Brotherhood of St Laurence employment programs

*GDP does not allow for the health of our children, the quality of their education or the joy of their play.
It does not include the beauty of our poetry or the strength of our marriages, the intelligence of our public debate or the integrity of our public officials.
It measures neither our wit nor our courage, neither our wisdom nor our learning, neither our compassion nor our devotion to our country. It measures everything in short, except that which makes life worthwhile.*

Giving recognition

This year was yet again one of record grants and strong growth in donations from our generous donors, both old and new. At the same time, our staff team was busy behind the scenes getting all our policies and procedures in place, running terrific events for our donors and ensuring that we have the foundations to continue to grow. We said goodbye to four long-serving Board members: Justice David Parsons (founding director since September 1997), Jo Grigg (since June 2007), Sandie De Wolf (since August 2008) and Tim James (since September 2009). All of these directors actively supported the foundation with their skills, knowledge and experience, and we are sorry to see them leave. New Board members joined - in July 2012 Steve Rothfield, Emma Woolley and George Krithis and in November 2012 Pamela McLure and Al Webster. All these new Board members have joined our sub-committees and have been active in all areas of Australian Communities Foundation (ACF).

By the time you read this, our CEO Clare Brooks will have completed her 18 month contract and returned to her home in London. During a period of growth and change Clare brought her experience from the community foundation field in Europe. She has raised the profile and potential of the Foundation and community philanthropy nationally, connecting us globally, and helped us develop our efficiency and effectiveness. One important outcome from her tenure is our continuing awareness of the importance of building the Australia-wide network of community foundations and the capacity for a national professional body to promote the potential of the movement to professional bodies, government and organisations a national level. We will also have said goodbye to Rebekah Lautman who leaves us to take up a new and exciting national position at Headspace, and Leonie Mugavin who is relocating to the Surf Coast Shire as their new Community Project Officer. I thank all of them for their service and terrific work at the Foundation.

In the spirit of our commitment to building communities of donors and contributing to thoughtful leadership in philanthropy, we were involved with a number of initiatives. One was the pilot of The Funding Network Australia, set up with funding from the Steve Lawrence Social Innovation Fund. Those of you who missed the TFN event in 2013 will really enjoy future events in 2014. Additionally, our Ambassadors for Philanthropy Tour raised the profile of community foundations in New South Wales, Victoria and Western Australia and forced all of us to think outside our comfort zones. Our fourth annual Philanthropy and Ethics Forum, held in partnership with Melbourne Writers Festival, explored the topic of "education, democracy and philanthropy" with a panel of thought-provoking speakers.

Finally, I'd like to thank all the Board members of Australian Communities Foundation, for their commitment, our staff members for their hard work and dedication, and the support and mentoring given to both Clare and me by our Strategic Advisors Group: Marion Webster, Hayden Raysmith, David Gibbs, Greg Larsen and Chris Arnold. They bring with them 16 years of history at the Foundation, as well as their vast networks.

We look forward to 2013-14 being another exciting year with our new CEO, Jonathan Chapman, and welcome him warmly to Australian Communities Foundation.

Giving voice

We receive many visitors to our offices in Fitzroy Town Hall, but one which stands out this year was the young Indigenous operatic tenor Tiriki Onus who came to sing at our Indigenous Donors Circle event in October 2012. Not only did his magnificent voice fill the Council Chamber, corridors and stairs, but he also spoke about his life and the chance afforded to him to excel in his profession by the Dame Nellie Melba Opera Trust Harold Blair Scholarship.

It is therefore fitting that the theme of this year's annual report is "Giving Voice". We reflect upon the hum and buzz of our biggest year ever in terms of amount and number of grants - 7 million and 500 grants - and highlight just a few of the activities we undertook.

Two particularly robust spokespeople last year were Roberta d'Eustachio of Ambassadors for Philanthropy and Kevin Murphy of Berks County Community Foundation and US Council on Foundations, both of whom we hosted in April. Roberta spoke passionately of the need for more vocal philanthropy. "If no one talks about giving then there are no role models created," she said. Kevin powerfully advocated the role of community foundations at Philanthropy Australia's AGM, noting the high regard in which they're held by policy makers and the public in his own country because of their impact, outreach, openness and inclusion.

The theme of voices also extended to our work with the Australian National Development Index (ANDI) with whom we now partner. Headed by Professor Mike Salvaris, ANDI is a national, collaborative research project that will combine with an extensive community consultation process to draw thousands of Australians in conversation on "What Kind of Australia Do We Want?" It will be a fascinating debate to watch unfold in years to come.

The success of any conversation of course depends much on how we listen. As we go into a new year we are aware of the predictions of a rapidly changing and more difficult funding environment for charities and not-for-profits we support. Our ears and our imaginations will need to be open to their priorities and the needs of the people they support.

Working with you all has been an extraordinary gift. My thanks in particular to Dr Annie Duncan, all the Board, staff and volunteers of Australian Communities Foundation, as well as our donors and grantees. Your example, voices and stories will remain an enduring inspiration to me.

Board, Sub-committees, Ambassadors and Staff

The Trustee of Australian Communities Foundation is Australian Communities Foundation Limited. The Trustee has a Board of directors of between four and 20 Trustees. The directors are appointed by the Board and serve for a period of three years, after which they may put themselves forward for another three years. At the end of two three year terms, a director may be invited to serve a further three year term.

The Board meets six times a year and between these meetings business is conducted through five sub-committees. At the Board meetings the trustees agree the broad strategy and the areas of activity of the Foundation. These include considerations of grantmaking and fund development, financial reporting, policy reviews, and risk management. The Board's operation and performance is externally reviewed every two years.

All community foundations are overseen by a volunteer board of leading professionals with expertise in identifying community needs. These include business and financial management, law, and community development. Board members volunteer their time to oversee the functions of Australian Communities Foundation and contribute financially to its operations.

When I think about it, I have been involved in the world of philanthropy for more than 25 years.

It all began in 1988 when I was engaged in a joint venture between the Victorian Government and the Victorian Women's Trust to administer a micro-business loans scheme and develop a business support initiative called Women's Enterprise Connection.

A few years later, in 1991, I was fortunate to be a recipient of philanthropic grant when I was awarded a Winston Churchill Memorial Trust Fellowship to study community development financing innovations in a number of disadvantaged community settings. Then again in 1993, I was awarded a place by the Hugh Williamson Foundation in the Victorian Community Leadership Program, now known as Leadership Victoria.

These experiences were all life changing and it is no wonder that philanthropy continues to be an important aspect of my professional and my personal life today.

As a Partner with Pitcher Partners Melbourne, I act as investment adviser to numerous charitable foundations, public ancillary funds and private ancillary funds. However I have also found other roles: as a Board Member of Australian Communities Foundation; as a steward of the ACF Mission; as a volunteer; as a committee member; and as an advocate, where my job is to act as steward of the ACF mission of accessible, engaged, community building philanthropy for all. I am a volunteer Investment Committee Member on an educational charitable foundation and an advocate for charitable foundations through membership of the Australian Institute of Company Directors' Victorian Not For Profit Committee. My engagement in philanthropy also extends to being an educator and course leader for Philanthropy Australia where I presented their governance program in 2013.

I have also laid plans to carry my philanthropy into the future: as philanthropic principal in establishing both a sub-fund and a Gumnut Account with Australian Communities Foundation.

Philanthropy provided me with some extraordinary opportunities early in my life. It is therefore a great pleasure to be able to both give back to the sector - and pay forward to the next generation of philanthropic recipients. They will, I am confident, continue the philanthropic journey themselves to create better community futures.

I warmly encourage people new to philanthropy to get involved. But be warned, it's infectious!

Sue Dahn

Giving a voice to many

Australian Communities Foundation Limited operates three charitable trust funds and provides opportunities for donors of all styles to give voice to their philanthropy through our giving vehicles, tools, services and expertise.

Australian Communities Foundation Fund

This fund is a public ancillary fund endorsed as a Deductible Gift Recipient (DGR), and an Income Tax Exempt Fund (ITEF). Most sub-funds and Gumnut Accounts are established in this fund because individuals can claim a tax deduction for their donation. Companies' workplace giving contributions are placed in this fund, which gives an automatic tax deduction for employees. All grants from the fund must be made to Item 1 DGR charities.

Australian Communities Foundation Extension Fund

The Australian Communities Foundation Extension Fund is endorsed as a Tax Concession Charity (TCC). Donations are non-tax deductible. Types of donations made to this fund are bequests, fundraising and sponsorships where a tax deduction is not eligible. Granting from this fund can be made to organisations and individuals for charitable purposes.

Australian Communities Foundation Scholarship Fund

The Scholarship Fund is a public fund for the provision of educational scholarships, prizes and bursaries. It is endorsed as an Item 1 DGR and donations are tax deductible.

Planning your giving

From making a donation to creating a legacy, Australian Communities Foundation offers people from all walks of life an accessible, easy and satisfying way of giving something of real value back to the communities that they care about.

We offer an extensive range of products and services to help donors create effective giving plans. Donors have access to a network of likeminded people, extensive grantmaking skills and opportunities to engage in educative forums. We also offer one of the best and easiest ways of establishing a perpetual source of giving.

Sub-funds

Donors can set up a sub-fund with a minimum $20,000 initial donation. They can be established in any of ACF's trust funds, depending on whether a donor wants a tax-deductible or a non tax-deductible vehicle.

Gumnut Accounts

Gumnut Accounts make philanthropy accessible to everyone. They are philanthropic savings accounts donors can establish with regular $2,000 a year minimum contributions.

Supporting foundations

A supporting foundation can be started with a minimum of $1 million. These are separate public funds under the Australian Communities Foundation Trustee.

Corporate sub-funds and workplace giving

Business and organisations can establish branded charitable sub-funds, giving their employees a chance to make pre-tax contributions to a charitable cause. By removing the administrative burden we help businesses and their staff make the most of their philanthropic dollars.

Bequests

Australian Communities Foundation can work with donors and their lawyers to create estate-planning strategies that will preserve charitable legacies beyond people's lifetime.

Donations

Tax-deductible donations can be made to Australian Communities Foundation. All grants made from this fund are determined by the Board and generally directed to the Foundation's strategic initiatives.

Online giving

Australian Communities Foundation has three ways to help donors give and track donations online.

Donor Central

Donor Central is Australian Communities Foundation's online resource centre for donors. It provides donors with access to a funding request directory, upcoming events, recent grantmaking activity, all donor forms and an online donation facility

Donations gateway

The online donations portal accepts credit card, EFT, Bpay and cheques. Cash donations can also be made via Australia Post Billpay. The donations portal produces electronic receipts.

Sub-funds Online

The web portal gives donors individual secure access to financial transactions, such as donations and grants, as well as investments details and sub-fund balances.

Talk the talk

Ellen Koshland has been part of Melbourne and Australian life since the 1970s, when she first arrived from the USA. A long-standing advocate of young people and their great talents, among her many interests - which include the arts, education, citizenship and policy debate - she has supported a variety of education programmes as well as advocated strongly for greater community support and equity in public education.

A founder of the Education Foundation in 1989 (which has since joined forces with the Foundation for Young Australians), in 2005 she became an Ambassador for Australian Communities Foundation and subsequently established a sub-fund, the Koshland Innovation Fund.

Involved for many years with Melbourne Writers Festival, last year saw her deepen her links with another literary enterprise, the Stella Prize, a major new award to encourage and celebrate the writing of Australian women authors, Ellen explains: "All countries have a public imagination: a set of stories by which they know themselves. In Australia, for a whole raft of reasons, those stories have been largely male... I see the Stella Prize not as countering this, but as an opportunity to amplify it, to add and to fill out the picture, so that we have a much richer, fuller and more representative Australian story to be shared among us as we go forward."

Ellen believes passionately that philanthropy has a key responsibility to build enduring change, beyond short cycles of elections and shifts in corporate areas of attention. This is a topic she explored further during the Foundation's Ambassadors for Philanthropy 2013 Tour, where she spoke on a panel at an event hosted by the Macquarie Group in Melbourne with Simon McKeon AO.

Collective voices

One of the many ways the Foundation helps build healthy and resilient communities is by providing opportunities for its donors to connect with each other to hear about emerging issues and current trends. Each year the Foundation hosts a range of events and activities for our community of donors to inspire and encourage philanthropy and promote engagement with the issues they are passionate about.

Through our ongoing Environment and Indigenous Donors Circles, interested donors are able to explore different approaches for achieving impact and share best practice in areas of high need. Over the past year expert speakers from the community sector have helped donors enhance their understanding of, and find innovative solutions for, a range of initiatives from strategies for effective granting in climate change to transition to school projects for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children.

A growing number of sub-funds are also dedicated to collective giving to make positive change with their philanthropy. For example, the Impact100 WA and Impact100 Melbourne sub-funds are based on a model from the USA which seeks 100 donors to contribute $1,000 annually. Through the pooling of its resources, the Foundation sub-funds distribute one significant grant of up to $100,000 each year to a local organisation or community project.

The Foundation also supported its first Indigenous Giving Circle. Funds were pooled to create real impact for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people. As well as grants from the Foundation, this group has commenced contributing their own time and skills. Collective giving was also enabled through supporting The Funding Network in the 2013 pilot events in Sydney, Melbourne and Perth. This provided donors and the wider philanthropic community with a fun and engaging opportunity to support new initiatives.

Savvy Giving - The Art and Science of Philanthropy

To inspire new donors and philanthropy in general, the Australian Communities Foundation commissioned a book to provide practical advice and explore the bigger picture of strategic giving. Through support from the Hartline Fund, Savvy Giving - The Art and Science of Philanthropy was written by Genevieve Timmons to make charitable giving easy, accessible and rewarding. The book provides a step-by-step comprehensive guide to achieving an enduring impact. It shows how philanthropic dollars, when strategically spent, can generate great outcomes for the social landscape you care about. Copies of the book, published by Hardie Grant Books, are available for purchase from the Foundation's website.

Giving opportunities

The Omi-Albers fund was established in 2006, primarily to support programs which improve the lives of refugees and young people and projects which bring about social change with a focus on human rights. As the funds to establish the Omi-Albers sub-fund came from WW2 reparations made to survivors and their relatives, the focus on refugees and human rights is very personal for the donors.

A number of small, thoughtful grants have been made to marginalised communities and causes which have limited financial support and, often, limited community support. As the donor says,

We have been involved in philanthropy and social change projects for a while now. Whilst the funding pool is not huge we make an effort to recommend projects for funding that we feel act as “acupuncture points” in the issues to make a small but significant change. I must say that Australian Communities Foundation really assists us by sourcing then feeding through projects they think we’ll like.

The first grant in 2007 was to Victorian Arabic Social Services, a not-for-profit community organisation that provides support, information, education and settlement support programs to disadvantaged and socially isolated members of the Arabic speaking community, for the Anti Racism Action Band (A.R.A.B.)

The most recent grant was to support a research project examining the impact on health care professionals caring for asylum seekers in Australia’s offshore detention centres.

In-between, Omi-Albers has supported a number of projects including:

- Foundation House - Victorian Foundation for Survivors of Torture
- Brotherhood of St Laurence for a program to support Sudanese women settling into a new community
- Mental Health Research Institute for a research project which investigated mental health issues amongst the refugee population
- Flemington and Kensington Community Legal Centre supporting young men of African descent who contend they have been subjected to policing interventions because of their race rather than criminality
- The Fellowship for Indigenous Leadership

The Omi-Albers sub-fund grants are small (under $5,000), but it often supports projects with other Australian Communities Foundation sub-funds, giving a greater voice to those in the community in need, as well as enabling social change.

Planning to give

Australian Communities Foundation's grants program for 2012-13 again set a new record for distributions and total number of grants made. The Foundation made 430 grants totalling approximately $7 million across Australia and internationally, up from $3.8 million the previous year.

Grants were actively supporting programs, projects and organisations undertaking work in education, environment, health, arts and culture, community development, advocacy and service delivery. These grants have given donors the ability to deliver effective and tailored responses to a range of social and environmental issues confronting communities everywhere.

This year we saw several large distributions. These grants were strategically targeted to strengthen organisational capacity and the work undertaken by a number of not-for-profits. Other grants also provided flexible funding to the charitable sector with 29% of all the Foundation's grants targeted towards the principle activities or general operations of organisations.

General support grants help good work take place where it's needed. Please see the grants booklet for a full list of this year's grants.

In 2012-13, the key areas of interest in the grantmaking program remained similar to previous years. For example, 24% or over 100 individual grants supported education, employment and training initiatives and 69 grants targeted community development and advocacy.

The Foundation is pleased to report that grants targeting the environment increased to 37% of the total dollar distribution, and arts and culture rose to 25%.

In its second year of becoming a national organisation, grants continue to reach across Australia and internationally. With 51% of grants targeting national projects, Australian Communities Foundation has helped fund innovative solutions to address persistent and entrenched issues across a wide geographic reach. The Foundation also continued its strong support for its traditional base with 39% of all grants in Greater Melbourne and Victoria.

Of particular benefit have been our geographic sub-funds, Impact100 WA and the Glenorchy Community Fund in Tasmania, as well as The Funding Network grants which have extended our knowledge and increased our granting across Australia.

430 grants were made this year. The grants are varied, with the majority under $10,000. Our smallest grant remained at $500 with our largest grant a record $1 million.

Including the 2012-13 grants, the Foundation has distributed over $28 million since its inception in 1997.

Australian National Development Index – Australian Communities Foundation’s new partnership

Since becoming a national organisation in July 2011, the Foundation has sought to build partnerships and collaborations to meet the needs of diverse communities across Australia. The Australian National Developmental Index (ANDI) has provided a wonderful opportunity to do this.

This major initiative aims to create a new national model of progress, moving from one which focuses solely on increasing economic production and wealth, to one which tracks progress towards equitable and sustainable wellbeing for all Australians.

The information gathered will help the Foundation identify key issues and areas of need.

Australian Communities Foundation is currently developing a partnership with ANDI to assist it scale up its activities. Utilising the Foundation’s expertise and experience, it will work with ANDI to increase its profile and the resources needed to commence the community consultation component of the Index across Australia.

Twenty different voices. One consistent story.

Twenty years ago, on 1 March 1993, the Disability Discrimination Act (DDA) came into effect. It made disability discrimination unlawful, improving the lives of people with a disability across Australia.

To celebrate the Disability Discrimination Act's 20th birthday, the Australian Human Rights Commission's Disability Discrimination Commissioner Graeme Innes AM, in partnership with the Sydney Community Foundation, developed the Twenty Years: Twenty Stories project.

The Twenty Years: Twenty Stories short films project tells the stories of 20 people who have used the Disability Discrimination Act to change the lives of many. It acknowledges the progress of disability rights in Australia and encourages greater participation in disability issues.

Through Australian Communities Foundation, the Paterson Family Fund has supported four of these inspiring stories.

Hot Tutti is a documentary about a five young women in the girl act, Hot Tutti. Each singer has a disability. But, while working with a team can be tough, their disabilities have in many ways brought them closer together.

The Rockwheelers describes how, since taking up wheelchair basketball, former self-confessed book-worm Paul Gooda hasn't considered going back to his reclusive life. Inclusion is what the DDA was designed for. All Paul needed was a team to call his own.

Room for Change documents how Stella Young and Madeleine Sobb have fought for their fashion in very different ways and both have won.

Dee's Place is a documentary about the changes to Dee Holmes life when she decided to live independently from her family.

Twenty years on and we now have DisabilityCare Australia, Australia's national disability insurance scheme launched in March 2013. The scheme will enable a new way of providing community linking and individualised support for people with permanent and significant disability, their families and carers.

Become part of the discussion

In 2012-13 a number of sub-funds very generously supported The Climate Institute. Collectively the Australian Communities Foundation funding for the organisation culminated in the largest grants ever made by the Foundation.

The journey from 2005 to today has not always been a smooth one when it comes to finding solutions needed to address climate change. The coming years look, if anything, even more uncertain. As an independent research and communications organisation, one of the Institute's greatest assets to help deal with this ongoing uncertainty is its flexibility and adaptability.

This independence has enabled it to respond quickly to emerging issues and opportunities to forge strong partnerships with businesses, community organisations and governments, and undertake ground-breaking projects looking to open up new pathways to a zero-carbon future.

The grants themselves were primarily provided as core funding, which gives the Institute the flexibility to focus efforts where it can be most effective. It allows the organisation to build on a number of key areas of work, including its Global Climate Leadership Review 2013 - Low Carbon Competitive Index with GE, as well as develop Climate of the Nation - attitudinal research which has revealed a climate debate emerging from the shadows of the carbon tax. Answering the call.

You don't have to be rich or famous to make a difference. You just have to make a decision.

At the start of 2012 Christopher and Kerri determined it was time for them to make such a decision. They borrowed a copy of Tracy Geary's book Inspired Philanthropy: your step-by-step guide to creating a giving plan and leaving a legacy. Together they identified a series of the exercises as an aid to clarifying their motivations and goals, and as a path to developing a more structured approach to their giving.

One of the results was the establishment of the Equal Access Fund. Christopher works in education and Kerri is a librarian. They share a passion for literacy and its fundamental role in giving individuals and communities access to so much of what many of us take for granted. The Equal Access Fund is aimed at improving literacy for Australians as a means of addressing systemic and intergenerational disadvantage.

Since its establishment the Equal Access Fund has made two modest grants:

Red Dust Role Models

Red Dust delivers health promotion programs to disadvantaged children in partnership with remote communities. Red Dust uses the enthusiasm of the kids for sport, and for meeting with high profile sports people, as a motivation for structured classroom learning. The classroom comes first, so with the promise of sport and meeting their role models, the kids not only turn up, they are eager participants!

The Social Studio

The Social Studio is "a safe place of belonging" for people who have experienced being a refugee. The Social Studio is a fashion label, a retail outlet and a café. Each enterprise provides training, professional development and related opportunities for young people. The 2013 grant enabled the Social Studio to engage a specialist literacy tutor to work with youths from emerging migrant communities to develop literacy skills and the associated confidence and self-esteem to continue to undertake learning and development.

Christopher and Kerri are pleased with their decision to establish the Equal Access Fund, and it is meeting the objective they set themselves for more structured giving. They have this year taken another step by joining Impact100 Melbourne, a collective giving initiative that is itself a sub-fund of the Australian Communities Foundation. They now see these structured approaches as additions rather than alternatives and they happily continue to decide to respond to appeals and to give to charitable organisations as and when it seems appropriate.

Giving advice

The Power of the Professional Adviser's Voice

Professional advisers, for many years, have played an important role in the success of Australian Communities Foundation. In turn, by partnering with the Foundation, they have been able to help clients fulfil their financial and charitable dreams and goals. As more and more Australians contribute to charity on an annual basis, charitable giving is becoming an increasingly important part of a client's overall financial plan.

As champions of community philanthropy, professional advisers have not only referred clients who have set up a sub-fund or made a planned gift, but also provided important advice whilst serving on our Board or sub-committees. Additionally they have spoken or presented on Australian Communities Foundation's behalf, hosted events or even established their own sub-funds. Or, as you can read in the profile of Pitcher Partners' Sue Dahn, it can often be a combination of several of these activities.

One highlight this year was a luncheon held at Russell Kennedy where three of our donors passionately shared their stories with over 80 advisers. Each donor emphasised their different approaches, diverse roles and the many benefits of referring donors to Australian Communities Foundation.

Another was a luncheon as part of the Ambassador Philanthropy Tour, The power of the Professional Adviser - Unleash the Philanthropist in Your Client. Our two international guests reinforced the message to advisers that they are a significant voice for encouraging philanthropy with their clients. Alisa Camplin-Warner, co-founder of Finnan's Gift, delivered a powerful and emotional talk to guests. Alisa enforced the importance of the adviser's role in standing up, being heard and taking a lead in encouraging philanthropy.

Their community of donors allows me to be with others who give - this is inspirational ... and a huge positive. The Henkell Fund.

Giving confidence

Australian Communities Foundation believes that strong, transparent governance policies and the implementation of a robust risk management process are the basis for the Foundation's long-term sustainability. This year the Foundation's Audit and Risk Committee has been strengthened with the appointment of a new Chair, Brent Simonis of Ernst & Young, and recruitment of new members.

The Committee has bedded down an annual work program which includes updating the Risk Management framework and confirming a process for annual implementation and reporting. The Risk Management process has been developed to involve the whole of the organisation. Each sub-committee will be responsible for evaluating and mitigating risks and regularly reporting to the Audit and Risk Committee on its work plans as well as any new or emerging risks. The Committee will manage and oversee the work plans and report quarterly to the Board, including a heat map for ongoing review.

Complementary to this comprehensive review, the Foundation also took stock of standards for community foundations overseas, to support best practices and the Risk Management framework. Twenty standards for Australian Communities Foundation have been identified and the self-accreditation process will be completed in 2013-14.

Giving recommendations

Australian Communities Foundation's philanthropy consulting service continued its operations in 2012-13. Locally some of the clients included Ovarian Cancer Australia, Women's Health Victoria, Freemasons Victoria and the Reach Foundation. Internationally, the Community Foundation of Singapore visited Melbourne for a few days where both the the Foundation office and consulting staff were able to exchange expertise and experiences.

Australian Communities Foundation is very proud of the work undertaken by Trudy Wyse and Marion Webster, the two principals who have a long association with the Foundation. Their many years' experience in the philanthropic, government and community sectors and their competence and expertise to be able to undertake a wide scope of projects has certainly supported the Foundation and its mission.

Financial Report

The assets of Australian Communities Foundation, Australian Communities Foundation Extension Fund and the Australian Communities Foundation Scholarship Fund, are held in the name of the trustee company, Australian Communities Foundation Limited.

Investment Management

All investment decisions in relation to Australian Communities Foundation's Trust Funds are the legal responsibility of the Trustee, through the Board. These investment decisions are dealt with by the Board's Finance and Investment Committee, which is responsible for the design and execution of the asset allocation strategy and related investment activities.

Formal reviews of the key investment strategy components are undertaken annually. During 2012-13 ACF's investment strategy has evolved towards a more streamlined and passive investment approach, thus reducing the overall portfolio volatility and the risk of significant underperformance against underlying long term growth based benchmarks. This has been achieved with a slightly more defensive asset class mix, but without impacting upon overall targeted performance – with our targeted long term investment objective remaining at 3-4% above inflation.

In line with ACF policy, a tender process for the investment advisory services was undertaken in February/March 2013. Fourteen companies were invited to submit a tender across all finance sectors, including asset consultants, banks, brokers and mid-tier boutique advisers. JBWere was appointed as ACF's investment adviser, effective 1 July 2013. Its investment strategy is in line with the Foundation's new approach and their fees best reflected this strategy. JBWere has a long history of investment management in Australia. Since 1840 they have been delivering world-class investment advice to their clients. They have extensive experience in managing not-for-profit portfolios and have a reputation as a market leader. They are committed to supporting ACF accomplish our philanthropic goals through the effective investment of the funds under management.

Australian Communities Foundation adopts two core investment approaches:

Long term growth

The long term growth investment option is the core Foundation investment approach for building endowment and generating annual income for distribution.

The strategic asset allocation is 60% growth assets and 40% cash or fixed interest securities.

The investment objective of the long-term growth portfolio is to achieve a total rate of return of CPI plus 3.9% over a rolling seven year period, a targeted return net of investment fees and charges of approximately 6.9%pa with a probability of loss estimated to be one year in every four years.

Medium term income

The medium term income investment approach is designed primarily for two situations:

- where the intention of the sub-fund is to grant capital as well as income and where the sub-fund may be granted out within a shorter period of time, say three to five years; and
- flow-through giving programs, primarily workplace giving, where employee contributions are distributed, and corporate contributions are used to build the endowment (the corporate contributions use the long-term growth investment approach).

The strategic asset allocation is predominately cash and fixed income securities and targeted to have 15% in growth assets (Australian equities and/or property).

The investment objective of the medium term income portfolio is to achieve a total rate of return in excess of the UBS Bank Bill Index (after investment fees) over a rolling three year period.

Environmental, Social and Governance (ESG) Investment Guidelines

In 2013-14 the Finance and Investment Committee in conjunction with our new adviser JBWere will be looking at introducing an ethical investment fund.

Under the mandate, Australian Communities Foundation’s investment adviser will be responsible for adhering to the Foundation’s ESG guidelines. Australian Communities Foundation believes that good corporate governance is very important and seeks to promote sound environmental, social and governance practices. For those investments which are directly held by Australian Communities Foundation (ie, not in a unit trust or other pooled investment entity) the Foundation has a two pronged approach to promote good governance and ESG principles:

- specific exclusions for Australian equities where the company’s dominant purpose or product relates to tobacco, gambling or weapons; and
- Australian Communities Foundation is an active investor and votes its stock. In determining how to vote the Foundation takes advice from corporate governance agencies to ensure it exercises its vote in an informed and responsible manner.

Investment Performance

The 2012-13 financial year was an outstanding one for the typical balanced type funds such as the Main fund, and especially those oriented to listed shares and property. Resurgent markets saw the long term growth fund (61% - 80% invested in growth assets) return 21%, the best performance since 2006-07. The medium term income portfolio also had a much improved return of 8.18%.

The 2012-13 result was achieved despite a patchy global economic backdrop, and was driven by excellent returns from listed shares and listed property securities, both here and overseas. While those were the standouts, all asset sectors delivered positive returns for the year.

2009-10	1.48	3.80	5.28
2008-09	-18.55	5.34	-13.21

In the past 10 years the annual investment return for the long term growth investment portfolio has averaged 8.6%. This is slightly higher than the investment objectives of the Foundation.

Audit and Risk Committee, and Finance and Investment Committee

Australian Communities Foundation has a Finance and Investment Committee and a separate Audit and Risk Committee, both of which are responsible for assisting the Board with risk management and compliance issues, as well as with due care and diligence in relation to all financial aspects of the Foundation. You can read more about the Audit and Risk Committee on page 21.

Audit and Accounts

Australian Communities Foundation complies with all applicable Australian Accounting Standards and guidelines, as well as relevant Corporations Law provisions. The financial statements are audited by KPMG who have issued audit reports free of qualification for 2012 and 2013. These detailed statements and reports are available on the website.

Donor Reporting - Sub-funds Online

Sub-funds Online, ACF's unit registry, allows donors a secure individual login to view details of sub-fund investments and transaction activity and unit prices.

Australian Communities Foundation provides a donor statement annually at the end of each financial year. These statements detail the investment and transaction activity attributed to each sub-fund, the administration fees and the investment allocations.

Distributions

During the financial year 2012-13 the Foundation met its distribution obligations for each fund. A total of $6,896,692 was distributed to charitable organisations and projects. The total amount distributed since establishment in 1997 is $28,451,903.

Note 1

Included in the Community Fund's profit of $15,027,883 for 2012 was a donation of unlisted shares in a US company with a value of $13,661,202. At the 30th June 2013 these shares were valued by the Directors in accordance with the Fund's accounting policies at $753,000. This resulted in an impairment charge of $12,908,202 which was the major contributor to the Fund's loss of $7,429,515 for the 2013 year.

The Directors recognise that as this generous donation was in the form of unlisted shares in an emerging technology based US company, the market price for the shares was expected to be volatile and uncertain. Consequently until there is liquidity for these shares, they have been excluded from the pool of investments for the purpose of making grants. Once there is liquidity for the shares, the proceeds will be treated as any other donation including any arrears of fees owing.
