington) last night? Those teams were fighting their guts out. It was unbelievable.

"I know what it's like to be on both sides - the misery to be on one side and how great it is to be on the other."

That Arkansas makes it to Omaha so often takes some good fortune, but it also is a byproduct of a cycle that produces large numbers of older, more mature players every few years. This year's team has 17 members in their third, fourth or fifth year of college baseball.

"Maybe there's no rhyme or reason to it, maybe there is, but the more experienced players you have, it helps," said junior catcher Grant Koch, who had just graduated from Fayetteville High School the last time the Razorbacks went to Omaha. "To do what we've done is incredible."

It was that veteran leadership that gave Van Horn the confidence to put together one of the toughest schedules in program history in 2018. In addition to its always-challenging slate of SEC games, the Razorbacks picked up non-conference games against five teams teams that made the NCAA postseason.

"The first meeting I had with Coach Van Horn, he told me this was a special group of young men he had assembled for this year and he thought they could get to Omaha," said Hunter Yurachek, who was hired six months ago as the Razorbacks' athletics director. "There is still some unfinished business. He thinks they've got the opportunity to win the national championship.

"Most coaches undersell and overdeliver, but he was really confident in this team from the moment I got here."

The Razorbacks have played games against half the field in Omaha, including all three teams - Florida, Texas and Texas Tech - that are in Arkansas' double-elimination quadrant. The Razorbacks are 2-2 against Florida, 2-0 against Texas and 1-0 against Texas Tech this season.

"There won't be any surprises," Van Horn said. "Texas Tech is an SEC-looking team, and so is Texas. Our bracket is about as tough as it gets."

The Razorbacks will go to Omaha on a tear, winners of seven of their last nine games, including a 4-1 record against teams that were in the super regionals.

"They just have no weakness," South Carolina coach Mark Kingston said following Monday's game. "They have good leadership and they have great, veteran players. They have power. They don't have a tone of team speed, in terms of stealing bases, but they have great speed on defense and make the routine play and the great play. They have great starting pitching and have some power arms in the bullpen.

Arkansas has been toughest to beat in June for most of Van Horn's 1,001 games, which is why he is considered one of the game's best coaches at one of the game's premier programs.

"Coach Van Horn knows how to win and knows how to get us to this point in the season," said Kacey Murphy, a junior starting pitcher. "He does it the best out of anybody. Yeah, I'm biased, but I stick by it because I know it's the truth."
