Historic Instruments

Astrolabe

Astrolabes were early scientific instruments that can be traced back to the 6th century AD. They were used for reckoning time as well as astronomical exploration, navigation and astrology. In medieval Europe, astrolabes were widely used for astrological purposes. By the mid-15th century, sailors adopted the device to navigate at sea. It enabled the determination of the position of the sun and prominent stars in relation to both the horizon and the meridian. Astrolabes represent a unique blend of science and myth that reveals the logic of an earlier time, when humans were still trying to make sense of the natural world.

Beijing

Temple of Heaven

The Temple of Heaven is considered to be «the supreme achievement of traditional Chinese architecture». The most impressive and famous structure of the temple complex is the «Hall of Prayers for Good Harvests». Built on three levels of marble stone, it is made entirely of wood without any nails. The astonishing hall served the emperors of the Ming and Qing dynasties for offerings to heaven in pursuit of rich harvests. Built in 1402 in Beijing, the construction of this architectural marvel reached completion in 1420, along with the Forbidden City. Unfortunately, the original complex burned down in a fire caused by lightning in 1889. A few years later it was rebuilt identical to the original.

The logo for the TV series 'Sherlock Holmes' is displayed. It features the words 'Sherlock' and 'Holmes' in a stylized, cursive font, with 'Holmes' on a second line. The text is set against a background of a dense, repeating pattern of small, faint text, likely the names of the cast and crew.

Peter Carl Fabergé

Tsarevich Egg

The 4th edition of the series celebrates another exceptional piece of Peter Carl Fabergé's craftsmanship with this lost and rediscovered treasure - the Tsarevich Egg. The original piece is made of blue lapis lazuli adorned with gold and diamonds. Inside lies a double-headed imperial eagle holding a portrait of Alexei Nikolaevich, the seven-year-old son of Tsar Nicholas II and Tsarina Alexandra Feodorovna.

The imperial egg was crafted in 1912 and presented as a gift to Alexei's mother after his miraculous recovery from severe illness. It is currently displayed in the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts in Richmond, US.

Mountains

Half Dome

Visible from afar, this steep, rugged half-sphere soars high above the Yosemite Valley. Originally named «Tis-sa-ack», a native American phrase for “cleft rock”, it witnessed many famous climbs. The first known ascent was by George Anderson in 1875, who drilled holes into the smooth granite to successfully conquer the rock face. Since then, hikers reach the summit each year by following a trail starting from the valley floor. After a strenuous climb of several hundred granite steps, they find themselves at the foot of the steep east face. They overcome this final difficulty with the help of two steel cables attached to posts. Thanks to its distinctive shape, Half Dome ranks among America’s most iconic mountains.

Iron Maiden

Fear of The Dark

This eerie, vampiric-looking silver coin celebrates the 30th anniversary of the album «Fear of the Dark». Legendary metal band Iron Maiden released the album in May 1992 after which it soon reached the top of the UK album charts. It was the last to feature Bruce Dickinson as the group's lead vocalist until his return in 1999. The album cover depicts their mascot Eddie as a kind of Nosferatu tree figure leering down from under the glistening moon.

Boxing has even graced the big screen with classics such as "Raging Bull" and the "Rocky" franchise. This half gram of pure gold makes the perfect gift for everyone's "prized fighter".

Hunters by Night

Python Kilo Edition

We are elated to introduce the python as our third perilous predator of the Hunters by Night series. Ever since the story of Adam and Eve, this Old-World snake has been feared as a devious hunter. Although, being a graceful reptile bursting with strength, many people hold a dislike for this sleek (sub-) tropical representative of our wildlife. The flicking of the python's tongue, imparting a threatening and cunning vibe, enables it to smell its prey even in the darkest night. Following the successful 2-ounce edition, this bigger and bolder version is now available with an impressive weight of 1 kg limited to only 99 pieces.

Steampunk

Jet Pack Kilo Edition

Following the wave of enthusiasm unleashed by the first issue of our Steampunk collection, we are thrilled to announce the next masterpiece of the series. This one, like its predecessor, astounds with lots of details, surreal elements and some hidden allusions to the famous author Jules Verne. The setting of this artwork seems like a busy train station in a mountain village with various means of transport. One of them being a jetpack, that might become part of our future mobility system. Succeeding the triumphant 3-ounce edition, this bigger and bolder version is now available with an impressive weight of 1 kg limited to only 111 pieces.

Cyber Queen

The Beginning

Cyberpunk is a science fiction subgenre characterised by anti-heroes fighting against a system or oppressors in a dehumanised, high-tech dystopian future. The term «Cyberpunk» derives from a combination of the words «cybernetics», the science of replacing human functions with computers, and «punk», the music style. In the 1980s, the genre gained global popularity thanks to William Gibson's novel "Neuromancer" and the cult film «Blade Runner». Other films such as «Robo-Cop» and «Judge Dredd» were released soon after. Finally, «The Matrix» wound up being the most cyberpunk-influenced film of its era.

Sparta

The Spartans – muscle-bound, fearless warriors from ancient Greece – were renowned for their nearly invincible army and unrivalled fighting skills using long spears, swords and round shields crafted from bronze and wood have captured the imagination for centuries. The myths surrounding Sparta and its warrior society are as old as the city itself. Reputedly founded in the 9th century BC, it was co-ruled by two kings who arbitrated in times of war. Upon its victory over the rival city-state of Athens in the Peloponnesian War (431-404 BC), Sparta emerged as the most powerful state in Greece. The verso depicts „The Return of Helen on a Quadriga“. A scene from a well-known tale by the author Homer.
