I am pleased that the live export of sheep is to be phased out. It was one of the reasons I voted for Labor in the last election. My expectation is that the phase out should begin and end as soon as possible.

I'm in favour of farmers receiving government support to help them to transition, if this means we can end this cruel process sooner rather than later. Until we reach a fair resolution, sheep will continue to suffer; so time is of the essence.

Regards
