May 2022 marked the beginning of construction of Co-Line's first building expansion in Jasper County. The first loads of concrete for the footings of the new building have arrived. Concrete work will continue into June. The building is still slated to arrive this summer. Expectations are still hopeful for a late fall move-in.

Cement trucks deliver concrete to Co-Line as construction gets underway in May.

On May 11, the new 11,000 gallon bulk nitrogen tank was installed at the south building. With continued growth in nitrogen cutting, this improvement in storage and technology was much needed! As part of this upgrade, two new trifectas and vaporizers were also installed to further improve our nitrogen delivery system.

EMPLOYEE SPOTLIGHT

MARK HARMON

robotic welding supervisor

At work, Mark Harmon is a robotic welding supervisor. But outside of work, he is an outdoorsman who enjoys fishing in competitive bass tournaments, waterfowl hunting, and just being in the great outdoors with his family.

Mark grew up in southwest Arkansas and moved to Iowa in 1998, where he finished his junior and senior years of high school at North Mahaska, graduating in 2000. He spent the next two years at William Penn University, studying environmental biology.

In 2018, Mark began at Co-Line as a welder. He is now welding supervisor of the south building robotic weld department.

“Many changes have been made since I started: Many new robots, lasers, folders, buildings, and a lot of new faces,” Mark said. “Programming robots is my favorite part of my work. Start with a blank slate and end up running full production mode producing quality parts is very rewarding!”

Mark lives in New Sharon with his wife of 19 years, Bobbi Jo. They have one son, Lane, age 17, and one daughter, Aspen, age 11.

In addition to all his outdoor activities, Mark also likes to coach and watch his kids play sports as well as travel.

A successful hunt! One of Mark's hobbies is waterfowl hunting.

Mark is pictured with his family, daughter Aspen, son Lane, and wife Bobbi Jo, at Estes Park, CO. Mark enjoys traveling and being outside.

“What I enjoy most about my job is the people I am around on a daily basis. The family-friendly atmosphere is top-notch!”

THE INSIDELINE

by Jeff Kling and Gary Smith, Quality Department

BEING AUDIT-READY EVERY DAY

by Jeff Kling

I'm sure you all have heard the term "this is how we roll." Most times, this is used in a positive context, as in when someone pulls off something impressive, instead of bragging, they simply say, "That's just how we roll." I think it has a good vibe to it, and I feel if everyone here at Co-Line is on their game, as in performing their processes, being diligent, and focused, when it comes time for our external auditor to check up on us, we will have positive results. What better way to conclude an external audit than to use this "it's just how we roll" expression. I personally know we could have said this at the conclusion of past audits, and everyone should be proud as contributors of these previous accomplishments.

The following are a few key items of where our focus needs to be prior to, during, and throughout the year to be positive contributors in our upcoming ISO audit.

- If your process has a QUALITY CHECK, it must be up to date, completely documented, you must display competence in what you're checking, and be able to explain it accurately and thoroughly.
- You must SHOW CONFIDENCE in what you're doing and be able to show off your process. Examples are your navigations through your E2 job entry, your ability to set up your project, how you produce your parts, how you verify they are correct, identifying the parts that leave your control (either transfer or finished goods), and closing out of the project. You must also be able to show evidence that your documentation requirements are complete as well.
- YOUR 6S EFFORTS MUST BE EVIDENT. Having your work areas organized from an outside perspective will likely indicate what is going on within your work cell. Keep your areas sorted out free from clutter, and have your work laid out in order. Use your allotted time to keep it spiffed up and be consistent so it becomes a habit of doing things the same way as best as you can. Make it a point to stay on top of all these efforts so over time it becomes routine.
- BE CUSTOMER FOCUSED. Continually think on how to improve your efforts so it positively impacts your customers, meeting and ensuring you have achieved specified requirements, going to that next level in your attention to detail, and thinking about what choices are going to be best for our customers.

When we use the expression "the exception will become the rule," let's make the exception be on the good side of things so we exceed our customer expectations. Then at the end of our audit, we will come out passing and will be able to reflect back and say, "That's just how we roll."

"Challenge the norm because you win with advantages."

- Robert Yates

UPCOMING ISO AUDIT:
July 11 & 12
Primarily production and supporting processes.

FOCUS!

by Gary Smith

The summer months are on upon us. Vacations, family gatherings, and projects line up to take your time and effort. Traveling to ballgames and setup and teardown of camping equipment are just signs that it is summer. With all the rushing around and extra activities, it is easy to become distracted and lose sight of the important things.

BBQ chefs know to stay focused on their final edible product and monitor the process to make sure they know what to expect. It starts with the meat and the rub of spices (special mixture that only they know). Next, it is the tenderizing of the meat for a period of time. Those who smoke the meat know the temperature and the amount of smoke needed for a set period of time. Finally, the meat goes on to the BBQ grill to create the final touch of flavor within the meat. If the chef skips a step or tries to speed up the process, the results can be not quite likable. They could be “Chopped” for the final product results.

Each process at Co-Line has the same type of steps and the need for the details, like a BBQ chef. Become distracted, and the final product may not be to your liking. Stay focused, watch for the details, and be safe.

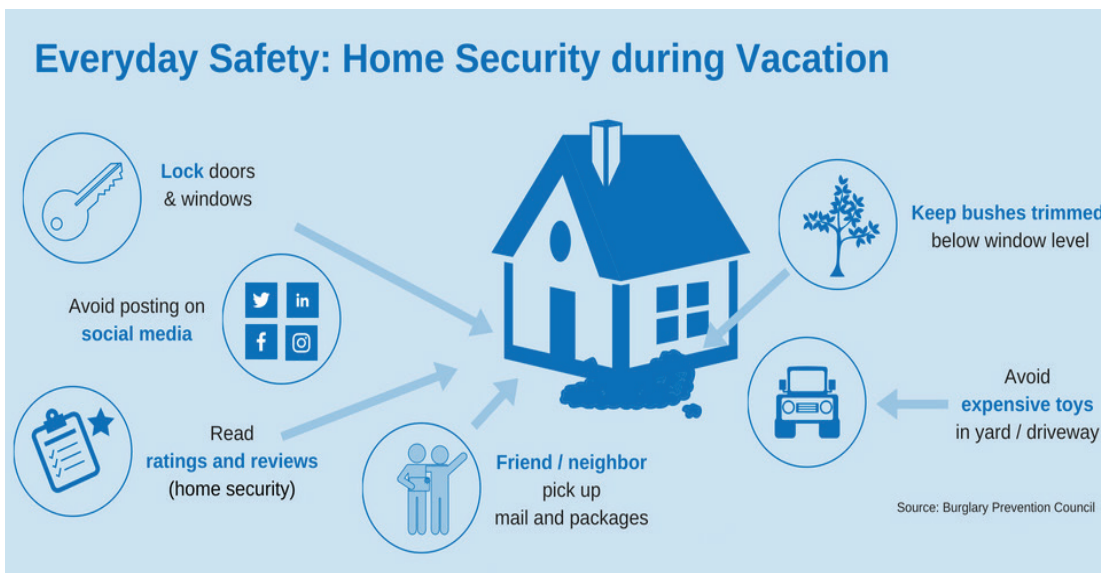

Where is your focus? Do you know what is expected from you within your job and duties? Can you define those expectations to yourself and then totally decide to place all of your effects toward that common goal? The target is within reach.

We want this summer to be enjoyable both here at work and then with your family.

We are all in this together and I am pulling for you.

BIRTHDAYS AND MEMORIES

by Margaret Vander Weerd, Newsletter Editor

I love birthdays, especially those of my seven grandkids and even mine. After all as I age, so many friends and relatives are no longer with us and are no longer having birthdays so what's not to like about having a birthday!

Someone sent me this, so before I lose it, this birthday column is as good a place as any to share it.

"One thing no one ever talks about as being an adult is how much time you debate yourself on keeping a cardboard box because it's, like, a really good box!" Guilty!

I have received cards and emails about the things happening in the year 1955 when I was born exactly halfway through the year! Here are some of the changes that were taking place then and people's reactions to them. For instance, did you know first-class postage was increasing to seven cents in 1955? How would people ever afford to mail a letter? And minimum wage was increasing to $1 per hour; no one was going to be able to afford to hire help! Gas was 25 cents a gallon, and people were talking about having to "leave the car in the garage" at those prices! Meanwhile, a baseball player signed a contract for $50,000 a year! Before long, professional athletes will be making more than the president!

A newspaper friend who is just slightly younger than me, shared some "memories" that were images that are funnier or mean more if you actually look at them instead of having them described to you, but enjoy these descriptions.

- The world needs more tackle boxes and less X-boxes.

- How did those of us who are older than 50 ever survive? We grew up climbing on jungle gyms, not wearing seatbelts, enduring spankings, living in houses with lead paint, drinking from the garden hose, playing in the cow tank or a creek full of leeches, and breathing second-hand smoke.

- Before the internet, playing "online" meant swinging from mom's clothesline in the backyard!

- A picture showed a very familiar scene – a group of kids playing "cops and robbers," some hiding behind the corn crib and other kids running toward them with toy guns pulled. On the bottom it said, "This is how my friends and I played, and not one of us grew up and killed anyone."

- And then there was the photo of a teenage girl paging through a card catalog drawer in a library. The "punchline" described it as "Prehistoric Googling."

- Does anyone remember hearing, "Quit crying, or I'll give you something to cry about!" during their childhoods?

- Do you remember having to wait until after 7 p.m. to make a long-distance call so it would be cheaper?

And the list could go on and on.

As we get older here are things we should realize:

- I talk to myself, because sometimes I need expert advice.

- Sometimes I roll my eyes out loud.

- I don't need anger management, I need people to stop ticking me off.

- My people skills are just fine. It's my tolerance of idiots that needs work.

- The biggest lie I tell myself is, "I don't need to write that down, I'll remember it."

- When I was a child, I thought naptime was punishment. Now it's like a mini-vacation.

- Even duct tape can't fix stupid, but it can muffle the sound.

- Wouldn't it be great if we could put ourselves in the dryer for 10 minutes and come out wrinkle-free and three sizes smaller?

And finally, "One minute you're young and fun. The next minute you're turning down the car radio to see better!"
