STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Graceland Hall was built at Elkins, West Virginia, around the beginning of the present century by U. S. Senator Henry Gassaway Davis (1823-1916). It was first occupied by the Senator in 1892.

On the national scene, Davis is best known as the Democratic candidate for Vice-President of the United States in 1904, at the age of 80, when he and Parker were defeated by Roosevelt and Fairbanks.

Davis' second claim to fame was his status as United States Senator from 1871 to 1883. In this undertaking he was doubtless motivated by the example of his cousin, Senator Arthur P. Gorman, long a dominant figure in Maryland Democratic politics.

Born in Baltimore, 1823, he began life as a working man and served as brakeman, conductor, and station agent on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, an association which doubtless led to his life-long interest in railroads. With capital accumulated during Civil War days, he began construction of a network of railroads in northern, central, and eastern West Virginia, thus being more than anyone else responsible for the coal and lumber industries of this part of the State. With his son-in-law, Stephen B. Elkins, he started the development of western Maryland and eastern West Virginia by the extension of the West Virginia Central and Pittsburgh Railway to Elkins which it reached in 1889. In 1902 this became the Western Maryland Railroad when they sold it to the Gould interests. Davis' success as a railroad builder was recognized by his appointment in 1890 to membership on the Intercontinental Railway Commission and soon thereafter to the chairmanship of the Pan-American Railway Committee.

Davis is considered to be co-founder with Elkins of the City of Elkins and Davis and Elkins College, being on the original board of trustees.

Graceland Hall enjoyed the visits of many prominent national figures in the days when this type of entertainment was popular. It now serves as a residence hall for 40 students, but this occupancy will be terminated with completion of residence halls now under construction.

Davis' daughter Hallie is perhaps the only woman who was the mother, wife, and daughter of a United States Senator. She married Senator Elkins, who served as Secretary of War, while her son Davis served a brief term in the Senate also. She donated her home, Halliehurst, next door to Graceland, to form the nucleus of a new campus for Davis and Elkins College.
