The EU GI name is used in Australia as the name of a grape variety, plant variety, or an animal breed.

Q9. Please provide further details, based on the grounds of objection for each GI. (If submission based on existing trade mark please provide trade mark number. If submission based on unregistered trade mark please provide evidence of use on Australia).

Grapevine material, of a variety named 'prosecco', was first sold into Australia more than two decades ago. Australian wine producers have been making a wine named Prosecco for that time, heavily investing in its growth, creating a substantial wine category in the domestic market. As an employee in the Australian wine industry, I believe this decision would have very negative consequences on the Australian domestic wine industry. It has the potential to cause enormous concern/confusion for wine lovers, could greatly impact wine producers with a dramatic drop in sales, and risk jobs. A product sold into this country by a certain name decades ago should be able to retain that name and use that name in the market. The growth and interest in this specific varietal, which others are now trying to stifle for their own self-gain, should be no reason to change what we have done in Australia for decades.
