

I believe importation of sturgeon would be beneficial to Australia as it would open up a whole new industry and if any disaster hit Europe and wiped out the stocks there we would be able to replenish Europe from here . A proper inland fish farm would guarantee that the stock would be sufficiently isolated to ensure no release of disease . A farm set up with a green out flow threw a contained set of green weeded water channels would also eliminate any damage to underground water from the farm water