About The Author

James Patterson

James Patterson was born in Newburgh, New York, on March 22, 1947. He graduated from Manhattan College in 1969 and received a M. A. from Vanderbilt University in 1970. His first novel, The Thomas Berryman Number, was written while he was working in a mental institution and was rejected by 26 publishers before being published and winning the Edgar Award for Best First Mystery.

April 17, 2008

Hot on the heels of 2nd Chance (BKJ, Ja 1 & 15 02), Patterson's latest thriller is a stand-alone mystery about the death of a young man in the Hamptons. Jack Mullen, a law-school student, is devastated when he learns that his beloved younger brother, Peter, has drowned while working as a valet at a ritzy party in the Hamptons. Jack is also suspicious; although Peter's (read more)

Not to fear—just because megaselling Patterson has teamed up once more with journalist collaborator de Jonghe (Miracle on the 17th Green, 1996) doesn't make the pace of this slick, ludicrous thriller any slower; the puppets any more complex, or the sentences any longer. The East Hampton cops say that proletarian nobody Peter Mullen stopped parking cars to (read more)
