Dear Government,

I am writing this submission today to ask you as our Government to stop Live Animal Export.

While I understand that financially Live Export is very lucrative for the farmers and meat traders and for those who own the cargo ships that sail these suffering animals across the seas for months and weeks, it simply can't be justified to the amount of severe suffering these poor animals endure on these horrendous voyages across the sea to be slaughtered by Halal and Kosher butchers at the other port.

No living creature should be subjected to such inhumane suffering and especially not so they can be killed at the end of their suffering.

With the exception of those who stand to profit from the Live Animal Export trade, I don't believe that there is a single Australian, that would think this terrible treatment of animals is okay.

New Zealand has implemented the end of Live Export and Australia should want to follow suit to show that we too are a compassionate and forward-thinking country that puts the basic welfare of all living beings first.

Please reconsider and bring in immediate legislations to rule this cruelty is no longer allowed in this country.

Kind regards,
