

Silent Letters

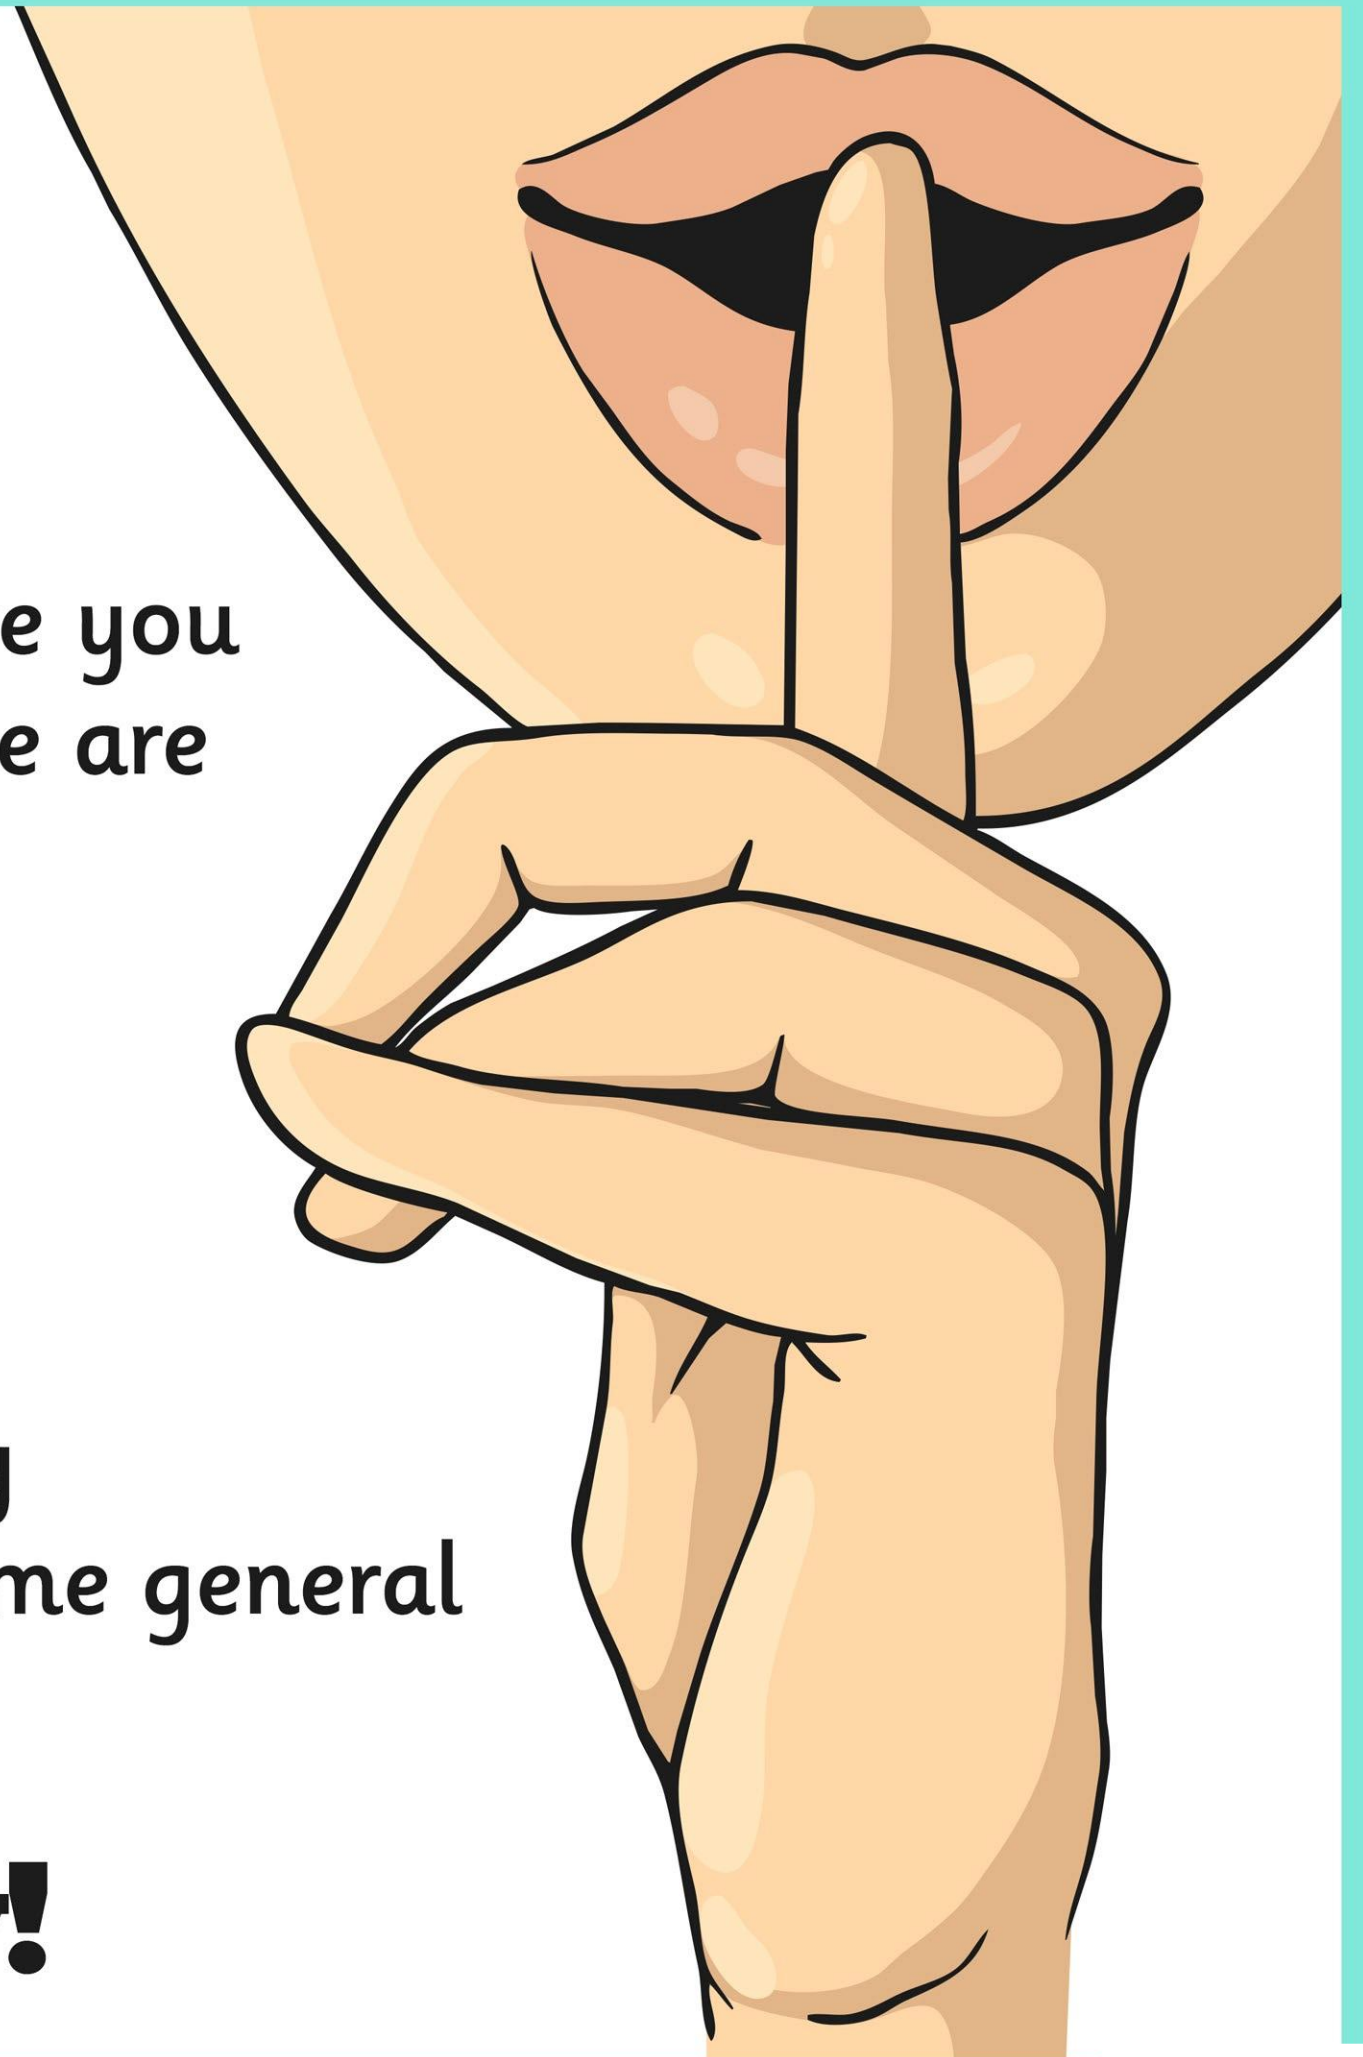

Shhhhh!!!!

Don't mention it to anyone, but have you noticed how many silent letters there are in English spellings?

If we can't hear them, how can we learn to spell them?

It's tricky and there aren't really any hard-and-fast rules, but there are some general patterns to look for.

Just remember to do it silently!

Silent Letter...

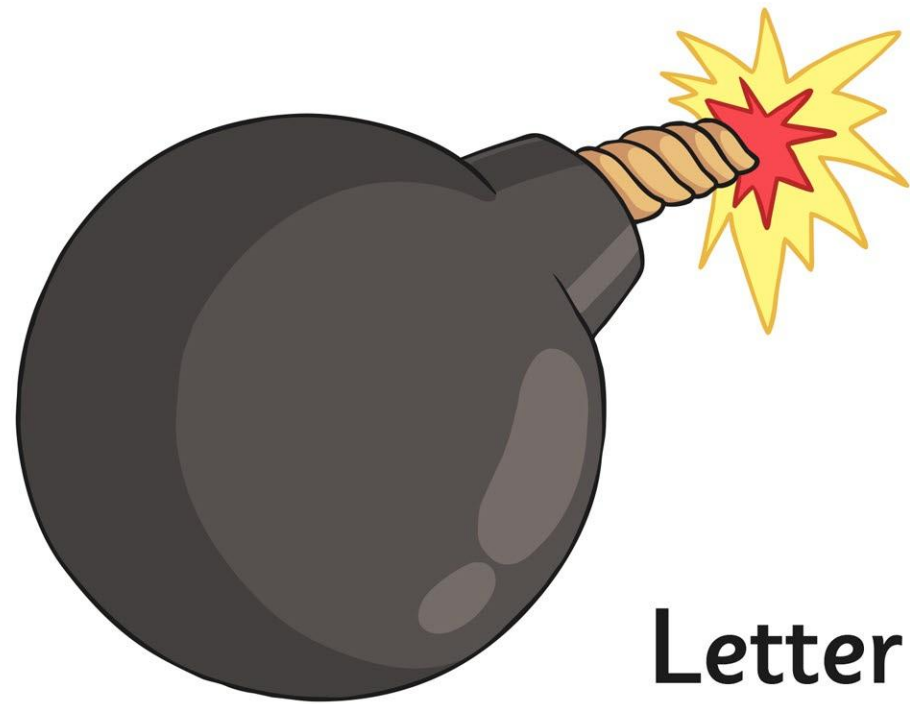

thumb

B

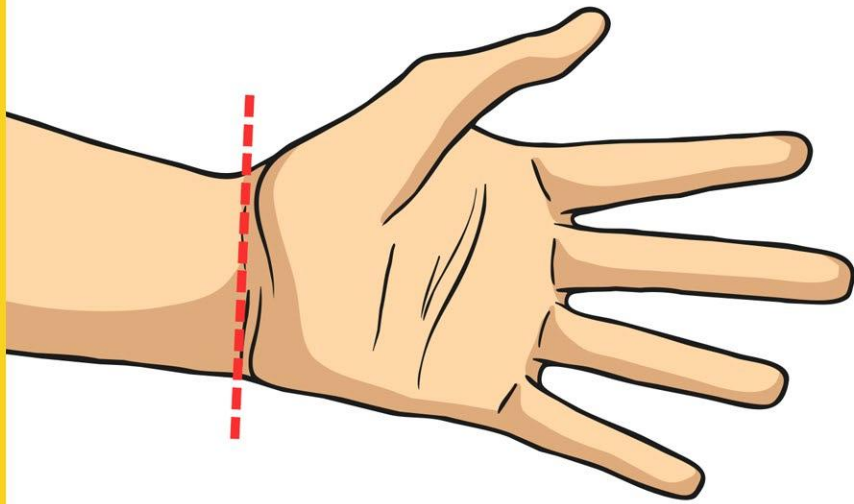

lamb

bomb

Letter 'b' is often silent after 'm'.

Silent Letter...

wrist

wrap

W

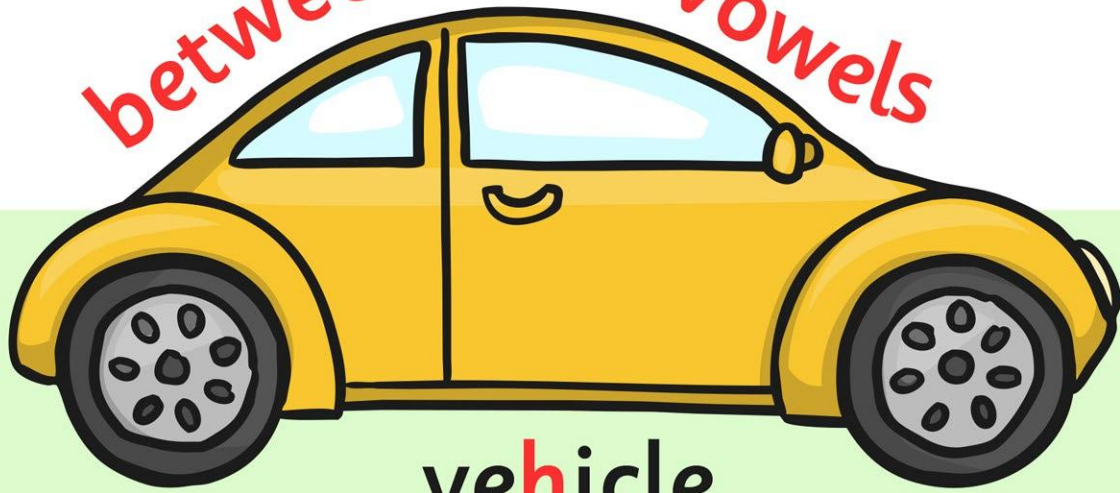

wrestle

Letter 'w' is often silent before 'r'.

Silent Letter H

Letter 'h' is silent in lots of places.

between two vowels

vehicle

at the end of a word after a vowel

cheetah

why / what / when?

Regent Studies | www.regentstudies.com

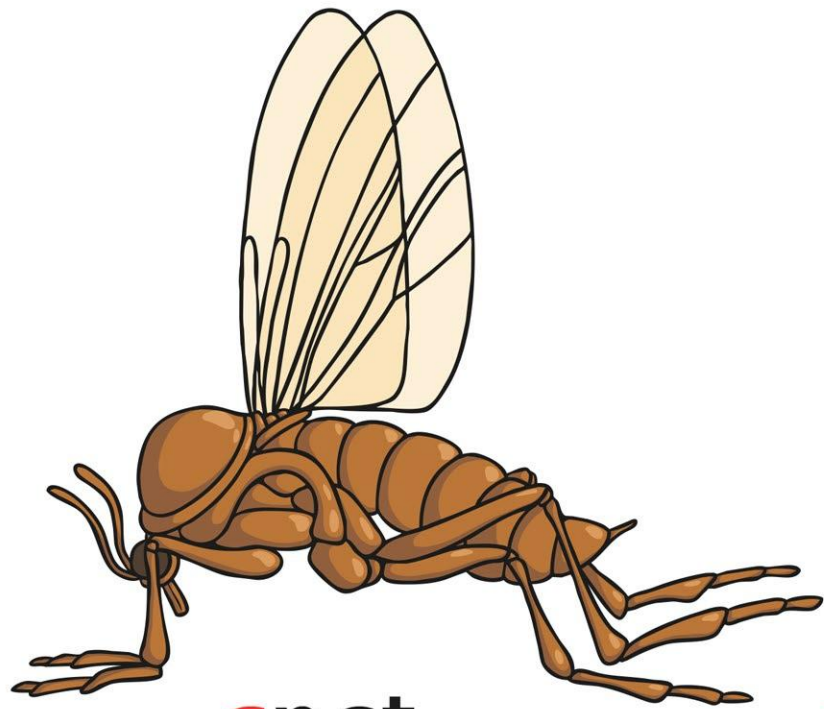

after 'w'

whale

Silent Letter...

gnat

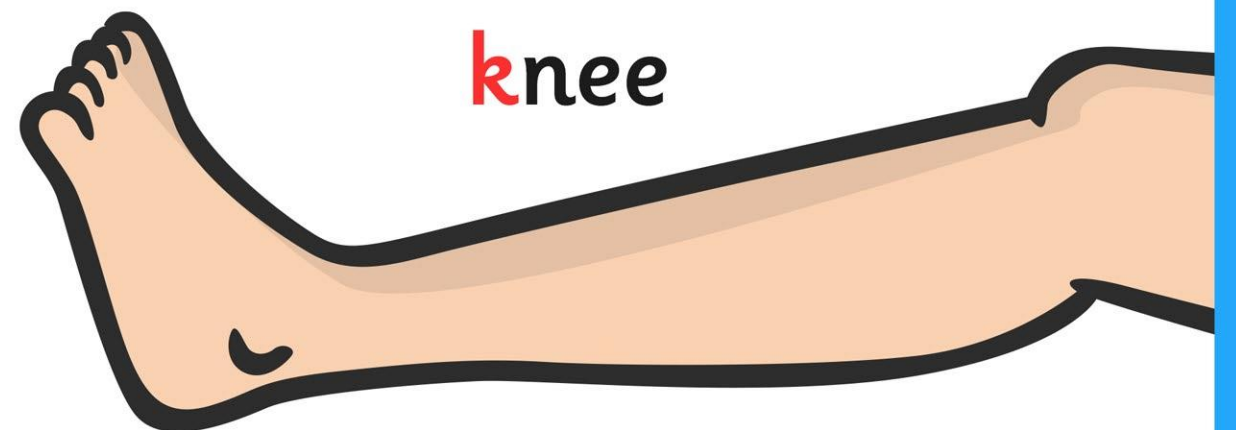

knife

G and K

These two letters are usually silent before 'n'.

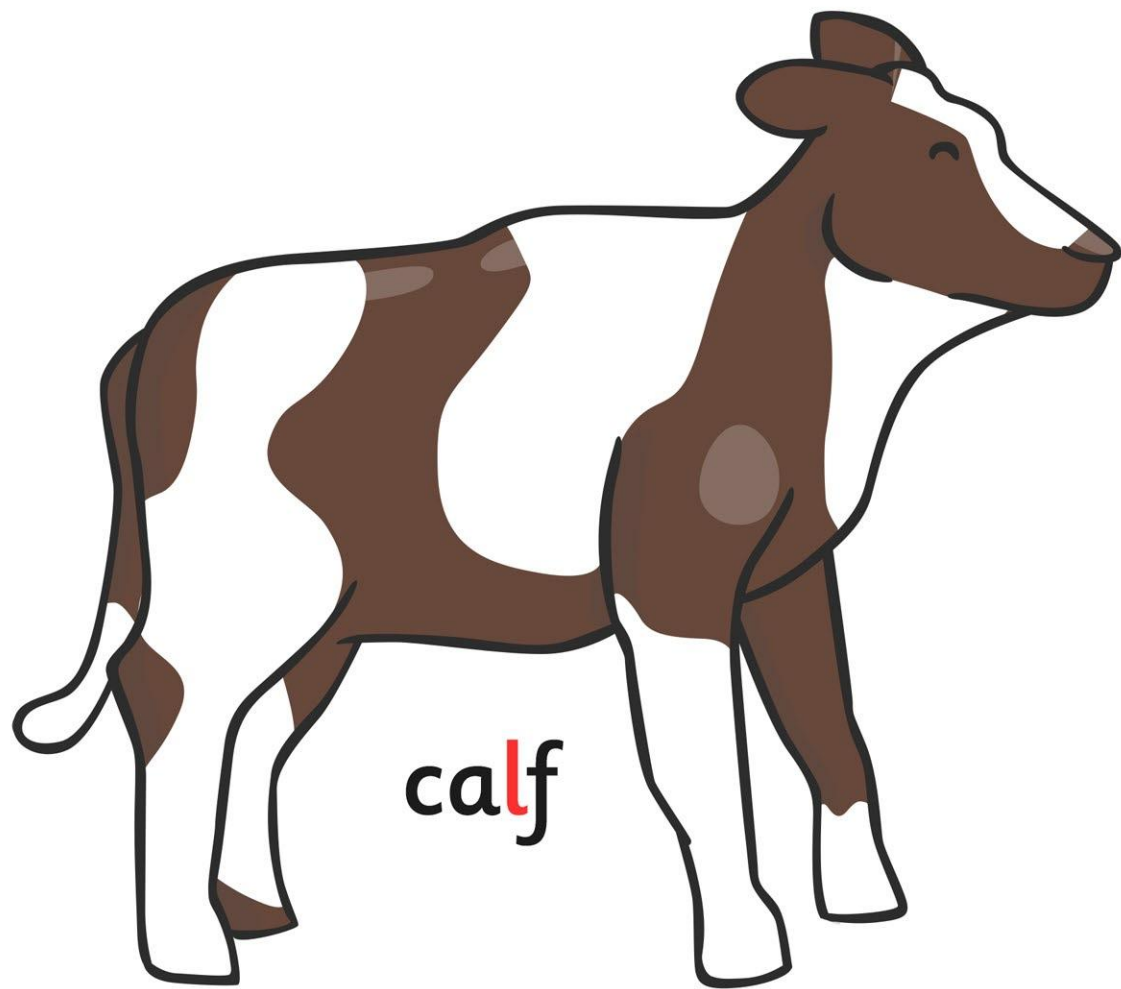

gnome

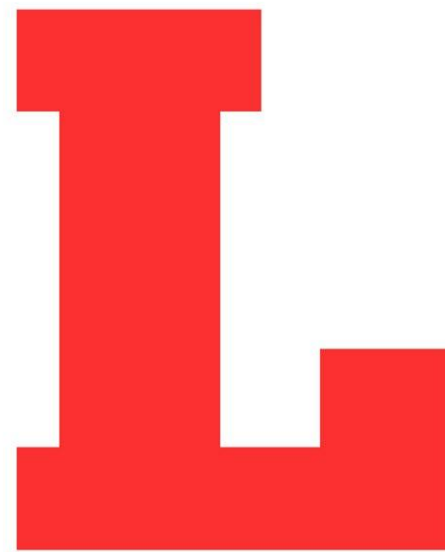

knee

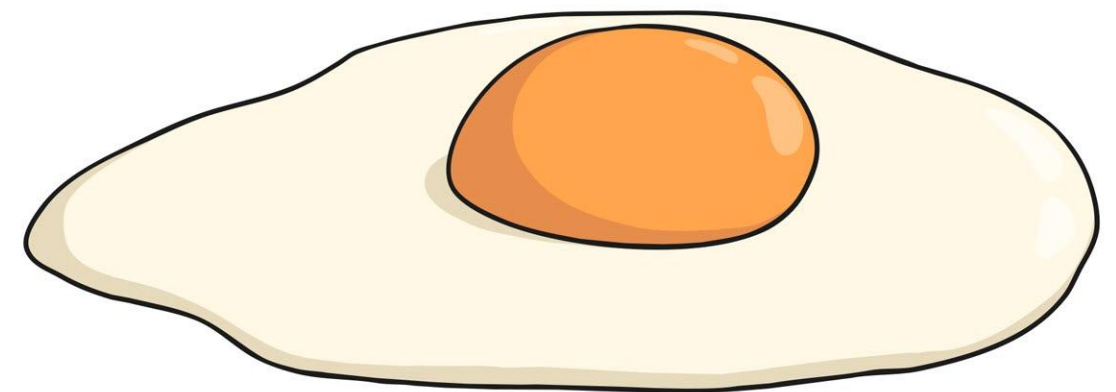

Silent Letter...

callf

should
would
could

yolk

Silent letter 'l' often follows the vowels 'a', 'o' and 'u'.

Silent Letter...

scissors

C

fascinate
scenario

muscle

C is silent when it comes after 's'.

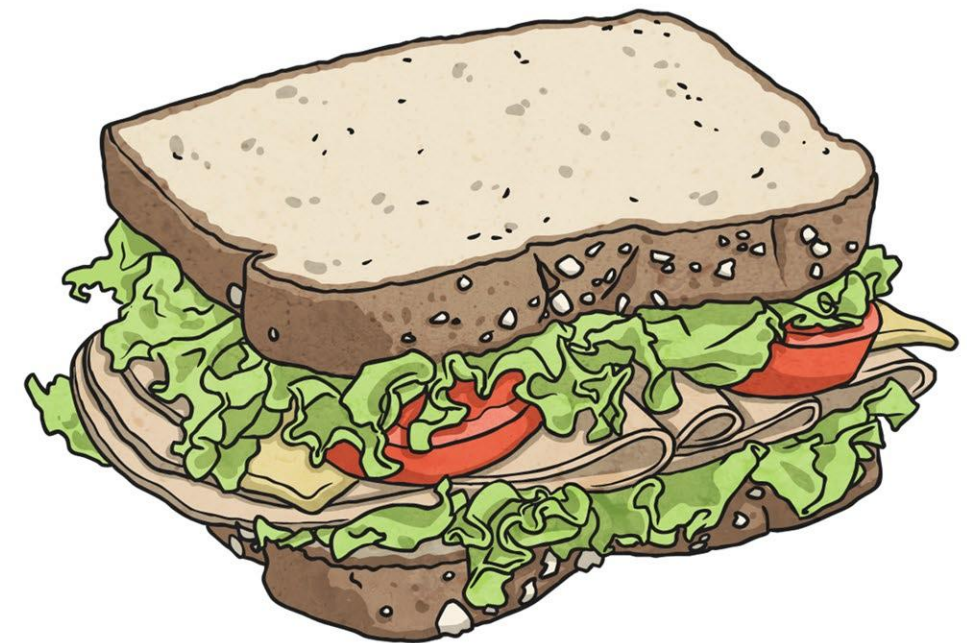

Silent Letter...

handdsome

Weddnesday

D

sanddwich

D is silent in some common words.

Silent Letter...

Christ^tmas

castl^e

T

list^en

whistl^e

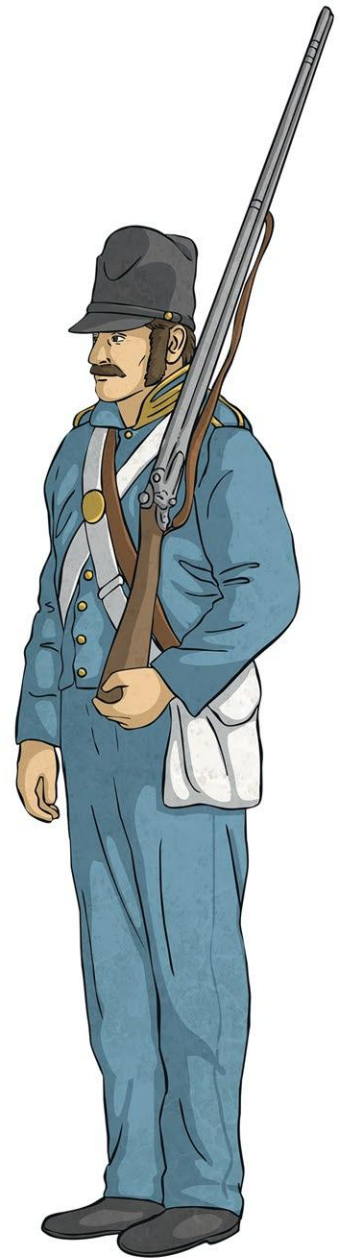

thistl^e

T is often silent after 's'.

Silent Letter...

guitar

guard

guild
guest

U

guess

U is often silent when it comes after 'g' and before a vowel.