HEIDI STACKING

HEIDI
Sebastian Wrong

A mix of modernity, nostalgia and utilitarian form, Heidi is a fun stool of a simple and sturdy construction which takes its inspiration from the classic tractor seat. When developing the stool, Wrong focused on comfort and functionality creating a cantilever base that flexes slightly with movement so that it feels very natural to sit on – a responsive movement not common in most stools which tend to be stiff.

A powder-coated tubular steel leg adds a robust, and competitively-priced, stackable stool to the Heidi range. The redesigned base is paired with a new seat made from vacuum formed thermoplastic and Baydur, an injection-moulded resin – the gloss UV protected finish is tough and suitable for outdoor use.
