But that's impossible! Said little Charlie, staring at his grandfather. Of course it's impossible! Cried Grandpa Joe. It's completely absurd! But Mr Willy Wonka has done it! Quite right! The others agreed, nodding their heads. Mr Wonka has done it.

Who's the big fat boy?
That's Augustus Gloop!
So it is!
Enormous isn't he?
Fantastic!

The one I want to see is Veruca Salt!
Shouted another voice in the crowd.
She's the girl whose father bought up half a million chocolate bars and then made the workers in his peanut factory unwrap every one of them until they found a Golden Ticket!

There's Violet Beauregarde! He heard someone shout. That's her all right! I can remember her face from the newspapers! And you know what? Somebody else shouted back. She's still chewing that dreadful old piece of gum she's had in for three months!

The Teavee household, said Mr Bucket, going on with his reading, was crammed, like all the others, with excited visitors when our reporters arrived, but young Mike Teavee... seemed extremely annoyed by the whole business. Can't you fools see I'm watching television?

Drama Activity

You have 3 minutes to jot down notes about each character?

Personality? Background? Likes? Dislikes? Behaviour? Appearance?

Augustus Gloop

Veruca Salt

Charlie Bucket

Mike Teavee

Violet Beauregarde

Drama Activity

In groups of five, decide who will play each of the five children.
Look at the pictures below to help you choose.

Freeze Frame

Look back at the first few chapters of the book.

Discuss how each child reacts to finding the Golden Ticket.

Decide who will take on the role of Charlie and the other children.

Put together a still, silent image, showing how they feel when they first see their Golden Ticket and realise they will be visiting the chocolate factory.

Think carefully about position, body shape and facial expression.

A cartoon illustration of a man with curly brown hair, wearing a black top hat with a red band, a purple suit jacket, a red and yellow polka-dot bow tie, and green trousers. He is holding a wooden cane in his right hand and gesturing with his left hand towards the text box.

Freeze Frame

Remember how different the characters are...
For example, Charlie might be delighted, whereas Veruca Salt demands and expects a ticket to appear!

Top Tip!

A freeze frame is like a photo or a paused film. The action in the adventure stands still!

Role on the Wall

Small Group Work

Use the ideas from your freeze frame to create a detailed character sketch.

Use the role on the wall template to create your character.

Remember:

Write physical characteristics around the outside and ideas about thoughts and feelings on the inside

Extra Challenge!

Augustus Gloop!
Augustus Gloop!
The great big greedy
nincompoop!

Write your own funny song about your character.

Heated Debate!

In Chapter 29 Mike Teavee becomes the final child to meet a sticky end in the chocolate factory. Augustus Gloop, Violet Beauregarde and Veruca Salt all behave badly in the story and are punished accordingly. The Oompa Loompas then sing about their shortcomings.

'You mean you're the only one left?' Mr Wonka said, pretending to be surprised.

Who is the most badly behaved?
What do you think?
