WHY WOOD

Wood products are an integral part of our daily life. Wood products are used in cottages, high-rise buildings, infrastructure, furniture, decks, marinas and floor coverings, as well as small items such as accessories, toys, hand tools, tableware and even jewelry.

Using wood over other materials is an easy way to reduce carbon emissions because:

- trees capture CO<sub>2</sub> from the atmosphere and store it as carbon;
- harvested mature trees store carbon in buildings and wood products;
- the more trees are planted than carbon sequestration from forests will continue to increase.

LIGNO's ambitious target is to promote wood as an environmentally friendly material, aiming to reduce global CO<sub>2</sub> emissions by up to 1% by 2050. With projected emissions of 43.08 billion tons, this initiative could potentially cut CO<sub>2</sub> emissions by approximately 430.8 million tons, supporting global climate goals.
