

Everything You Need to Know About Wedding Dress Cleaning And Preservation

Your wedding dress is one of the most essential and cherished items you will ever own, and it deserves to be treated with care and respect. Proper storage is essential in ensuring your dress stays pristine and ready to be worn on your big day. However, wedding dress cleaning and preservation is necessary to know how to store it properly, whether you've just purchased your wedding dress or have been holding onto it for a while. Here's what you need to know.

Tips for Wedding Dress Cleaning and Preservation:

#1 - Clean Your Dress:

Before storing your wedding dress, it's essential to have it cleaned by a professional wedding dress cleaning service. Even if your dress looks clean, it may have invisible stains from sweat, makeup, or other substances that can cause discoloration over time. A professional dry cleaning will remove any dirt, oil, or other contaminants that could harm the fabric, ensuring your dress stays beautiful for years.

#2 - Avoid Weird Smells:

Pets are naturally curious and like sniffing out new scents and hiding spots. The last thing you want to happen is to discover that your dress has some new frills and lace due to loving scratches, much along other "catastrophes" that could leave unpleasant scents in your garment.

Your garment should be kept above the ground and out of reach of animals. Dresses can absorb scents from their surroundings like all materials can, and dresses should store away from odours like the kitchen, cigarette smoke, and other household items.

#3 - Choose the Right Storage Space:

Choosing a cool, dry, dark location is essential when storing your wedding dress. Avoid storing your dress in areas with high humidity, such as basements or attics, as this can cause mold, mildew, or discoloration. Instead, store your clothing in a closet or wardrobe with plenty of room for air to circulate it. If possible, avoid hanging your dress directly on a hanger, as this can cause stress on the fabric and cause it to stretch or lose its shape. Instead, use a padded hanger or wrap the dress in acid-free tissue paper and place it in a box.

#4 - Use the Right Materials:

When storing your wedding dress, using the right materials to protect it from damage is essential. Acid-free tissue paper is a must-have, as it will protect your clothing from dust and prevent any colors from bleeding or transferring. Avoid plastic bags or covers, which can trap moisture and cause mildew or discoloration. Instead, opt for a breathable cotton garment bag or box, allowing air to circulate while keeping your dress safe from dust and light.

#5 - Remove Wrinkles Carefully:

The only thing you'll need to worry about the week before your wedding is getting rid of any wrinkles if your dress was correctly preserved. When ironing light, simple dresses, hanging them up high and using a hand-held steamer to get rid of wrinkles usually works.

Never steam silk clothing! If your dress is made of silk, leave pressing to the professionals because moisture will leave water stains, and iron can easily scorch a silk dress. To ensure your dress is picture-perfect, plan a final pressing with your seamstress, the dress store, or a nearby dry cleaner for the week before your wedding.

#6 - Avoid Exposure to Light:

Direct sunlight and artificial light can cause your dress to fade or discolour over time, so storing it in a dark, cool location is essential. If possible, avoid keeping your dress near windows or in areas with bright light sources. If you must store your dress in a well-lit area, cover it with a light-blocking fabric to prevent any damage.

#7 - Check on Your Dress Periodically:

Even if you've taken all the necessary precautions, it's a good idea to check on your dress periodically to ensure it is still in good condition. Every six months or so, remove your dress from storage and inspect it for any signs of damage or discoloration. If you notice any problems, take your dress to a professional wedding dress cleaning service for inspection and repairs.

Conclusion:

Proper wedding dress cleaning and preservation are essential in ensuring your wedding dress stays pristine for years to come. By cleaning your dress, choosing the right storage space, using suitable materials, avoiding exposure to light, and checking on your dress periodically, you can ensure that your dress will be ready to wear on your big day. With the help of a professional wedding dress cleaning service, you can rest assured that your dress is in good hands and will be preserved for generations to come.
