Q7. Please select which EU wine geographical indication (GI) your submission is against	Prosecco
Q8. Grounds of objectionA submission against one or more of the wine GIs must be based on at least one of the four grounds of objection.	The EU GI name is used in Australia as the common name for the relevant good, including as a type or style of wine.
Q9. Please provide further details, based on the grounds of objection for each GI. (If submission based on existing trade mark please provide trade mark number. If submission based on unregistered trade mark please provide evidence of use on Australia).	Only in 2009 the actual 'prosecco' grape name was changed to 'Glera'. Since then Italy went on to create their own 'GI' calling it Prosecco (which as we know old world wines are named after the region and new world wines are named after the grape variety). This push only came about since prosecco has been growing in popularity. I personally feel it's rather silly that they did this as Australia is one of the largest producers of Prosecco.

Q28. OtherAny other information on the impacts EU GIs may have on Australian businesses or industry.

It's going to be very costly and damaging as a whole to be honest as I feel it's been taken too far. It's as simple as this is the name of these varietals, many countries produce them and there are all different in climate and production. There really hasn't been an issue until the popularity of these wines have come into play.
