Live sheep export is cruel and displays Australia in an inhumane light to the civilized nations of the world. By ceasing live export, this would go some way to restore Australia's own humanity and its international integrity.

Live export has been responsible for unconscionable practices which have filmed and proven to have taken place, despite the protestations by successive Australian governments to the contrary.

I firmly urge that live sheep exports from Australia cease from the end of the current parliamentary session. This would give suppliers and farmers stability to proceed in alternative ventures.
