To Whom It May Concern,

My community burned on Black Saturday. As I recovered I saw the cost to my community caused by bushfire. Since then fires have become more intense, frequent and dangerous. Floods are also increasing in frequency and severity. More and more people are suffering the effects of the climate emergency.

We must act urgently on climate. The sooner we put into place our actions, the more chance we have of keeping human suffering and environmental havoc to a minimum.

Renewables are important in this context. This technology is available and effective at reducing carbon emissions. Transmission lines and renewable power generation are essential public infrastructure and must be prioritised as part of our response to the climate emergency.

Doing this right will lead to many potential benefits. Our environment will be cleaner as our emissions fall and the hosting of transmission lines benefits farmers.

Inaction risks our children's future. We must act now to avoid a climate catastrophe. What are you doing to save the world?
