Koalas are marsupial animles. Female koalas keep their young in a pouch on their belly as they are develuping. After leaving the mother's pouch, the koala begins a diet mainly consisting of eucaliptus leaves. Because their nutrition is so limited, they need to conserve energy. Most koala's spend about 22 hours a day sleaping.

The oldest form of air travle is the hot air balloon. Today it is mainly used for recreation and tourizm. As fun and intriguing as it is, it does come with some risks. Hot air balloons sometimes have rough landings, dumping its passenjers after hitting the ground. Some balloons have caught fire in the air as well, leading to casulties. However, many safety measures have been employed, making hot air balloon travel safer than ever.
