

Recruitment data privacy statement

This document sets out the Impact Funding Partners (IFP) policy on the protection of information relating to job applicants. Protecting the confidentiality and integrity of personal data is a critical responsibility that IFP takes seriously at all times. IFP will ensure that data is always processed in accordance with the provisions of relevant data protection legislation, including the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR).

Key definitions

Data processing

Data processing is any activity that involves the use of personal data. It includes obtaining, recording or holding the data, or carrying out any operation or set of operations on the data including organising, amending, retrieving, using, disclosing, erasing or destroying it. Processing also includes transmitting or transferring personal data to third parties.

Personal data

Personal data is any information identifying a data subject (a living person to whom the data relates). It includes information relating to a data subject that can be identified (directly or indirectly) from that data alone or in combination with other identifiers IFP possesses or can reasonably access. Personal data can be factual (for example, a name, email address, location, or date of birth) or an opinion about that person's actions or behaviour.

Sensitive personal data

Sensitive personal data is a special category of information which relates to a data subject's racial or ethnic origin, political opinions, religious or similar beliefs, trade union membership, physical or mental health conditions, sexual life, sexual orientation, biometric or genetic data. It also includes personal data relating to criminal offences and convictions.

Privacy notice

This policy, together with the information contained in the table of applicant data appended to the policy, constitutes a privacy notice setting out the information IFP holds about applicants, the purpose for which this data is held and the lawful basis on which it is held. IFP may process personal information without applicants' knowledge or consent, in compliance with this policy, where this is required or permitted by law.

If the purpose for processing any piece of data about applicants should change, IFP will update the table of applicant data with the new purpose and the lawful basis for processing the data and will notify applicants.

Fair processing of data

Fair processing principles

In processing applicants' data the following principles will be adhered to. Personal data will be:

- Used lawfully, fairly and in a transparent way;
- Collected only for valid purposes that are clearly explained and not used in any way that is incompatible with those purposes;
- Relevant to specific purposes and limited only to those purposes;
- Accurate and kept up to date;
- Kept only as long as necessary for the specified purposes; and
- Kept securely.

Lawful processing of personal data

Personal information will only be processed when there is a lawful basis for doing so. Most commonly, IFP will use personal information in the following circumstances:

- When it is needed to perform applicants' contracts of employment;
- When it is needed to comply with a legal obligation; or
- When it is necessary for IFP legitimate interests (or those of a third party) and applicants' interests and fundamental rights do not override those interests.

IFP may also use personal information in the following situations, which are likely to be rare:

- When it is necessary to protect applicants' interests (or someone else's interests); or
- When it is necessary in the public interest [or for official purposes].

Lawful processing of sensitive personal data

IFP may process special categories of personal information in the following circumstances:

- In limited circumstances, with explicit written consent;
- In order to meet legal obligations;
- When it is needed in the public interest, such as for equality and diversity monitoring or
- When it is needed to assess working capacity on health grounds, subject to appropriate confidentiality safeguards.

Less commonly, IFP may process this type of information where it is needed in relation to legal claims or where it is needed to protect an applicant's interests (or someone else's interests) and the applicant is not capable of giving consent, or where an applicant has already made the information public. IFP may use particularly sensitive personal information in the following ways:

- Information relating to leaves of absence, which may include sickness absence or family related leaves, may be used to comply with employment and other laws;
- Information about applicants' physical or mental health, or disability status, may be used to ensure health and safety in the workplace and to assess fitness to work, to provide appropriate workplace adjustments, to monitor and manage sickness absence and to administer benefits;

- Information about race or national or ethnic origin, religious, philosophical or moral beliefs, or sexual life or sexual orientation, may be used to ensure meaningful equal opportunity monitoring and reporting; and
- Information about trade union membership may be used to pay trade union premiums, register the status of a protected applicant and to comply with employment law obligations.

Lawful processing of information about criminal convictions

IFP envisages that it will hold information about criminal convictions, if it becomes necessary to do so. IFP will only use this information where it has a legal basis for processing the information. This will usually be where such processing is necessary to carry out IFP obligations. Less commonly, IFP may use information relating to criminal convictions where it is necessary in relation to legal claims, where it is necessary to protect an applicant's interests (or someone else's interests) and the applicant is not capable of giving consent, or where the applicant has already made the information public.

IFP will only collect information about criminal convictions if it is appropriate given the nature of the role and where it is legally able to do so.

Consent to data processing

IFP does not require consent from applicants to process most types of applicant data. In addition, IFP will not usually need consent to use special categories of personal information in order to carry out legal obligations or exercise specific rights in the field of employment law.

In limited circumstances, applicants may be asked for written consent to process sensitive data. In those circumstances, applicants will be provided with full details of the information that sought and the reason it is needed, so that applicants can carefully consider whether to consent.

Where applicants have provided consent to the collection, processing and transfer of personal information for a specific purpose, they have the right to withdraw consent for that specific processing at any time. Once IFP has received notification of withdrawal of consent it will no longer process information for the purpose or purposes originally agreed to, unless it has another legitimate basis for doing so in law.

Automated decision making

Automated decision-making takes place when an electronic system uses personal information to make a decision without human intervention.

IFP may use automated decision-making in the following circumstances:

- Where applicants have been notified and given 21 days to request a reconsideration.

- Where it is necessary to perform a contract and appropriate measures are in place to safeguard applicants' rights.
- In limited circumstances, with applicants' explicit written consent and where appropriate measures are in place to safeguard applicant rights.

IFP does not envisage that any decisions will be taken about applicants using automated means, however applicants will be notified if this position changes.

Collection and retention of data

Collection of data

IFP will collect personal information about applicants through the application and recruitment process, either directly from candidates or sometimes from an employment agency or background check provider.

From time to time, IFP may collect additional personal information from an applicant. If IFP requires to obtain additional personal information this policy will be updated or applicants will receive a separate privacy notice setting out the purpose and lawful basis for processing the data.

Retention of data

IFP will only retain applicants' personal information for as long as necessary to fulfil the purposes it was collected it for, including for the purposes of satisfying any legal, accounting, or reporting requirements. Details of retention periods for different aspects of personal information are set out in the table of applicant data appended to this policy.

When determining the appropriate retention period for personal data, IFP will consider the amount, nature, and sensitivity of the personal data, the potential risk of harm from unauthorised use or disclosure of personal data, the purposes for which the personal data is processed, whether IFP can achieve those purposes through other means, and the applicable legal requirements.

In some circumstances IFP may anonymise personal information so that it can no longer be associated with individual applicants, in which case IFP may use such information without further notice to applicants. After the data retention period has expired, IFP will securely destroy applicants' personal information.

Data security and sharing

Data security

IFP has put in place appropriate security measures to prevent personal information from being accidentally lost, used or accessed in an unauthorised way, altered or disclosed. Details of these measures are available upon request.

Data sharing

IFP may share personal information with third parties. IFP requires third parties to respect the security of applicant data and to treat it in accordance with the law. IFP may also need to share personal information with a regulator or to otherwise comply with the law.

Rights and obligations

Accuracy of data

IFP will conduct regular reviews of the information held by it to ensure the relevancy of the information it holds. Applicants must inform IFP of any changes to their current circumstances. Where an Applicant has concerns regarding the accuracy of personal data held by IFP, the Applicant should contact the Office Manager to request an amendment to the data.

Applicant rights

Under certain circumstances, applicants have the right to:

- Request access to personal information (commonly known as a “data subject access request”).
- Request erasure of personal information.
- Object to processing of personal information where IFP is relying on a legitimate interest (or those of a third party) to lawfully process it.
- Request the restriction of processing of personal information.
- Request the transfer of personal information to another party.

If an applicant wishes to make a request on any of the above grounds, they should contact Office Manager in writing. Please note that, depending on the nature of the request, IFP may have good grounds for refusing to comply. If that is the case, the applicant will be given an explanation by IFP.

Data subject access requests

Applicants will not normally have to pay a fee to access personal information (or to exercise any of the other rights). However, IFP may charge a reasonable fee if the request for access is clearly unfounded or excessive. Alternatively, IFP may refuse to comply with the request in such circumstances.

IFP may need to request specific information from the applicant to help confirm their identity and ensure the right to access the information (or to exercise any of the other rights). This is another appropriate security measure to ensure that personal information is not disclosed to any person who has no right to receive it.

Compliance with this policy

IFP responsibility for compliance

IFP has appointed a data privacy manager (Office Manager) with overseeing compliance with this policy. If applicants have any questions about this policy or how IFP handles personal information, they should contact the privacy manager. Applicants have the right to make a complaint at any time to the Information Commissioner's Office (ICO), the UK supervisory authority for data protection issues.

Data security breaches

IFP has put in place procedures to deal with any data security breach and will notify applicants and any applicable regulator of a suspected breach where legally required to do so.

DECLARATION

I confirm that I have received a copy of this policy and that I have read and understood it.

I do/do not consent to Impact Funding Partners retaining my details for a period of 6 months.

delete as appropriate
