Time Use Limitation: If respirator becomes damaged, soiled, or breathing becomes difficult, leave the contaminated area immediately and replace the respirator.

Filtering facepiece respirators (FFR), which are sometimes called disposable respirators, are subject to various regulatory standards around the world. These standards specify certain required physical properties and performance characteristics in order for respirators to claim compliance with the particular standard. During pandemic or emergency situations, health authorities often reference these standards when making respirator recommendations, stating, for example, that certain populations should use an “N95, FFP2, or equivalent” respirator.

Various countries have specific FFR performance standards: • N95 (United States NIOSH-42CFR84) • FFP2 (Europe EN 149-2001) • KN95 (China GB2626-2006) • P2 (Australia/New Zealand AS/NZS 1716:2012) • Korea 1st class (Korea KMOEL - 2017-64) • DS (Japan JMHLW-Notification 214, 2018)

Respirators certified as meeting these standards can be expected to function very similarly to one another, based on the performance requirements stated in the standards and confirmed during conformity testing.
