

I am writing in regards to the live export of Australia's animals. Setting an end date this term of Parliament is vital to ensuring the phase out occurs, to avoid prolonged uncertainty for Australian farmers, and our international reputation sinking even lower because of live sheep export. And subjecting countless more sheep to this unacceptable risk. The right thing needs to be done and setting an end date is the right thing to do.

Thank you

Bronwen Evans