Four of the five golfers in Auburn's lineup have played in the NCAA Championship with Steven Groover being the exception. Here is how they have fared:

QUOTING HEAD COACH MIKE GRIFFIN

(On playing well in the last two rounds of tournaments)

"It's been kind of a tendency all year long. I don't know what it is, but early in the spring, we would tend to shoot ourselves in the foot in the first round, then we outplayed everybody in the field practically in the last two days. It's been kind of fun to have a chance to watch a team finally post some numbers that didn't put us so far back that we couldn't compete. As our record has shown, we have come forward to play well in the last two days. In fact, in most cases we have outplayed the competition down the stretch. That's kind of fun. Once these guys begin to play well out of the gate, I think they understand that they can play with almost anyone in the field. It's what we have been stressing to them for some time now. It's fun to finally get off to a good start."

(On why Auburn played well at The Golf Club of Georgia)

"I think probably knowing that the golf course kind of suited us. Only a couple of our players had ever played the course before, but we had enough information as we went over there to determine that it was a short, tight, crooked, funny little golf course that you had to know where your golf ball was going. In general, those are the kinds of golf courses that this team plays well. If par means something, our group plays pretty well. If we have to get to 35 under par, we might have a little bit of trouble. We have a couple of kids who can post birdied with almost anyone, but as far as a five-man team that posts a lot of birdies; we don't tend to go there too much. We can put a lot of pars up and stay away from the big numbers and occasionally we'll get a birdie or two. I think that had a lot to do with it, the fact that the golf course suited our game. We're hoping, obviously, that the Gold Course at Golden Horseshoe will do the same."

(On the NCAA Championship)

"We were up there for Regionals back in the early 2000s and we played the Green Course. As I recall, we might have been double-digits under par and actually missed the cut. This time around we're playing the Gold Course, which is the Robert Trent Jones variety up there, and it is supposed to be the daddy course; it's the real course. I'm hoping that par might mean something up there more than the Green Course last time. It's a beautiful place, obviously one of the most historical sites in America. Last time up I think we took the team to Old Jamestown. We're hoping for good pairings this time so we can have time to see some historical sites as well."

(On Auburn's performance at Regionals)

"This past week Patton Kizzire finished fifth in the field. This is after winning the SEC Championship, so obviously he's beginning to help his chances for postseason honors at this point in time. Glenn Northcutt, who has been in our number one spot all year long, finished one stroke behind him in sixth place for the championship; another good, strong finish for him. These two young men basically put this team on their backs last week and carried them around the golf course. Jay Moseley has been a stalwart for us most of the year and had a really good round, then didn't play well the final day. Jamie Bowen, who has been a strong part of our regiment most of the spring, kind of struggled most of the week. He put two pretty good rounds up. The last two days he got off to a terrible start each time. He had a triple the first day and double the last day, but held it together for a 75 the last day, which was better. We put Steven Groover in the lineup last week for the first time. He played as an individual in a tournament early in the spring. He's been playing so well lately, I had a hunch. We put him in the lineup and he finished in the upper one-third of the field, which is what we are setting our goals for. He counted all three rounds, and did a fabulous job for us. I couldn't be more proud of Steven for picking this team up when we needed somebody to step up, so obviously he did a great job, and I couldn't be prouder of him. He was in very good shape being in the top 15 after the first two rounds, then got a little shaky the last day."

(On teams to beat in the NCAA Championship)
 "Right off the bat, we took it right in the face from the Georgia 'Dogs. They got after it in the East Regional. We were right there with them for most of the final round, then right at the end of the day they kind of stretched out a little 12-stroke lead over us and Florida and Georgia Tech. They once again showed their superiority and indicated why they have been ranked number one in the country for most of the year. Stanford is probably the best team on the West Coast with maybe the potential of UCLA and Southern Cal coming in there. Oklahoma State, without question, is the class of the central part of America with Lamar right behind them. I think here in the East, Alabama has had a great year. Florida is going to be a team to contend with as well as Georgia Tech. One of the contenders that I thought could make some things happen was Clemson, and they didn't make it out of regionals, so that's a little bit of a surprise. UNLV is another team that has been ranked in the top 10 most of the year, and they failed to get out. If we look up and we've probably beaten Georgia, Stanford, Alabama, Lamar and Oklahoma State, those teams, we're probably going to be right there in the hunt, I would say."
