AARP Nevada: 2022 Elections (18+) – Governor

Governor: Gov. Steve Sisolak narrowly leads Sheriff Joe Lombardo 41% - 38% in the race for Governor. An additional 10% of voters choose either minor party candidates (Edward Bridges (4%) and Brandon Davis (3%)) or pick None of the Above (3%), with 10% undecided. However, on a head-to-head ballot, Lombardo holds a slight 48% - 46% lead, winning voters voting for a 3rd party candidate/None of the above by a 55% - 21% margin and full ballot undecideds by 11-points. It is extremely competitive, with the potential for minor party candidates to affect the outcome.

The race is very tightly contested among voters 50+, who make up 58% of this likely voter survey. Lombardo leads them by 1-point on the full ballot and 7 in the head-to-head. There is a significant gender gap both among the 18+ electorate and among voters 50+ with men in both groups backing Lombardo by double-digits and women favoring Sisolak. However, in the head-to-head ballot, women 50+ become almost evenly divided. There is also a 23-point net difference in both ballots on how voters with and without 4-year college degrees are voting, with college grads more likely to support Sisolak.

Sisolak's image is underwater at 42% favorable - 53% unfavorable, while Lombardo's is also negative at 40% - 46%. Independents view Sisolak unfavorably by a 22-point margin compared to 5-points negative for Lombardo. Their negative view of both is evident with a third of Independents choosing another option or being undecided on the full ballot, while they give Lombardo a 7-point edge on the head-to-head.

Sisolak leads Hispanic voters overall by double-digits. Hispanic voters 50+ are voting for Sisolak by just single-digit margins in both ballot tests, and they hold closely divided views of both candidates when asked their images.

ARP Nevada: 2022 Elections (18+) – U.S. Senate

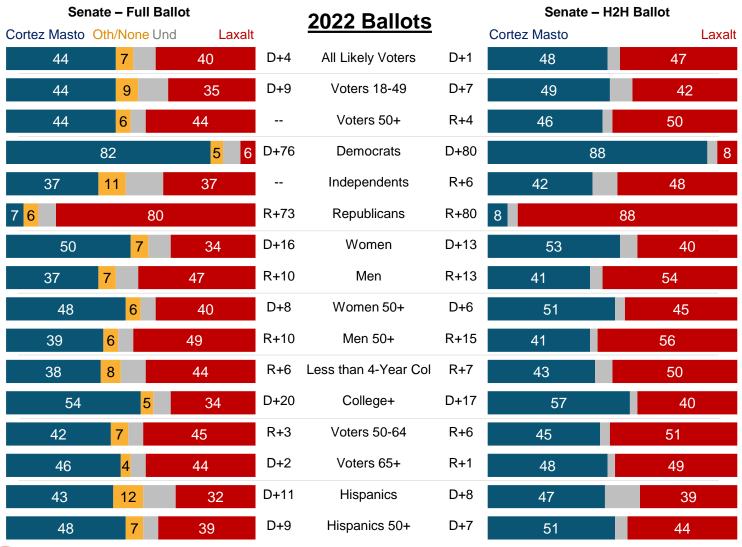

Senate: Senator Catherine Cortez Masto has a slight 44% - 40% lead over former Attorney General Adam Laxalt. 7% of voters choose either minor party candidates (Barry Rubinson (2%), Neil Scott (1%), Barry Lindemann (1%)) or pick None of the Above (3%), with 9% undecided. Like the governor's race, the Senate contest moves toward the Republican candidate when the candidates are asked head-to-head – Masto's lead narrows to just 48% - 47%.

Among voters 50+, who will make up a majority of this year's voters in Nevada, the Senate race is a dead heat at 44% on the full ballot, while they give Laxalt a 4-point edge in a head-to-head race. Voters 50+ will be crucial in determining the winner of this contest that could decide control of the Senate.

On both ballots, there is a net 26-point difference between women and men, with Cortez Masto up double-digits with women and Laxalt with men. The gender gap is still significant but not quite as large among voters 50+.

Education plays a huge factor with college graduates backing Cortez Masto by a bigger margin than non-college grads are voting for Laxalt. Among Hispanic voters overall and those 50+, Masto holds leads on both ballots ranging from 7 to 11-points.

While both candidates are seen somewhat unfavorably, Laxalt's image (39% favorable - 47% unfavorable) is a bit more negative than Cortez Masto's (45% - 48%). Both are also slightly underwater on their image among voters 50+.
