

Submitted by: Anonymous

Comment

For us the rule changes are an expensive and unnecessary impost. 95% of the C2 course content is irrelevant to our operations. The other 5% is just common sense that we have been employing for decades. The fact that it is a 5 day full tile course is destructive to our very busy schedule.

Also the courses are booked out for many months. Those clients that insist on early adoption we just won't quote their jobs - they will find it very difficult to get quotes because the industry is so busy. We will need to review our pricing to cover the cost of the eventual significant costs of implementation. All this to fund a safety industry who have no practical idea of what we do on site.