

To whom it may concern,

I support the end of live sheep exports as do the majority of Australians.

This trade is inherently cruel and even when all regulations are followed, sheep still suffer during the journey and then with painful unstunned slaughter overseas.

For too long this trade has been an embarrassment for a country that likes to think of itself as a compassionate nation.

I voted for Labor in the last election solely due to their promise to end live sheep export.

The phase-out of this trade needs to be legislated and needs to begin immediately.
