

Spartans And Giants Will Stage Parade

Clubs Will Move Through Downtown Streets At 7:00 Tonight.

The Spartans and New York Giants, who clash in Universal stadium Sunday at 3 p. m. in what gives promise of being the real gridiron classic of the pro season here, will go on parade tonight.

Fans have seen the New Yorkers in their grid togs. Tonight they are going to meet them in their "civies."

The Spartans and Giants will parade in automobiles from Second and Market streets to the Gallin street esplanade, where they will be introduced.

The parade will start at 7:00 o'clock and will be headed by the Portsmouth High school band.

There are no doubt a lot of fans, who haven't seen all the Spartans in their street attire. Tonight is your chance to see them and their coach, Patsy Clark.

To Talk Over Radio

At 6:30 tonight Glenn Presnell and Harry Newman will discuss forward passing over WLW. Newman will tell about his success in the Big Ten and Presnell the difference in passing in collegiate games and in pro contests. Thousands of football fans are expected to tune in and hear these grid stars.

The parade tonight was hurriedly arranged to remind the fans of the big game in the stadium Sunday afternoon.

The Spartans polished off their training Saturday morning under the eagle eye of Patsy Clark and the Giants indulged in a secret drill this afternoon. Fans were permitted to see the team run through a few plays and then were asked to leave the park.

One New Player

Portsmouth has had a lot of pro games, but the feud between the Spartans and Giants, which is to be renewed in Universal stadium Sunday, is expected to attract thousands of fans.

Indications today pointed to the fact that Patsy Clark will start only one new man tomorrow, Ernie Caddell receiving this honor. It is more than likely that Cavode will play left end and Mitchell will be shifted to tackle.

Play will start at 3 p. m. and the gates will open at 12:30.
