The EU GI name is used in Australia as the name of a grape variety, plant variety, or an animal breed.

Prosecco is frequently & commonly used to describe a grape variety eg in Jancis Robinson's various books pre 2009 (- noting that as quoted on her website "The main one of the several Veneto varieties called Prosecco responsible for the popular eponymous fizz was expediently renamed Glera in 2009 so that the name Prosecco could be registered as a region and could therefore be used only for wines produced within it." That is, the grape was conveniently and one could say maliciously renamed to create the pretense that prosecco is not a the grape variety. Similarly Winecompanion notes that the grape was renamed glera. If renaming a variety to permit a regional GI is permissible, should HeathcoteGI be renamed Shiraz or Syrah to prevent anyone else using shiraz?
