

Animals Australia – 7th May 2023

Live export of animals including sheep from Australia will one day be regarded as one of the many wrongs of humanity.

As a concerned member of the community and animal lover I completely support the phase out of this barbaric and unnecessary industry.

The vast majority of Australians want this trade to end as soon as possible, I voted Labour at the last election as this was a key promise in my eyes and believed that this would happen in this term of government ... not the future.

Australian farmers need support in helping to transition away from animal agriculture due to the devastating effects this industry is causing the planet - 18% of greenhouse gas emissions... more than all emissions from ships, planes, cars, trucks, and all other transport put together. The amount of grain water and land required to produce red meat is unsustainable and is an incredible waste of resources. Animals are sentient creatures whose needs are largely completely ignored especially when it comes to the meat dairy and egg industries.

Other countries such as NZ have already ended this cruel trade and one of the world's largest meat producers Brazil is considering it.

Our international reputation took a battering under the Morrison Govt. Here is an opportunity to start fixing that ASAP!

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED]