In 2009, after 100's of years of Prosecco being classified a grape variety, Italy changed the name of the Prosecco grape variety to Glera within the European Union (EU). Italy then registered Prosecco as a Geographical Indication (GI) in the EU, effectively shutting out imports labelled with Prosecco. The EU is now expanding efforts to gain exclusive use of the name Prosecco in other global markets. In 2013, the Australian wine industry successfully challenged an EU application to claim Prosecco as a GI in Australia. Prosecco has no geographic history relating the name to a region
