Prosecco is an internationally recognised grape variety and protection as a GI would restrict legitimate rights of Australian wine businesses to grow, produce, label the term as a grape variety. The International Organisation of Vine and Wine (OIV) recognises Prosecco as a grape variety in its International list of vine varieties and their synonyms - the global reference point for grape variety names. Prosecco is also recognised as such on the OIVs newly developed Vine Varieties Databases. varietal Protection of a grape variety as a GI would establish a precedent which creates risk and uncertainty for those investing in other grape varieties, leaving the Australian grape and wine sector vulnerable to future attempts to ban the use of common grape variety names. There are millions of dollars being invested in production, employment and marketing by regional Australian wine producers and grape growers in the variety. In 2009, Italy changed the name of the Prosecco grape variety to Glera within the European Union (EU). Italy then registered Prosecco as a Geographical Indication (GI) in the EU, effectively shutting out imports labelled with the Prosecco grape variety from all other countries. The EU is now expanding efforts to gain exclusive use of the name Prosecco in other global markets. In 2013, the Australian wine industry successfully challenged an EU application to claim Prosecco as a GI in Australia. This Australian Registrar of Trade Marks found in our favour, agreeing that Prosecco is a grape variety name and could therefore continue to be used in Australia. Prosecco could be the tip of the iceberg. In recent EU trade negotiations with China, Japan, Mexico, Brazil, Argentina, Paraguay, Uruguay and New Zealand attempts were made to protect an expanding list of grape varieties including Prosecco, Montepulciano, Fiano, Barbera, Nero d'Avola, Alicante, Dolcetto, and others as GIs. All of these varieties are grown across Australia's 65 wine regions. The EU is exporting a protectionist agenda out of step with Australia's longstanding commitment to rules based international trade. If the EU is willing to ban French producers from using the grape-variety name "Vermentino" (as happened in 2022) imagine how willing they would be to trample on the rights of Australia's grape growers and winemakers. Australia's Prosecco crush has increased 603% since 2015 (15,397 tonnes in 2022). Australian Prosecco is grown in 20 Wine regions across Australia. Prosecco is the 8th most produced white grape variety in Australia with 15,397 tonnes of grapes crushed in 2022.
