

MARA FLEISHMAN, CEO OF CHEF ANN FOUNDATION, BIOGRAPHY

In 2001, Mara Fleishman turned her passion for healthy and sustainable food into a career by taking a position leading the marketing efforts for Whole Foods Market (WFM) on the East Coast and in Europe. For nearly six years, she worked to raise awareness of the importance of eating fresh, healthy food. After a move to Boulder, Colo., Mara decided to join her kindergartener for lunch at school. Shocked by the highly processed, high-sugar lunch that she and her daughter were served, she began her crusade to reform school food. While Mara worked with a small group of concerned parents and administrators to change their local school food program, she was also working on WFM's first national initiative to support school food reform, which she continued in her role as global director of partnerships.

In 2013, Mara left her position with Whole Foods Market to work on school food reform in a full-time capacity as CEO of the Chef Ann Foundation (CAF). With three kids ranging from ages eight to 17, Mara brings a parent's awareness to her work and writes about school food through that lens.

Mara has nearly 20 years of experience working in the natural products industry and is dedicated to educating people regarding the benefits of healthy food and sustainable food systems. In addition to CAF, she has held board seats at The Growe Foundation, the Kitchen Community and Naturally Boulder.

MARA FLEISHMAN BIOGRAPHY (CONDENSED VERSION):

In 2001, Mara Fleishman turned her passion for healthy and sustainable food into a career by taking a position leading the marketing efforts for Whole Foods Market (WFM) on the East Coast and in Europe. For nearly six years, she worked to raise awareness of the importance of eating fresh, healthy food. After a move to Boulder, Colo., Mara decided to join her kindergartener for lunch at school. Shocked by the highly processed, high-sugar lunch that she and her daughter were served, she began her crusade to reform school food. In 2013, Mara left her position as global director of partnerships with Whole Foods Market to work on school food reform in a full-time capacity as CEO of the Chef Ann Foundation (CAF). With three kids ranging from ages eight to 17, Mara brings a parent's awareness to her work. In addition to CAF, Mara has demonstrated to dedication to educating people regarding the benefits of healthy food and sustainable food systems by holding board seats at The Growe Foundation, the Kitchen Community, and Naturally Boulder.

Media Contact

Dani Chandler

Chef Ann Foundation

marketing@chefannfoundation.org

410-812-2948 (mobile)