Care & Maintenance

One of the most common causes of damage to ceramics is rough or careless handling. Almost all such damage can be avoided by handling the piece as little as possible and taking care when interacting with or around it. Be aware that touching the piece will leave behind a residue. Fingermarks can contain acids, oils and other secretions as well as dirt. Many of these can cause damage to the glaze if left on the piece for long periods of time. We advise that gloves are worn or that hands are well cleaned and dry prior to handling.
