Arts Commons Transformation Project (ACT) Expansion Public Art Request for Qualifications (RFQ)

Background and Overview

Calgary Municipal Land Corporation (CMLC) is a wholly owned subsidiary of the City of Calgary with the mandate to support the City's objectives for urban densification, community renewal, infrastructure investment and urban placemaking. Over the past 18 years, CMLC has led the redevelopment of Calgary's East Village and is currently guiding more than $1.2B in city-building projects in the Rivers District, including the Arts Commons and Olympic Plaza Transformation projects. CMLC has successfully partnered, developed, attracted investment, planned, and delivered the revitalisation of the Rivers District, including Calgary's award-winning Central Library, River Walk, and most recently the Calgary Stampede's BMO Centre expansion.

The Arts Commons Transformation and Olympic Plaza Transformation comprise of a $660 million program of projects consisting of a new performing arts centre building (ACT Expansion), modernization and augmentation of existing facilities (ACT Modernization), and the renewal of Olympic Plaza (Olympic Plaza Transformation (OPT)). Together, these make up the largest arts-focused infrastructure project currently underway in Canada. In December of 2024, after four years of extensive community consultation and planning, CMLC, the City of Calgary, and Arts Commons broke ground for the ACT Expansion.

The ACT Expansion project is a $270 million addition to Calgary's premiere performing arts centre. The project is a timely response to the community's swelling demand for flexible and accessible arts and performance venues that support diverse and relevant programming. The Expansion features a 1,000-seat main theatre and a 200-seat flexible studio theatre, as well as lobby, event, and back-of-house spaces.

The $70 million Olympic Plaza Transformation (OPT) is reimagining downtown's 36-year-old principal outdoor gathering place as a more modern, inclusive, accessible arts-focused plaza. Through imaginative design and creative programming, OPT will forge stronger physical and conceptual connections with Arts Commons' facilities as an expansion of the performing arts campus. Design is underway on OPT, and a design reveal is anticipated in late Q1/early Q2 2025.

As a result of the placement of the ACT Expansion within the Arts Commons campus, the building's north edge is located immediately adjacent to the public realm and is highly visible from the passing Calgary Transit (CTrain) light rail cars and by pedestrians. The design of the Expansion limits windows along the north edge, leaving a solid, rather long and tall façade bordering an important part of the public realm. As a result, CMLC and its partners are launching the ACT Expansion Public Art RFQ that will play an essential role in connecting the Arts Commons Campus with its urban context.

CMLC seeks an artist or artist team to create an artwork(s) for the ACT Expansion through this unencumbered call. CMLC encourages all locally, nationally and internationally qualified artists to apply. The public art design will beautify, activate, and enliven the Arts Commons campus. The successful artist/artist team will work with CMLC, Arts Commons, the design team KPMB Architects, Hindle Architects, and TAWAW Architecture Collective, and the Construction Manager EllisDon to coordinate design, fabrication, and installation.

Budget: $1.32 million CND

Arts Commons Expansion - Site Specifics

The Arts Commons Expansion will be a distinctive addition to Calgary's downtown, and its architectural design emphasizes both functionality and artistic expression. One of the key features is the brim canopy above the first floor, which encircles the building, creating separation between the distinctive upper façades, and the vibrant highly activated ground level. This design element not only provides a dynamic visual aesthetic but also enhances the pedestrian experience by establishing a human-scaled edge along the public realm.

The ACT Expansion north wall plays an essential role in further enhancing the public space beneath the canopy. The artwork will transform a stretch of the ground level area which would otherwise be somewhat opaque due to the necessity of adjacent loading infrastructure. The inclusion of public art here is a strategic move to soften and enliven this long public façade of the building.

Additionally, this public art project presents a unique opportunity for engagement with the 261,000 annual C-Train commuters that pass by the site each weekday. As part of downtown's public realm, the artwork installation is poised to reach a vast and diverse audience making it not just an aesthetic feature but an integral part of the city's broader cultural and civic landscape.

CMLC and Public Art

Since CMLC first began its work in city-building and community renewal, infrastructure investment, and placemaking, public art has been a foundational component of its mission and strategic plan. CMLC values the role of public art in creating livable and lovable urban districts, and has collaborated with celebrated local and international artists in both temporary and permanent installations. In 2018 Calgary's Central Library welcomed the work of Christian Moeller alongside other installations in the community by national and international artists including Julian Opie's animated sculpture Promenade, and Ron Moppett's monumental mosaic mural THESAMEWAYBETTR/READER. In the spring of 2024 CMLC and the Calgary Stampede unveiled Gerry Judah's colossal and lively Spirit of Water in the plaza of the expanded BMO Centre.

The Arts Commons Transformation project presents a unique opportunity to integrate public art into the vision for the new Arts Commons Campus, enhancing the cultural identity of Calgary's downtown and the growing treasury of public art in the city.
